What Color Suits You? Read These Helpful Hints from Beautiful Alexandra Carlisle

By MAUDE MILLER.

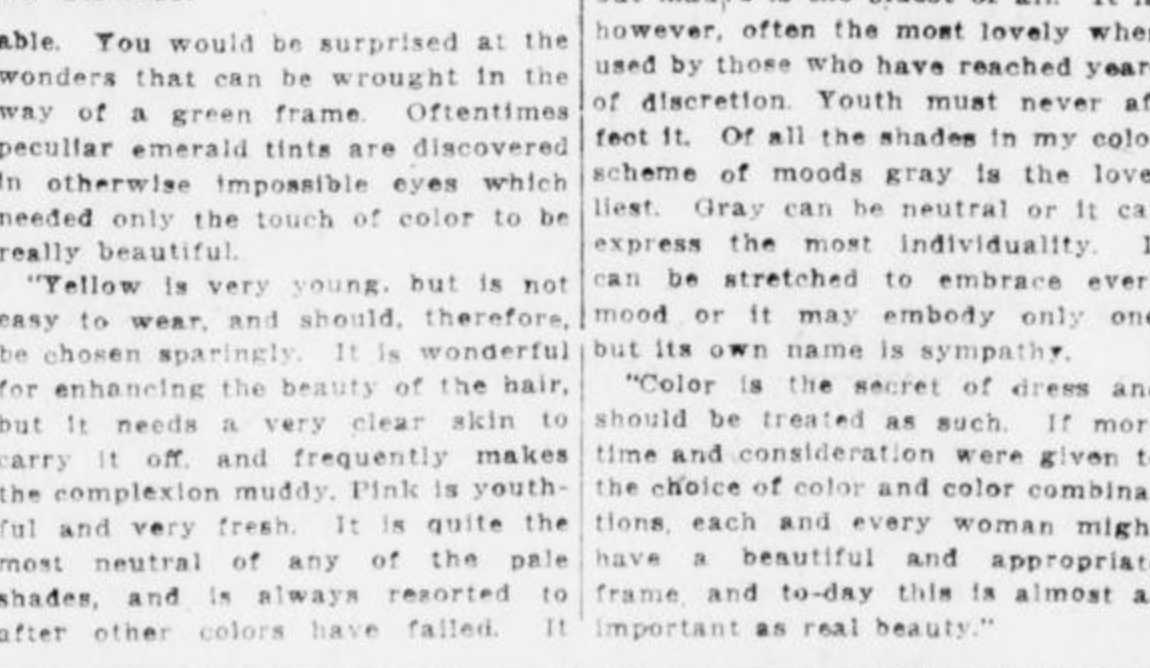

"BEAUTY is a gift from Heaven. It cannot be bargained for, and it is impossible to attain if it has not been bestowed upon you. And hence," says Miss Alexandra Carlisle, who is playing in "The Marriage Game," "why seek to attain the impossible? However, don't despair, you who have not beauty, for although you may not alter your features you may weave around yourself a beautiful frame. This but enhances the charm of the beautiful, and to the plain this is, indeed, a gift from Heaven."

"After you have done all that you can for yourself in the way of fresh air, plenty of sun and good plain food, after deep breathing has become a habit and you have banished superfluous fat with a few good exercises, such as swimming or the practice of its movements, you may begin to plan your frame. This must be chosen in keeping with your moods, and in case you have not already the secret of a beautiful frame I will tell you. It is color."

"Colors are young and old, and are, besides, very expressive. Everything lies in the feel of the color after you have selected it and have it on. Each color is expressive of some mood, and so it is important to select some color that can be depended upon, a color that will so express the combined different moods of which you are capable that you cannot possibly tire of it."

WHITE THE YOUNGEST. "So that the color that you will probably choose for your mainstay will of necessity be of a neutral tint, and from that you can branch out into any of the queer but delicious shades that will bring out unexpected good points in your make-up."

BLUE IS COLD. "Blue is cold, very cold, but is useful to the person with gray-blue eyes if worn near the face. Navy blue is the most neutral of all colors. It never enhances defects and makes the plainest person seem attractive."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T SAY THAT. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a young girl and I met a young man two or three years my senior who thinks the world of me. All last summer he has been taking me out, and called on me two or three times each week while at my summer home. On my return, through a misunderstanding on both our parts, we parted. I am now very anxious to make up with him, whether in the wrong or right. Would you advise me to make the advance and speak to him, or wait until he speaks to me first?

BEFORE TEN. Dear Miss Fairfax: Would like to know the proper time for a young girl 18 years of age to come home when taking a walk with a young man in the evening. C. A. G. I think she should be home before 10 o'clock, and never remain later unless at some place of amusement.

DON'T DO IT. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am a young man of 17 and I am keeping company with a girl twenty months my junior. She has a girl friend and her birthday is a few days before mine. I would like to know if it is proper for me to give her a birthday present. G. T. H.

GIVE BACK HIS RING. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a young lady 21 years old. In the past nine months I have been keeping company with four different gentlemen, and this is the fifth, and I care for him as much as for the first. He has asked me to marry him. He also has given me a ring. Kindly advise me what steps to take. ANXIOUS. You have been scattering your affections so widely that you are not in position to know what love really means. My dear, it is not a pastime. Give back his ring, and in future refuse to keep company with five different men in nine months.

YOU MUST FORGET HIM. DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am a young lady and 19, and I am deeply in love with my cousin, who at one time told me that he loved me. I do not seem to be able to forget him. I have written him occasionally, but receive no replies, and I am sure that he goes with other girls. BROKEN HEARTED. A marriage between first cousins is never desirable and in some States it is legally barred. Forget him, my dear. Believe me, you will regret it if anything as serious as marriage ever resulted from such an affair.

Guernsey's Foot and Feat Should Make Some Other Subs Contented With Their Lot

GEORGIAN SPORTS COVERED BY EXPERTS

INNIS BROWN PICKS AUBURN; MARGIN CLOSE

Famous Official Figures Taames Nearly Even—Says One Weak Play May Win Title.

By Innis Brown. (Famous Football Official.) FOR the first time in almost a score of years the football championship of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association is going to be fought out on Atlanta soil. Likewise for the first time in many years the Red and Black of old Georgia will engage the Orange and Blue of old Auburn, with both teams having a clean record against association teams.

Not even excepting the great Tech-Georgia battle, this is to be the real football card of the local season. The Tech-Georgia game is always a classic, but the result of this year's contest, which has left Georgia unbeaten by an association team, has made possible a local battle which will decide definitely the Southern championship.

Think ye not that the situation is escaping the attention of local bugs. Practically every man, woman and child who knows the difference between a punt and a wild pig to first discuss the game, and laboriously weighing the chances of the two teams.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that Auburn has the edge. Some will argue that the Plainsmen have a more consistent attack, while others, pointing to the result of the Vanderbilt game, hold that the four battering rams in that Auburn backfield are bound to beat down the Georgia defense.

ALL appear to feel that the game is going to be fought out along the lines of straight old-fashioned football, in which the line plunges must be an important factor. There can be little doubt but that this play will figure strongly in the outcome. Judging from past performance, Auburn appears to have the advantage along this line. This is true not because Georgia is weak at the plunging game, but because Auburn is especially strong.

Take a look at the Tech and Vanderbilt games. With Red Harris leading off in the plunging role, the Auburnites plugged through the Jackets' line until their defense was driven to meet the attack, and then Newell was shot around end for the first touchdown. Later Hart took up where Harris left off, and he tore through the Tech line for an 80-yard run for the second touchdown.

Over in Birmingham Harris again took up the burden. He smeared the Vanderbilt line-up for substantial gains, making the line plunging possible. After he had begun to lose his effectiveness Hart was called in, then Christopher and finally Bidez. There is no denying the fact that the Auburnites have a terrible line at task. They also have power in flanking the tackles, owing to the swift elusive dashes of Newell at half.

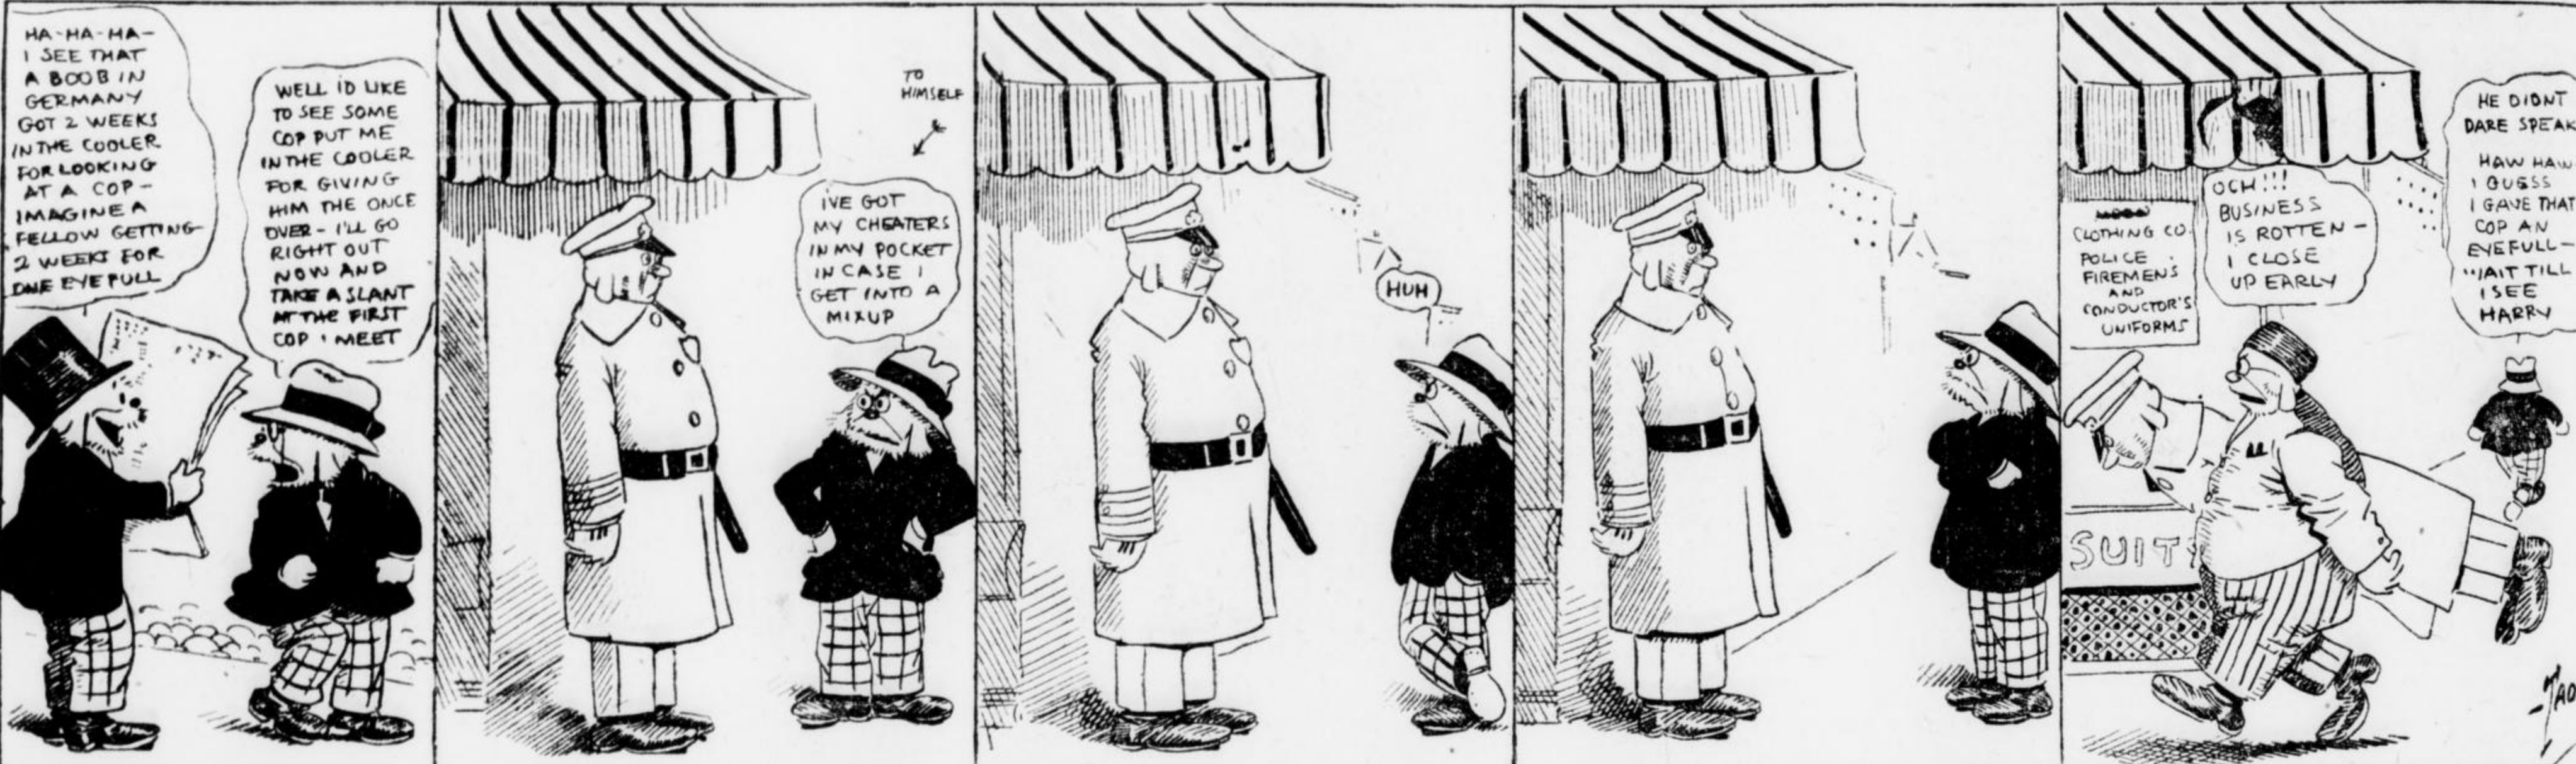

HOWEVER, Auburn is not entering the game with any great big advantage of the line smashing game. Up until Saturday Powell was held as Georgia's one best bet at hitting the line. But in the game the Red and Black introduced a new factor in Crump. The latter has been worked for the most part at end. However, he stepped into the fullback position and delivered the goods in great style.

Now is Powell as good as he was figured earlier in the season, before he had been handicapped by injuries, he and Crump should furnish lots of trouble for the Auburn forwards. Also, the Georgians can call into service in this style of attack Malone, who holds Kearley's place. Malone has probably more physical power than either of the other men on the two teams who may be asked to hammer the line, and he is going to gain some ground.

When it comes to the backfield, Georgia has the edge, if there is an advantage either way. We still hold that Bob McWhorter is the best in this section, not forgetting the sterling worth of Kirk Newell. Both of these are dangerous men, and both will be watched very closely by the opposition. Either may get away for one run which may win the game.

In addition to McWhorter, the Georgians have Paddock. The Red and Black quarter was one of the most valuable men on the Georgia squad in the game against Tech, and it is not unlikely that he will cause Auburn trouble also. Auburn can offer Hart, Arnold or Jeffery. Both Arnold and Kearley are likely to start the game at quarter and half respectively, with Hart held in reserve. Both Arnold and Hart are very fast, and both have figured strongly in the past Tech in past years. It will be recalled that Hart raced 80 yards for a touchdown this year, while Arnold is the young man who intercepted a forward pass by Tech on the length of the field for a touchdown a few seasons ago.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

HARVARD WINS TITLE IF TEAM DEFEATS VALE

At Least Experts Will Declare Them Champs—Situation Is as Clear as Mud.

By Damon Runyon. CARLISLE overwhelmed Dartmouth, which scored a touchdown against Princeton, and Princeton held Harvard to a single field goal.

Yale tied with Princeton, after losing to Colgate, and moreover outplayed the Jersey juggernauts most of the way, if we accept the expert testimony on the subject.

Washington and Jefferson held Yale to a scoreless tie, and Washington and Jefferson defeated the University of Pittsburgh, which holds a decision over Carlisle.

Therefore, the football situation with reference to the championship is just as clear as mud. Up to this writing the title belongs to Harvard, which has not played Carlisle, Dartmouth, Colgate nor Washington and Jefferson, and which will in no case play any of the said colleges, because there is reason to believe that the football players at those institutions are rude, uncouth and manipulative shaggy persons, who might manifest a disposition to deprive Harvard of her hardly won laurels.

Harvard Claims Title. The title belongs to Harvard, unless Harvard is defeated by Yale next Saturday, which is a thought that can scarcely be tolerated in the best circles at Cambridge. Should Yale win from Harvard, the championship goes to Yale by unanimous consent of Yale, just as Jack Johnson's title was turned to somebody, whose name escapes the memory at the moment, by the vote of the International Boxing League without a dissenting voice in said league.

Titles are easy enough to settle, if the right people do the settling.

Of course, if Harvard defeats Yale and the title remains in Cambridge, and no one can say that it will not be properly cared for and cherished there. No one can say that it will not be kept in, out of the dew and damp and fondly sheltered from the slings and arrows, and forward passes, and other low, debased assaults from the outrageous Carlisle or Dartmouth or Colgate, or Pittsburgh, or Washington and Jefferson. If any one does say that they manifestly have scant appreciation of the capacity at Harvard for caring for a football title.

Impossible to Play All. Understand, we do not intimate that Harvard should expose itself to any of the above-named institutions. In fact, we claim just the reverse. In the first place, it would be a physical impossibility for Harvard to meet all of the teams mentioned, because the Cambridge football players must have some time to get ready for the hockey and basketball and baseball seasons and to do a little studying here and there, and in the second place, they would like to be given a chance. This is one of the best teams Emory has ever sent out in a good many years.

Who knows but that a football Frank Baker may hob up and win the game for his team with one brilliant play?

Bill Dahlen Was Famous Player Started Career Under Cap Anson

By Sam Crane. WITH the retirement of Bill Dahlen from the management of the Brooklyn team big league baseball loses one of its most famous veterans, and one who was contemporary with the most noted players of the last generation.

Dahlen was brought out in 1891 by Captain Anson, who secured him from the Cobleskill (New York) Club, of the New York State League. In the fall of 1890, and put him on the regular line-up of the Chicago White Stockings the next spring.

Bill did not require another year's seasoning with any minor league club when he joined the White Stockings, and he was the big league star when Anson secured him and he made good with a rush from the start and filled into the shortstop position made vacant by the death of "Big Ed" Williams, and the Giants were then, for the first time, instead of a youngster who had never seen a National League game in his life.

Bill became a Joshier. Anson was tipped off to the prospective value of the up-State youth and never regretted getting his name to a contract, except possibly when Bill, as soon as he outgrew the hayseed stage, developed his kidding propensities that have since made him one of the foremost characters of the diamond.

Anson was not much of a fielder in those days—but how could he while the ball? First basemen in those days were not expected to cover much more ground than they could be buried in, and Anson was no worse than the rest—but he was particularly weak on low-thrown balls and didn't like them.

It was, therefore, Bill's delight, as it was of other Chicago infielders, while at practice, to endeavor to hit Anson on his shins. This would frequently happen, and then there was a hot time for all hands. Once, during morning practice, Dahlen succeeded in hitting Anson on the same shin twice in succession. The old Cap, sore in mind and shin, chased Bill around the Chicago West Side Park on Harrison street, with a baseball bat for a full half hour, vowing vengeance. Bill finally was obliged to skin over the back fence to escape his irate manager.

Bill didn't show up that afternoon, either—he went to the races instead, accepting a fine rather than face the angry Cap.

Joined Giants in 1905. Dahlen was secured for the Giants by McGraw from Brooklyn in a trade that included Charley Hall and a big money bonus, and Bill became a Giant in 1905. It was largely through

SPORTING COMMENT

By Ed W. Smith.

SP EAKING of famous left hands, we were reminded sharply the other night that we had forgotten to mention one of the greatest that ever flashed in the boxing arena, that possessed by Dal Hawkins, the sensational California lightweight who flourished back in the old days of the late '30s.

INSTANTLY the name Hawkins is mentioned one's mind goes back to that famous day in 1937 at Carson City, Nev., when Bob Fitzsimmons laid low the mighty Corbett with a solar plexus blow, and especially to those who were at the ringside that chilly St. Patrick's Day.

THE late Malachy Hogan, one of the best referees known to the game at the time, was referee of the preliminary, and George Siler, also of this city and who also has passed away, acted in the big battle.

THESE battles made it look as if he were ripe for the prime old killing with the real champion, and Dal went East to shake down some of the pippins out of the lightweight tree.

AND speaking of quick victories in the roped arena, call to mind the fact that Malachy Ho-

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 29.—Cunningham and his championship-tending eleven put in a busy afternoon yesterday trying out new plays and getting the changes in the line-up oiled to easy running order.

With the climax of the Red and Black's season reached last Saturday, and after conceding Auburn the greatest team of her history, the McWhorterites realize that the edge is leveled on the Alabama side.

IF Georgia's forwards were equal to those of the enemy's—but it is a sad fact to the Red and Black that they are not—Georgia would have more than an even break in the backfield with McWhorter, Padlock, Powell and Crump in the first line-up and Carey, Broyles, Thompson, Silberry, Flournoy and Dorsey in reserve.

IT may be true that the Athenians have discounted the work of Captain Newell, but this lad failed to show anything in the Georgia-Auburn game last year and was completely outclassed by the brilliant playing of both McWhorter and Bowden.

CUNNINGHAM will make no changes in his line-up other than announced the first of the week, which will put Crump at half, Powell at full, Conyers at guard and Logan at end.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 29.—Gus Christie, of Milwaukee, outpointed Knockout Brown, of Chicago, in a six-round bout at the Marion Club, last night. The fight was tame.

VELLE WINS BOUT. BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Freddie Velle was given the decision over Mike Masie in their fifteen-round bout at Marienville, R. I., last night.

Why Should the Taxpayers Use Their Money to Reward Friends of Presidents?

And Why Should the United States Send Snobs Abroad to Amuse Themselves at Public Expense and Play the Toady? The Pindell Case Ought To Be a Useful Lesson.

The people of the country know that sending Ambassadors to foreign countries is nonsense and out of date.

The Ambassador is a messenger boy who takes a cablegram from his government to the representatives of the other government.

Our Embassies are maintained in order that candidates for the Presidency MAY OBLIGE THEIR FRIENDS, REPAY POLITICAL FAVORS, OR SHOW APPRECIATION OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

This particular administration, we say it with regret, has been particularly and unusually guilty in the matter of using public foreign posts and public taxes to reward friends and financial backers of the President.

The case of Mr. Page, sent to London because he happened to be the President's publisher, the man who distributes his books, was bad.

And Mr. Page's statement that the United States "is still English ruled and English led" was about the maximum of animosity.

The sending of one man to Vienna, for no reason in the world except that he is married to a very rich woman and made a large contribution to the Wilson campaign fund, was outrageous.

But the worst of all these various transactions was the Pindell case, concerning which the public has been enlightened by a letter written to Mr. Pindell, offering him the Ambassadorship WITH A STRING ATTACHED TO IT.

We presume that most of our readers have seen that extremely interesting letter written by Senator Lewis, of Illinois, and telling Mr. Pindell upon what terms Mr. Wilson would make Pindell Ambassador to Russia.

Pindell was told emphatically, first of all, THAT HE MUST REMAIN AMBASSADOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

In other words, he would receive the appointment with a string to it. After one year he would be pulled home and then, presumably, some other friend of the Administration, some other original Wilson man, or some other man with a rich wife who could give money to the Wilson campaign would be sent over also to bask in the glory of foreign Ambassadorship.

The letter that Senator Lewis wrote, trivial, amusing, childish and foolish, made perfectly clear the status of the men whom we send to represent this republic at foreign shores.

Pindell was to meet "aristocrats," he was even to shake hands with the Czar—if the Czar shakes hands.

His daughter was to go into society. He was to HAVE ABSOLUTELY NO WORK TO DO; that was guaranteed in the letter that the Senator sent to him.

At the end of the year he was to come back, having been Ambassador to Russia, and then, as the provincial Senator put it, his descendants of the third and fourth generations would brag about having an Ambassador in their ancestry.

Is this not the height of absurdity, unworthy of an intelligent country, criminal spending of the public funds, and a very shameful misuse of power by the President and by his Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan? Neither of them has attempted to deny the Pindell letter.

This is a BUSINESS country, its inhabitants are business men, and what we need abroad is FIRST-CLASS BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVES.

The Ambassadorships should be eliminated; the entire stupid system of sending a cable to be handed to a foreign Minister of State by some snob whom we maintain at court should be wiped out.

Our consular service should be improved; trained men should enter the service and be kept there as long as they do their duty properly.

This business country should be represented by business consuls.

And we should allow Mr. Pindell and Mr. Page and the other collection of gentlemen who want to go abroad and shake hands with aristocrats to do that thing at their own expense, and not at the public expense.

The New Senator From Alabama

Governor O'Neal, of Alabama, evidently believes he has full and complete authority to appoint a United States Senator to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Johnston, and in naming Editor Frank P. Glass, of Birmingham, the Governor has selected a virile man for the position.

A seat in the Senate of the United States would afford Mr. Glass opportunity to accomplish a great work for the South. He knows the land of Dixie well. He has stood for high ideals in journalism, and while more or less untried in constructive statesmanship, he ought to have in him, nevertheless, the making of an effective and able Senator.

The South stands for progress. It believes in a sane tariff law, in a stable currency, in an ample navy, and in square dealing between the government and the people.

If Mr. Glass, as a Senator in Congress, urged these matters upon the attention of the nation, from the true viewpoint of the South—which is yet largely a sealed book to a great part of this country—he would render his country a genuine service.

If Mr. Glass is seated in the Senate, Dixie will expect to hear from him, for the opportunity is large for a great man to do great work.

Writes on Petty Dishonesty

Some Forms Are So Frequent as To Be Almost Respectable, Such as Loose Promise Making.

By REV. DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST.

THE line of honesty is an exceedingly straight one. It sometimes gets badly crooked in the use, but is by nature rectilinear and is the shortest path between duty and performance.

There is no halfway between straight and crooked, and if we do not begin by being dishonest in a small thing there is no danger of our graduating into a large-scale deceiver or swindler.

All of that is very simple and old-fashioned.

Much is said about the new morality, the new thought, the new art, the new religion, and so forth, but the old is pretty good. It has stood the racket for a good while, and we had better stand by it and not fling ourselves away on fancy innovations till we are quite sure that they will make as good a show in the working as what we received from our fathers and grandfathers.

There are forms of inconspicuous dishonesty worth mention, which are so frequent as to be almost respectable, but which loosen the joints of character and occasion no end of annoyance and some times even distress.

One is that of engaging to do a given thing at a specific time and then failing to do it at the time promised, and postponing it to a later hour or day, or even not doing it at all.

When a promise of that kind is made conditionally, with no positive assurance attached to it, and with only the understanding on the part of the one making it that he will do his best to meet the wishes of the party with whom he is dealing, then no fault can be found if expectations are disappointed. But those are not the terms in which engagements are usually made.

You make a contract with your tailor. He says, "I will deliver the article on or before such a day." No conditions attached. No indefiniteness in the terms of the engagement. Very likely he does not know whether he will be able to keep the engagement or not but that in most cases makes no difference with the terms in which the stipulation is made.

He wants the job and hangs you up till he gets along far enough with someone's else job to make sure of that in addition to what he is doing for you.

We can perfectly well understand how it all comes about, but there is just crook enough in it to prevent its being straight. For tailor you can substitute grocer or painter or plumber, or almost any service of that character.

It is not what can exactly be called an outrageous lie, but it has got the genius of lie in it.

It is a careless handling of the truth. If it is not a deliberate intention to deceive, it is a careless indifference as to whether or not deception is going to be the result.

This loose habit of making definite promises that are uncertain of fulfillment can easily be broken up by saying to your plumber, for instance:

"You have definitely promised to come and do the job at such a time. Now, having made this definite promise, if you do not come at that time I shall be displeased and shall give my next job to another plumber. That will both brace up his integrity and secure prompt service."

Comment on Frank Case

The following letter, apropos of The Georgian's editorial on Judge Roan's decision in the Frank case, which has aroused nation-wide comment, is from Simon Wolf, Minister to Egypt under President Grant, and one of the most prominent lawyers and philanthropists in America. Mr. Wolf is president of the local Atlanta Hebrew Orphans' Home and well known in the South, where he is extensively interested in charitable work. Here is the letter:

Simon Wolf, Minister to Egypt, Washington, D. C., November 13, 1914.

Editor The Georgian: I have read with a great deal of pleasure, and no less interest, your admirable editorial on the Leo M. Frank case, wherein you review the remarkable statement by Judge Roan in denying a new trial. I have read the reports as far as they were printed in the various newspapers of the country, notably those of Atlanta, and have heretofore refrained from making any comments or criticism of the conduct of any one, deeming it an intrusion possibly to prejudice any one while the case was pending in court. Now that the whole matter will be referred to the Supreme Court of your State, and that the bill of exceptions has been signed incorporating the remarkable statement of Judge Roan, I deem it my duty as a citizen of the United States, and one who is not unknown to the good people of Atlanta, to say that your editorial reflects the sober second thought of every loyal citizen of the country. It is calm, dignified, judicial and manly, and should be heeded by those who believe in law and order. The only safety the individual can have, no matter what his nationality or creed or color, is to be treated fairly and squarely, and to allow no prejudice to interfere with the decent administration of law. From time immemorial it has been conceded as an axiom that all reasonable doubt must be given to the accused when charged with murder, and in the case of Frank there can no longer be any question but that that reasonable doubt was denied him, and that the spirit that pervaded the courtroom during the trial was anything but orderly or civilized. It goes without saying that I take the same view that you do. It is not the individual after all that is on trial—it's American citizenship, Christianity stripped of its sectarianism, and therefore it behooves every man and woman, no less, to co-operate in securing full justice for the prisoner at the bar, and if convicted beyond a doubt, full punishment should be meted out, but not otherwise. Again I sincerely thank you for the manly stand you have taken in this case. Very truly yours, SIMON WOLF.

Panama Fair Majestically Rising

By J. A. MUNROE.

KNOWING the constantly increasing interest of the public in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915, I recently visited the exposition grounds, which comprise an area of 635 acres, bordering upon the San Francisco Bay, at the entrance of the famous Golden Gate.

On the north this magnificent site fronts the water for over two miles, and on the south it rises in successive terraces like a great amphitheater. I can not imagine a more marvelous natural stage setting for stately world exhibitions than the greatest world exposition yet held.

Over 70 acres have been reclaimed from the tide water of the bay, buildings have been removed, miles of sewerage lines have been laid, a complete high pressure and low pressure water system has been installed throughout the grounds, the architects, designers and sculptors have been engaged for months, and commissioners have encircled the globe in the interest of the exposition, which has resulted in 35 States in the American Union declaring their intention to participate and likewise 27 nations.

Beyond the main exhibit palaces to the east there are 65 acres set apart for amusements of a varied and high-class character gathered from all parts of the world, and construction is progressing rapidly. To the west 87 acres are divided between the States of the nation and the nations of the world, where the first pavilion is already rising. Beyond this, vast areas are devoted to live stock exhibits, to aviation and international athletics.

The people of the State of California have appropriated an aggregate of over $20,000,000 to the world enterprise, and are offering the sites for State and national buildings free, and space for individual, State and national exhibits without cost beyond installation and maintenance.

terior on the heights or the bay, the design of the architecture is such that the great palaces will appear to be one colossal building of vast proportions.

The World as It Is

By WINIFRED BLACK.

MR. ROGER FINNAN was arrested for vagrancy in Chicago the other day. He told the judge that he had been a tramp for 20 years.

"No," said Mr. Finnan when the judge questioned him. "No, I don't like to tramp. I'd like to settle down somewhere, but I can't find a place on earth to suit me. It's too dry some places and too wet others. Some towns are too lively for a fellow like me and some are too dull. Some places cost too much and some are too cheap. I do wish I could find a place I like."

Poor, discouraged Mr. Finnan. What a mess he is in, to be sure. He carries his world around with him, and wherever he goes there it is—on his back—his miserable, disgruntled, restless, unhappy world; and he thinks he has found it along the railroad ties.

"Dear me," said a woman I know the other day, "I've promised my little girl to visit her school this week, and it does bore me so frightfully. I'm a perfect martyr to my children, anyway."

"Oh," said another woman I know, "I can hardly wait for Friday to come. I'm going up to school to hear Betsy speak a piece."

Now, the other woman finds that everything bores her but bridge and the theater and supper parties.

Now, the other woman finds that everything bores her but bridge and the theater and supper parties.

THE BEST LETTER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

You may write a thousand letters to the maiden you adore And declare in every letter that you love her more and more. You may praise her grace and beauty in a thousand glowing lines— And compare her eyes of azure with the brightest star that shines. If you had the pen of Byron you would use it every day In composing written worship to your sweetheart far away; But the letter far more welcome to an older, gentler breast Is the letter to your mother from the boy she loves the best.

STARS AND STRIPES

Russia's trouble is not so much "ritual murder" as habitual murder. So Mr. Pindell is to have the Ambassador's job until he gets tired of it. Old "Ultimatum" is back at work. Apparently Winston Churchill's idea of a "naval holiday" is to do a lot of extra shipbuilding. Huerta may be the works as a dictator, but it's nearly time he dictated his resignation. If opportunity would only kick in the door a lot of fellows about us would amount to something.
