less and can do nothing without the help of council. We cannot put this matter up to council too strongly, think for not only the present health and comfort of the school children depend upon an adjustment, but so does the future citizenship of the city. A committee should go into this matter thoroughly and present the situation to council exactly as it exists, and ask for an adequate appropriation to enlarge our school facilities to meet present and future demands of the growth of the city. Following such statements of conditions as these, there was a general discussion as to what remedies could be devised. It was suggested that bonds be issued to cover the necessary improvements, and again that a special tax be levied, or that a part of the city's funds be laid aside for this purpose, all of which suggestions met disapproval from one quarter or another. Thinks Conditions Exaggerated. It was during this discussion of remedies that Mr. Key rose to state that, he believed conditions had been exaggerated. "Conditions," he said, "are not as bad as they have been painted, and I believe that this agitation is going to do the schools more harm than good. I do not know who is responsible for starting this talk. A bond issue is not necessary to remedy the situation that is said to exist, and I do not believe that the people will give the board of education power to levy a special tax."

Mrs. John D. Pickett, chairman of the board of lady visitors, made the report of that board, and at that time stated that she realized that school conditions were bad and should be remedied. In reply to Mr. Key, she said that she did not know who had started the movement for an improvement in school conditions, but that she would feel honored to have been the originator of the movement. Warden Returns From Indianapolis and Declares He Will Start Thorough Investigation.

Blue Ridge, Ga., October 23.—(Special.)—The jury in the case of the state v. John Wright, charged with the murder of the infant of Moultry Hughes, this afternoon returned a verdict of "guilty, without any recommendation." The jury deliberated twenty-four hours before reaching a verdict. The judge has not yet passed sentence. Counsel for Wright state that a motion for a new trial will be made. The murder of which Wright stands convicted was one of the most brutal in the annals of Georgia crime. Witnesses testified that after slaying Moultry Hughes at the door of his home, Wright struggled with the wife, who ran up in an effort to rescue her husband, and then deliberately smashed the skull of the 2-year-old little girl that the woman carried in her arms. Mrs. Hester Hughes, the wife of the murdered man, testified that on the night of the murder about 9 o'clock she was awakened by a noise and found that the door of their home was burst open and that someone from the outside called to her husband, saying, "Moultry, come outside, one of your old friends wants to see you," and that Hughes put on his clothes and went just outside the door, whereupon he was shot down and that when he moaned they then said that if he were not dead they would come back and finish him with their heels, and that she got the fire shovel and tried to defend him, whereupon Wright turned upon her with a stick, striking her across the head and then across the arm, breaking it and crushing the skull of her little child, which she held in her arms.

WRIGHT IS FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

Declaring that the charges made against him were the result of efforts on the part of guards and other employees to discredit him for political reasons, Warden William H. Moyer yesterday, on his return from the meeting of the American Prison association in Indianapolis, issued a statement answering the charges brought against the Federal prison.

Warden Moyer stated that he would welcome any investigation that might be made of the condition of the prison, and that he felt sure that the more publicity given the prison and its methods the more friends it would have. Congressman William Schley Howard Thursday asserted his intention to carry the matter to congress for an investigation, and ascertain, once and for all, the truth or falsity of the charges. "This is necessary," said Congressman Howard, "in justice to the warden, if they are untrue, and in justice to the prisoners, if they are true. Whatever the conditions at the prison, congress has a right to know them."

Moyer's Statement. The annual meeting of the American Prison association at Indianapolis was one of the largest and best that I ever attended and I am glad that I was able to go, but I was disappointed to be at home. Of course, I greatly regret the unpleasant occurrences at the prison while I was gone, but so far as I can learn my subordinates handled the situation admirably. My friends and prisoners, who made the sensational charges, should not be too severely censured, because, as I have been informed and believe, they were only doing what they probably promised to do at the time of their appointment and disgruntled and unprincipled guards and have been trying to break down my administration and destroy my discipline in order to make vacancies for themselves and their friends. It is their good fortune that they are not now facing a far more serious charge than insubordination, that of trying to incite the prisoners to mutiny, but they will find these charges serious before the matter is ended. I greatly appreciate the many telegrams of confidence I received, and the many letters which I know were written in my behalf, and I want to assure my friends that I have done, and will do nothing to make them regret their expressions of confidence in me and in my methods. To Make Thorough Investigation. Warden Moyer stated to a Constitution reporter yesterday morning that he will make no further statement until he has thoroughly investigated the charges and conferred with his assistants at the prison. A general denial of all the charges would, of course, be of little value at the present time, and until I have thoroughly investigated the charges, I wish to assure my friends and the friends of the institution that there is nothing which would make me want to have an investigation on the contrary, I have invited the fullest investigation. I believe, however, it is not the intent of the department to make these charges the basis of an investigation. As soon as I have ascertained who are responsible for the disturbances among the prisoners, I shall take prompt and effective action. I have nothing to cover up, and I am sure that the more that is known the methods of the prison the more it will be improved. I greatly appreciate the attitude of absolute fairness which The Constitution has maintained throughout this unfortunate affair.

Physical Regeneration

Did you ever think that city officials can materially lower the death rate of their towns if they would do it? So long as disease has a wide-open chance at your town neither you nor your neighbor is safe. And, if you can prevent it, you are criminally negligent not to try. Has your town a sewerage system? Is the lighting adequate? Is the paving first-class? Somebody says it is wiser to spend time arousing town officials to do their duty than to spend it comforting the bereaved mothers whose little children are taken from them because of unsanitary conditions in the town. We think so, too. That's why we are talking to you after this fashion. We are Municipal Engineers with a record of more than 400 contracts carried out successfully without a break. The J. B. FISHER INDICTED AS DALTON SLAYER Dalton, Ga., October 23.—(Special.)—Ira Fisher, star witness in the Frank case, whose accusation against J. C. Shirley, has fallen to the ground, was indicted today by the grand jury of this county for the murder of Douglas Steele. The death of Steele occurred several years ago, and at that time some suspicion was directed at Fisher, but the verdict of the coroner's jury was that the deceased was killed by being run over by a train on the Southern railway, and the railway company paid a small amount to the relatives of Steele. Fisher married a sister of Steele. The night before the body of Steele was found Fisher was heard to make threats against Steele. Oscar Ashworth, who was with the parties the night before the alleged homicide, says: "Ira Fisher is the man who killed Doug Steele. I was standing in the center of the street near the pool on the corner of Hamilton and Washington streets and he said to me: 'You I will get even with you, I will kill you tonight. You think you are safe because you have a new suit of clothes. They would not let me go with them. Dug said that he could take care of himself. I did not see Fisher kill Dug, but I feel sure he did. Ira told me after Steele was found that if I ever told about the fuss I heard he would kill me and that is the reason I have never told it before.' The testimony of Ashworth is corroborated by other witnesses who heard Fisher make threats against Steele. The body of Steele was found on the railroad track early in the morning, with the head completely severed, and other marks of violence upon the body. Suspicion was aroused at the time of the finding of Steele on account of the fact that there was no blood where the body was found, and the doctor examining the body stated that Steele was dead when placed upon the track. Fisher's acts at that time and shortly afterwards confirmed the suspicions of many as to his guilt, but the matter was dropped and never investigated by the relatives of the deceased, which was possibly due to the fact that Fisher had married into the family. However, recently the family determined to have the matter investigated. In this determination was intensified by developments in Atlanta. In the attitude of the accused man in a murder case. People here who know Fisher say that he has never been the same since the death of Steele, and that either the death of Steele or something else weighs heavily upon his mind. Oscar Thomson, who left tonight to bring Fisher here to answer to the charge against him.
