50 STEWARDS TO BEAR BODY OF DR. ROBINS

Trinity's Pastor, Stricken at Elberton Conference, to Lie in State Tuesday.

Many members of the Scottish Rite bodies, including the Shriners and Knights Templars, met the Seaboard train at the Union Depot at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon to form an escort for the body of Dr. John Bradley Robins, pastor of Trinity Church, who was stricken fatally while preaching Sunday night in Elberton to 1,200 members of the North Georgia Conference of the Methodist church.

At 5 o'clock Monday morning the body was placed in the Seaboard train at the depot. The train was accompanied by representatives of the 50 stewards of Trinity Church who will be included in the procession. The body will be taken from the train to the church, where it will lie in state until the funeral, which will occur at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The Rev. A. W. Quinn, pastor of the Park Methodist Church, and Rabbi David Marx will officiate, assisted by the Rev. R. C. Cleveland, of Elberton, and W. P. King, of Milledgeville.

Attacked by Indigestion. Dr. Robins' death was due to acute indigestion. The end came at 9:45 o'clock, just an hour and a half from the time he began an eloquent sermon on "Jesus Christ, the Same Yesterday, To-day and Forever."

So far as the plans for the funeral have been made, the stewards of Trinity Church will bear the body of their pastor to the new church he had so much to build, where it will lie in state until the interment will be in Westview cemetery, where Mrs. Robins was buried some years ago.

Monday morning there was some doubt as to whether the funeral services would be held Tuesday morning or at a later date.

Escort of Honor Coming. Six months ago, when Dr. Robins passed through a dangerous illness, he requested that his funeral services be conducted by Dr. H. S. Bradley, former pastor of Trinity, and now pastor of a church in Worcester, Mass.

An escort of honor, composed of members of the conference, will accompany the three daughters of the dead pastor and their charge from Elberton, and probably will take part in the funeral services.

As a member of the North Georgia Conference for 32 years, Dr. Robins was highly respected for his ability as a leader, and his progressive work in every advancing movement was felt and recognized. At various times he was pastor of the First Methodist Church at Elberton; the First Methodist Church at Rome; the First Methodist Church and Trinity Church, of Atlanta.

Almost as soon as he began to speak Sunday night it was evident that he was suffering severely. Several times he was urged to desist by those near him on the rostrum, but he continued to speak, leaning heavily on the table before him, until he fainted and would have fallen but for friends who helped him to a seat and called for medical aid.

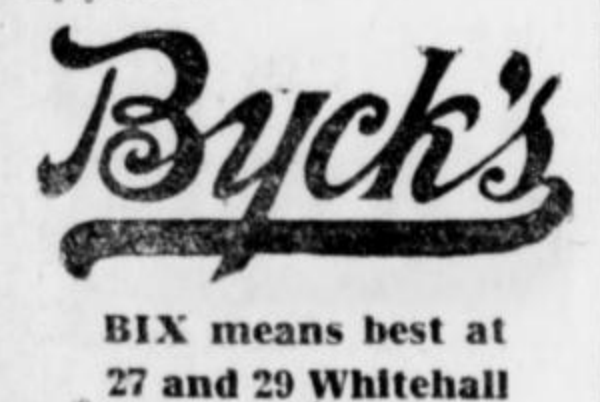

Dr. J. E. Johnson responded and a hypodermic injection revived the stricken minister sufficiently to allow him to be moved to the home of the Rev. R. C. Cleveland, next door. There he sank into a state of semi-consciousness, and soon afterward passed away, his bedside surrounded by his warmest friends and co-workers in the conference, including Bishop Collins Denny, Dr. J. W. Quillian, the Rev. M. S. Williams, Dr. W. R. Lovejoy, Dr. C. M. Ledbetter, H. Y. McCord and others.

The death of Dr. Robins develops a problem for the bishop and the cabinet of presiding elders in finding a successor as pastor of Trinity.

CURRENCY FIGHT IS OPENED IN SENATE

Debate to Go Over to January 5 After Advocates Outline Merits of Two Bills.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The Wilson administration was confronted to-day by the hardest battle that it has faced since it came into power when the fight over the currency measure was opened on the floor of the Senate.

Senator Owen, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, made an extended speech outlining the features of the administration draft of the measure as amended by the regular Democrats. Senator Hitchcock, insurgent Democrat, will follow Senator Owen in advocacy of the measure he framed with the help of five Republicans.

After these speeches have been made it is practically agreed that currency debate will go over to January 5.

Keep interest was manifested among Senators to-day as to the attitude that President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will take toward the provision for the insurance of deposits in the Hitchcock draft of the currency bill.

Until recent years Secretary Bryan was the foremost advocate of the guaranty of bank deposits.

To Prevent Hard Times. In opening the debate on the currency bill, Senator Owen said it is probably the most important legislation presented to the country since the Civil War. Senator Owen declared that the Democratic platform had originally declared:

"We oppose the Aldrich monetary plan or a central bank," but that the letter "F" had been inserted to make read: "We oppose the Aldrich monetary plan for a central bank." Much depends upon the letter "F" and how it came to creep into the platform.

The speaker argued for a bill to prevent hard times, saying that "he did not believe the panic of 1907 was accidental," but that it had been brought about to enrich a few men and rebuke the Administration.

McAdoo on Senate Floor. Secretary McAdoo appeared on the floor of the Senate in the opening of the debate. He said his appearance in the Senate should not be taken as an indication that he as a cabinet member, wished to interpolate from the floor.

In the gallery were Misses Eleanor and Margaret Wilson, daughters of the President.

Senator Borah introduced an amendment to the bill providing that the issues of asset currency shall be legal tender for all public and private debts. The "I" tender character of the note was criticized by representatives of steamship companies and business men of Yokohama and Tokio are spending several days here.

The Japanese say they are pleased with the prospects and that Japanese want more cotton and lumber from the United States and wants to sell more rice, tea and silks.

Just before this he had written a letter to his wife in Nashville explaining that he had no idea he would be home, adding: "I never see you again in this world. I want to meet you in Heaven Monday morning, less than 24 hours later. Meeks dropped dead of apoplexy in the Terminal Station while preparing to board a train. He was passing through Atlanta on his way from Nashville to Florida in the hope of benefiting his health, which had been declining for some time, and to his religious work.

Forced to Quit Throttle. Meeks was an engineer on the Western and Atlantic Railroad for many years, and was converted while pulling the throttle of his engine. When his health began to fail, he left the road and took up active religious work. With the motto, "Traveling for God," he fitted out a Gospel wagon, and in this had preached in the streets of Nashville for a long while. Meeks was an acquaintance of Dr. Lincoln McConnell, and Sunday morning went to the Tabernacle to worship. He enthusiastically taught a Sunday school class, and was invited by Dr. McConnell to address a few words to the congregation at the conclusion of the morning service. When the visitor arose, it was apparent that he was weak, and he referred to his falling health in tones of emotion. "I don't think I'll live much longer, but I want to die in harness—I'm giving for God, and want to keep on to the great work until the end," he said.

Well Known to Railroaders. He then mentioned, in a touching way, the letter he had sent to his wife, in which he said he told her that God had called him to Florida, and that he didn't know when he would see her again.

By reason of his long railroad experience Meeks was well known all along the road between Atlanta and Nashville, and was beloved by railroad men and all who knew him and his work. He wrote a number of Gospel pamphlets, which he distributed on his travels.

The body was removed to Patterson's undertaking parlors, and probably will be sent to Nashville.

Hyde Wedding Will Be a Quiet Affair

SPECIAL Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. PARIS, Nov. 24.—The wedding of J. Charity Dance to Aid the Empty Stocking Fund Will Be Gala Affair.

Society, coming to the aid of The Georgian-American Empty Stocking Fund, appears with an idea that will enable Atlantans—light-hearted devotees of Terpsichore and otherwise—to kill two birds with one stone. The idea developed is this: There is going to be a Tango Tea in the ball room of the Piedmont Hotel at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon of December 1—and YOU are invited. No excuse accepted—just write it in red ink in YOUR date book and be prepared to come.

The stone? A $1 bill or silver, your Empty Stocking Tax.

The birds? Well, most likely you are one of those who tango, and if you do not, surely you two-step or one-step or waltz, and if it happens that your education does not include a terpsichorean course of study, it stands to reason as they say in Missouri that you like to sit around and drink tea, and be sociable, and watch other people trip the light fantastic and some that is, not so light. You can do any of those things at the Tango Tea at the Piedmont.

All for the Kiddies. That's one bird—a fine specimen of the "good time" species. With the stone—a $1 bill—you can knock him down and take him home with you.

The other bird you'll kill will be the knowledge that YOU did not bring Christmas cheer to any kiddie, and that you did not do anything to avert the tragedy of the Empty Stocking in at least one home.

For the Tango Tea is all for the kiddies—for the little tots who will wake on Christmas morning to the most gripping sorrow of childhood, unless The Georgian-American Empty Stocking Fund attains sufficient proportions to bring old Santa Claus down from the frozen north and give him an Atlanta directory. It's for the little girls who doing their utmost to keep their frocks clean, and for the little boys who have begun to wash their faces and scrub their hands till they shine—between intervals of writing to Santa Claus and wondering why mother has that sad look in her eyes when they ask her about Christmas and confide to her that they just MUST have a dolly or a red wagon.

Nobody else gets anything out of the affair—except the killing of the two birds. The Piedmont management has kindly donated the use of its ballroom; Joe Brown Connolly is going to take the time from his other affairs and be master of ceremonies and first aid to the tangoers; and scores of Atlanta society women have endorsed the idea and are working night and day for its success.

Ladies Who Are Helping. Just read over this list and you'll see who some of them are, and then you'll know that the thing's going to be done right: Mesdames Robert J. Lowry, J. G. The Tango Tea is not going to be such a serious and formal affair to the dancers or the lookers-on, but it's a mighty serious thing for the kids of Atlanta. The more people there are at the tea the more joy there will be in the hearts of Atlanta's poor children when old Santa Claus drops down the chimney and leaves the little dolly and the little red wagon.

So just drop in and have a good time—that's the motto of the tea—any time from 4:30 on. If you are a tired business man and don't want to dance, stop at the Piedmont on your way home and watch the others dance; drink some tea and be sociable, leave your Empty Stocking tax—and go home with a warm feeling in your heart and your mind filled with thoughts of the happiness that dollar you'll never miss will bring to some little boy or girl.

Army Men Invited. And if you're a young woman with a mortgage on no particular young man—come along, anyway. There'll be plenty of young men there, eager to dance with you and see you home. There'll be a lot of handsome young officers there from Fort McPherson, for Colonel Van Orsdale has asked them all to attend. And it is tradition that army officers dance divinely.

And don't forget! If you don't want to tango, you can two-step or one-step or waltz, and if you don't want to do either you can just put your head in at the door, drink a little tea and hurry away—leaving your dollar.

And don't forget also—it's for the poor little boys and girls.

upon a basis from which it never could be dislodged. The ministers were delighted with a movement which contemplated emphasizing the religious element in the civil life.

Dr. White Urges Baptists Join. Practically the entire Baptist ministry of Atlanta was represented at the meeting.

Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, in making the motion endorsing the project and setting December 14 as the tentative date, characterized the movement as most opportune.

"One of the fine features of the movement," he said, "is its timeliness. For many years the residents of Atlanta have been sailing under the colors of a church-going people.

"Now is the time for us to make a show-down for the benefit of those who may be doubting us. It is most opportune that we are given this chance to make a demonstration of our strength—not for the sensation that it may make, although I am not opposed to a sensation if it 'sensates' in the right direction—but that we ourselves as well as people throughout the State may be encouraged by the sight of the solid body of Christian warriors who are gathered together in the churches throughout the city.

Certain People Will Respond. "I know that the people will respond. Every one of the Baptist ministers here should agree to make every effort to fill his church to overflowing on the date which finally is selected. There should be an honest count at the doors—not a 'ministerial estimate.' The figures then

'CHURCH DAY' BENEFITS CAN NOT BE FORECAST, SAYS DR. BENNETT

"The Georgian has proposed a magnificent plan. The Go-to-Church Day will show up the real evangelical strength of Atlanta as it never has been done before.

"It also will result in a quickening of the spiritual life of the city and will have benefits that can not be enumerated or even guessed in advance.

"A 'Go-to-Church Day' will direct the attention of the city toward its own church life and it will direct the attention of the entire South toward the remarkable record that Atlanta has made.

"The tendency in the past, I believe, has been to stress too greatly the commercial advantages of Atlanta. This, I concede, has a place and a pre-eminent place in Atlanta's development, but I hold that it should not be stressed to the exclusion of the spiritual and religious opportunities that are offered."

to-Church Day" might act something as a galvanic shock to awaken both the pastors and the congregations.

"There are too many congregations sleeping in the pews and too many ministers sleeping in the pulpits," he remarked. "This 'Go-to-Church Day' will do them the most good. It will wake them from their lethargy and give them the aggressive spirit that is just as essential to the religious life as it is to the commercial life.

"Of course, Atlanta has many churches that are alive and fighting every minute of the time. They possibly will not benefit quite so much as the others because they already are near the maximum limit, but they will be encouraged and heartened in the fight and the day will be a good thing all around."

Rev. Mr. Sentell Impressed. The Rev. William M. Sentell, of the Gordon Street Baptist Church, who presided over the meeting, said that he believed that he could speak for the congregation of all the Baptist ministers and congregations in the city.

"The idea is a very new one to me," he said, "but it strikes me most favorably. I think that it is a great movement for a newspaper to undertake. It is a step forward and will emphasize the religious life of Atlanta as nothing else has done in years."

"It is indisputable that the 'Go-to-Church Day' will have certain lasting results. If you get a record number out on one Sunday some of those who have been in the habit of attending before will be back the next Sunday. If the 'Go-to-Church Sunday' is made a permanent institution and I hope it will be, its benefits can not be estimated. I think I can speak for the Baptists and say that they will be out in numbers on the date set."

"The 'Go-to-Church Day' is the most aggressive movement ever made in Atlanta by a newspaper," declared the Rev. A. C. Schuler, pastor of the East Side Tabernacle.

"Not only the churches, but the city as well, will be greatly benefited by the move, and every church and every man and woman in the city should look on it in this light.

"The Georgian suggests is going to make every church in the city crowded on the day of the rally, and a great many of the 'outsiders' attend on this day are going to become permanent attendants."

"I am going to do everything possible that will boost the Georgian's movement."

Rev. Mr. Cutts Delighted. The Rev. W. Lee Cutts, of the Inman Park Baptist Church, was most delighted with the plan. He said:

"I am heartily in favor of the movement and will co-operate with the Georgian in bringing out a crowd that will make a page in the history of Atlanta."

"There are thousands of people in our city who are not members of a church and who do not attend services on the day of worship."

the campaign for larger church attendance in earnest. Among those who sounded rally calls to their congregation Sunday were the Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church.

Dr. White Favors Plan. "I believe it is a good plan for all Christian people to indicate their loyalty in a manner like this," said Dr. White to his congregation Sunday.

"Besides forming a remarkable demonstration of the strength of the church and the hold that religion has upon the people of the land, it constitutes a stimulus that probably would be difficult to obtain in any other manner."

"Many churches by this means may be able to regain lost members—for every church has members who have drifted away for one cause or another. Every member to be gained should come on the firing line and show his colors. Atlanta has a reputation as a church-going city. She now has the opportunity to demonstrate this in a striking manner."

Thousands Religiously Adrift. "It is well known that there are several thousand persons religiously adrift in the city of Atlanta. They possibly have letters from churches in other parts of the State or have letters from one church to another right in the city of Atlanta. But for one reason or another they have fallen away from the habit of church attendance."

"This great rally I am sure will be a means of getting many of them back, as well as of interesting hundreds who never have concerned themselves much with church matters."

Here are opinions of other ministers who were seen Monday: The Rev. Jere A. Moore, of the Harris Street Presbyterian Church, said:

"I have read in the church papers of the remarkable records that have been made in a number of other cities that have tried this experiment and of the increased attendance and spiritual uplift that followed. I can see no reason why Atlanta should not do the same thing. We will be glad to co-operate. I commend the movement most heartily."

Sees Lasting Benefits. The Rev. Dunbar H. Ogden, of the Central Presbyterian Church, laid stress in his comment upon the lasting benefits that would result from an annual rally, or 'Go-to-Church Day.' "It will be in the nature of a gigantic rally," he remarked. "When the ministers and the laity find out what they can do when every effort is put forth, they will be surprised that they did not do it before."

"The natural consequence will be that those interested will not be satisfied with the attendance that preceded the rally, and the effects will endure through the year."

The Rev. S. H. Hall, of the Church of Christ, Christian, was equally enthusiastic. "I think it's fine," he said. "I would like to see it every Sunday, of course, to make our attendance the maximum, and I think that we probably get out nearly 5 per cent of our congregation, but this rally would give us an added incentive and would benefit us as well as the other churches. The Georgian is to be congratulated for inaugurating the movement."

Dr. G. L. Hanscom, of the Central Congregational Church, formulated plans for getting more action out of the increased attendance hold conference. It is a magnificent plan and no doubt will serve to increase the attendance of the churches in Atlanta.

"While a great majority of the people of Atlanta are regular in their attendance at church, like every other city, Atlanta has her population of people who never go to church, and these would be gathered into our church or other. The transient residents should be looked after and brought in also."

"I would like to congratulate the man who made the suggestion that was taken up by The Georgian," declared Dr. G. L. Hanscom.

Pastor's Poem to White House Bride

WASHINGTON, MASS., Nov. 24.—The Rev. W. J. Shaw, of Washington, has written the following poem, entitled, "A Wedding Bell," and dedicated it to Miss Wilson.

Dear daughter of our nation's chief, We send you now a message brief, And warm with light of love.

But how can we in language tell The music of a marriage bell? Clear chiming from above?

How firm its rhythmic notes of joy That fill the waiting lands? How beat its happy tones along, Sweet swelling like a surges' song.

And struck by stainless hands, True steel of mantles we see— White of spotless purity.

Love's never-changing gold, And faith and hope this mixture pure Will make a nuptial to endure.

When steadfast suns grow cold, And now to fix the fine alloy, Approving millions wish you joy.

METHODISTS AID IN DRESS AND DANCE WAR

ELBERTON, Nov. 24.—The North Georgia Methodist Conference, by a decisive vote to-day, went on record as disapproving the modern styles in women's dress, card-playing and dancing. These things were declared under the ban of the church as incompatible with Christian life according to a resolution introduced by the Rev. A. F. Nunn, of Rome.

A committee of three will be appointed from this conference to confer with representatives of other Georgia religious organizations regarding the matter.

The morning session of the conference to-day was largely devoted to hearing discussions of reports made by the boards and committees of the conference. Dr. J. M. Moore, of Nashville, spoke of the home mission work, while Dr. Fitzgerald Parker, of Nashville, spoke of Epworth Leagues.

The report of the Education Board, read by Dr. C. C. Jones, of Atlanta, recommended that the Piedmont and Fairmount Institutes, located at Rock Hill and Fairmount, be sold and the proceeds be equally divided between Young Harris and Rheinhardt Colleges.

Against Athletics. By a heavy vote the conference endorsed the Emory College board of trustees in forbidding intercollegiate athletics in that school and petitioned the board to continue the same policy.

Two alternate lay delegates chosen to-day are J. H. Ewing, of Atlanta, and Professor Jere M. Pound, of Athens.

The three ministerial delegates chosen Saturday are Dr. H. M. DuBose, pastor of the First Church, Atlanta; Dr. James H. Dickey, president of Emory College, Oxford; and Dr. J. H. Sharp, president of Young Harris College.

The Executive Department has been besieged all day with callers from South Georgia, in favor either of Judge John W. Bennett, of Waycross, or Judge J. W. Quincey, of Douglas, to succeed Judge T. A. Farner, of the Waycross circuit Superior Court, resigned. The Governor announced at noon that he had not then determined the matter, and likely would not during the day.

In all, more than 250 positions will be affected.

We Give Perpetual Contracts on Our Diamonds

In view of the fact that a great many of our customers, after they have bought a diamond, decide that they wish a larger one, we allow a return of it at any time in the future and get an allowance of the full purchase price toward a larger one.

By this plan it is possible for one to eventually own as large a stone as they might wish, and at the same time their payments be reduced to a minimum.

As an example, on a sixty-dollar stone we would only require fifteen dollars cash and allow the purchaser to extend the remaining forty-five dollars over a period of months most suited. After this stone is paid for, which you have had the pleasure of wearing in the meantime, we will allow you the full price of sixty dollars for it toward a larger one, and so on, making exchanges as long as you so desire.

If it is not possible for you to visit our store, let us send you a selection package, from which you can choose as satisfactorily as if you had visited our establishment.

But only seventy-five of them. Three times seventy-five such suits would not be too many. They are smart, brimful of style. Such suits as the woman of fashion picks out with a smile of satisfaction. It happens that the price is $25.00 instead of $37.50 and $50 because a maker whose name commands respect (perhaps tinged with a bit of envy) in suit circles closed his regular fall season with this sale to us. This was just last week. But the details tell the good news, that these are the bright, just-minted coins of suitdom. You will find-- Striped duvetynes, velours de laine, uncut cloths and broadcloths, in navy, Copenhagen, green, brown, plum and black. Fur trimmings grace most of them. They are fashioned into rather short and nobby cutaways, all differing from one another in more ways than there are suits. Skirts are draped. To us it appears to be the suit event of the city thus far this season. Early choosing will be best. Have you seen this new Toy Store? It is a wonderful show! By all means, see it now while varieties are greatest.

Which Is the Married Pair?

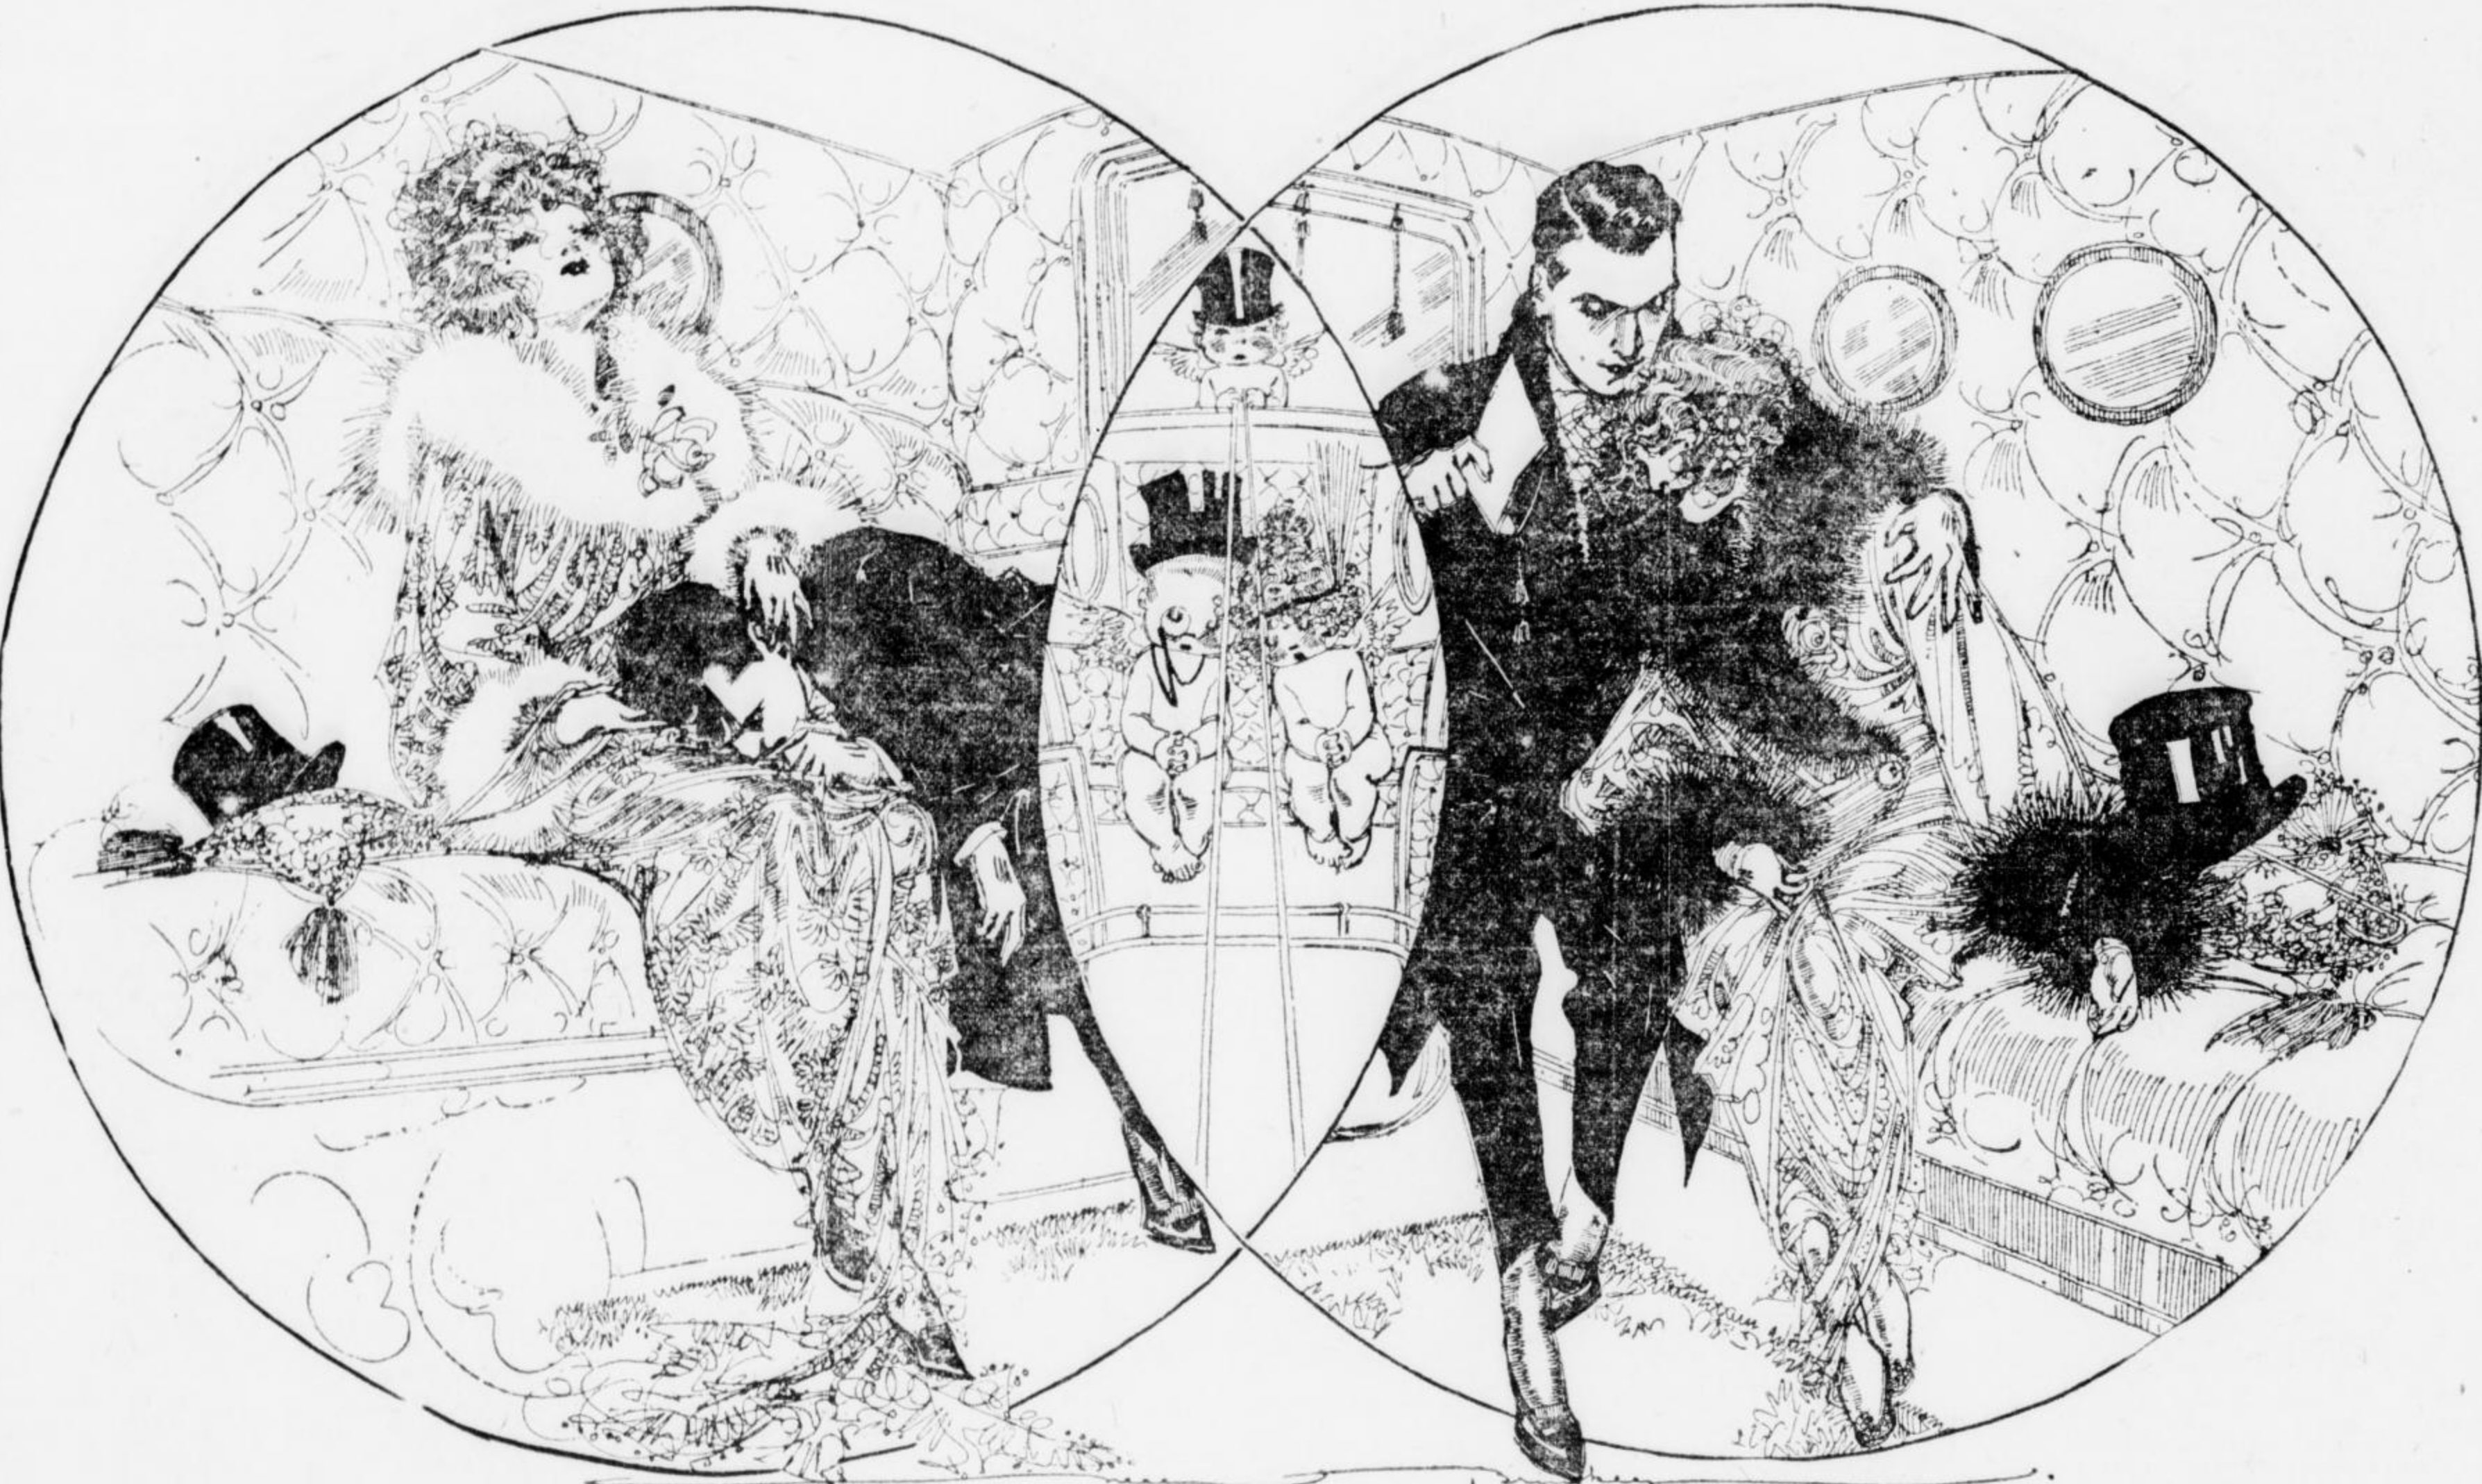

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

I TAKE off my Tam o'Shanter to the married folks who are not of this ilk—who are still lovers in the real lover fashion—the man the rock and the woman the flower who grows against it—the outer-seeming strength and tenderness all his—hers the hidden adoration and help. You are out of it, if you please. It's the general run of folks who seem to fairly spill over in old Atlanta that make it easy to guess which is the married and which the engaged pair "after the ball!"

One—a weary couple—the woman upright—her head fallen back with its eyes closed in light, watchful sleep, her hands guarding unconsciously the dark head that lies in her lap. And he is gone tight and fast asleep with his tango-dizzy head cradled in the silk and fur on the knees of the woman he loves. And the cab aways and joggles, jolting her head stiffly and rocking his luxuriously in a soft silken vale. And sometimes she grips him mother-tender as she would a weary child to keep him from slipping away.

The other—wedged in the corner where he can hold her better. The man, with heavy eyelids himself, broods over the dance-pallid face of the girl. All the little tired bundle is drawn to him—her rumpled head on his shoulder—and her weary, busy, little-girl brain zone a-dreaming. The tossing of the cab never reaches her—the sleepy lover holds her close at the bumps. He huddles her furs closer to her throat as the cold air of the coming dawn breathes through the lowered window. One foot in his pump is gone fast asleep and his shoulder is cramped, but he'd rather die than move. "Poor little fellow!" he mutters and holds the dance-card so the shadow will lie on her closed eyes when the street light flashes in.

Which is the married pair? Let me tell you, Billys—this whole idea came from a man—not a girl—so let it, from man to man, have weight with you, O Lovers! And the man says:

"IF CHAPS WOULD SAVE A LITTLE OF THEIR LAVISH EXPENDITURE OF TENDER

AND FOOLISHNESS BEFORE THEY ARE MARRIED TO SPREAD OUT OVER THE

DAYS WHEN THEY ARE, IT WOULD BE A GOOD THING FOR THAT LONG, LONG

PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN MAN AND WOMAN!" —NELL BRINKLEY.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THERE IS A BETTER WAY, Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 and have kept company with a young man of 23 for some time. He has asked me for a kiss lots of times, but I have always refused. Last time he came to see me he took a kiss just as he was leaving. He said he had come with the intention to get one, and as I still refused he said he just had to take it. I was angry with him. However, he did not think it would make me mad and was sorry. Should I refuse to see him again?

HELEN. I think he loves you, and I suspect that you love him. Love is too rare to lose for such an offense as this, so give him to understand that your kisses are saved for your future husband. That may open his eyes.

DON'T FORCE MATTERS. Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 19 and am going out quite often with a gentleman eight years my senior. He has never said anything to me of his intentions, whether serious or not, but if I sometimes talk about it, he tells me he does not intend to marry for about five or six years. I greatly admire him, and I am sure it is likewise with him, but do you think I am wasting my time going with him and neglecting other opportunities?

HALF-DISAPPOINTED. It is not your privilege to force a declaration from him. On the other hand, if you think he is monopolizing your time needlessly, it is your privilege to refuse to see so much of him. Give him to understand without saying so that it makes no difference to you what his marrying intentions may be.

Anticipation.

"All right, daughter," her harassed father replied, "marry young Noxon if you must. I'll give you a mirror for a wedding present."

"Why a mirror?"

"So you can watch yourself staring to death."

"T ELL me," began Philip, but a loud knocking without interrupted him. "Who is there?" said Dr. Scarth. "Abingdon. I want to see Mr. Anson," was the reply, in a voice that Philip hailed joyfully.

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

Nervousness Caused by Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am in good health." Mrs. William H. Gill, No. 15 Pleasant street, Auburn, New York.

noticed Philip's wan appearance, and the bandage on his head. "My dear, dear boy," he cried, "what has happened?" Philip told him briefly. As the magistrate's glance rested on Mason and Greiner it became very chilly. He brought Portland prison near to the soul of one of them. He poured out more spirit.

The respite given by Mr. Abingdon's arrival gave Mason time to focus his thoughts. The man had lived in an inferno since he slipped away from his sons that morning on a plea of urgent business in order to catch a fast train for York in the afternoon.

He knew that Greiner would make the Station Hotel his headquarters, and his sole desire was to stop that enterprising rogue from committing further crimes which might be damaging to Anson's estate, and disastrous to the peace of mind of the girl he loved.

In no way did he hold Greiner responsible for urging him to commit murder. The journey to York was undertaken in the first place to save Philip's memory from the slur which was intended to be cast upon it, and, secondly, to afford a plausible pretext for a platform accident whereby his own life should be dashed out of him by an engine. He would stumble over a barrow, fall helplessly in front of an incoming train, and end his career far from London, far from inquiry and published reports which might be injurious to his sons.

he had slain the benefactor of his wife and children. "There was an overwhelming pathos in his recital of the boy's kindness to him. He gave a lurid picture of his feelings during the previous night as he listened to their praises of Philip Anson, and their pleasant plans for their father's future. He only winced once, and that was at the remembrance of the parting of a few hours ago.

And he finished by a pitiful appeal for mercy, not for himself, but for Greiner! "I put the whole thing into his mind, Mr. Anson," he said. "He would never have thought of robbing you but for me. Let him go. Make him leave the country. He will never trouble you again. As for me, when I go from this room I walk to my death. You can't stop me. I will not lay hands on you, I promise, but not all the men in waiting there outside can hold me back. In five minutes, or less, I will be dead. It will be an accident. No one will be the wiser, and my boys will be spared the knowledge that their father tried to kill the man to whom they owe everything."

A Threat. This amazing stipulation, backed up by a tearful threat, he noticed, drew an indignant protest from Mr. Abingdon. Philip said nothing. "Oh, very well," growled Mason. "There is another way."

His right hand dived into a pocket and Dr. Scarth again fingered his revolver. But Philip cried imperiously: "Sit still, Mason. I have heard all that you have to say. Be quiet, I tell you. Wait until I refuse your request." "My dear boy," interrupted Mr. Abingdon, who knew Philip's generous impulses, "you will never think of condoning—"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT

Jim considered this a moment for one J. Garrity to take the center of the stage again. He started off on his reminiscence with deep relish—but neither Kitty nor Dick had attention for him. Kitty stood still tense with purpose. Dick strode nervously around the room. It is easy to dismiss careless speech with an apology—but the feeling that prompted it goes deeper than apology—it is not so quickly dismissed.

"Sure! Say! I remember one night before these blamed taxis ruined the city," Jim stopped to shake his head over the "good old days." "Well, one night in the days of kabs I picked up a fellow and a girl in front of Shanley's—the old place, you know. This guy was pretty well loaded and—"

To the obvious relief of his unwilling and unheeding listeners Kenneth let himself into his "chambers" just then—and came forward eagerly to take Kitty's hand. "I am so glad to see you," he said, with obvious truth, and, indeed, he saw no one but Kitty. Kitty smiled prettily. "I am so glad to be here!" "Fine day—ain't it?" remarked Jim with the geniality born of warmth and a good smoke. "I'm guessing you're here for the 'chauffeur' sitting at ease in one of his chairs and smoking one of his cigars."

This seemed to amuse Dick vastly. He turned away to laugh—while Kenneth murmured his boyish apologies. "I was a brute! You are always like that! So good to everyone." "Dick felt a trifle de trop. "I'm going down to get the dope on 'Fanny S.'; if the jockey is right, I have a hunch to play her. Shall I put five in for you, Kitty?" "I don't care to gamble," said Kitty, primly.

"Oh! How stupid of me. I do declare!" Dick's flexible voice took on its best society intonation. "I'll be back for the big cats. You don't need no chaperon, Kenneth, not with a girl like Kitty! Careful, though, boy! Remember she's sort of a woman—and I'm afraid you're a sort of naughty little guy."

Knowing exactly how much more care there was need for Ken than for Kitty, it amused Dick vastly to play to the gallery of his own sense of humor. "The other two scarcely heard him—and Kenneth turned with a smile to Kitty almost before the door had slammed on the departing guest. "He's a queer sort!"

Kitty was a student of effects. She looked up demurely. "Kenneth, I wonder what you really think of me?" "You know." The boy spoke earnestly. "No—really I don't. You are only a boy, and I guess the girls you've known are a whole lot different from me." Ken bent over the chair, tenderly. "Not one of them so pretty."

There was almost a sob in her tone. The boy and the woman stood with her great armchair between them. Her hand, looking very frail and thin, rested on the back of the massive piece of furniture. Very gently, not to frighten her—not to "brighten" Kitty Caltre—with sudden passion, Kenneth took that little hand in his.

"I want you to marry me," said Charles Nelson's son. She looked at him a moment, then crossed over to the couch on the other side of the room and sat staring far into space—far away—back over a month—back over two years before that month. Suddenly she began to laugh nervously, with a tension in her hysterical mirth. Kenneth went to her, and taking her hand again still more gently—with deep reverence—sat by her side.

"What is it, dear?" asked the boy. "Never looking at him, still staring into space and stirring a memory he could never guess nor half fathom, the girl spoke: "It's—it's funny. I didn't know it would be so funny."

"You must have known I would ask you to marry me." To Ken that was the only way. To poor little Kitty—to all the poor little Kitties, sadly wise and wisely sad— "Yes." "You must have known I would ask you to marry me." To Ken that was the only way. To poor little Kitty—to all the poor little Kitties, sadly wise and wisely sad— "Yes."

HAUGHTON AND STAGG PRAISED FOR SUCCESS

Harvard and Maroon Coaches Use Entirely Different Tactics on Gridiron Field.

By Frank G. Menue. NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The fact that Harvard in the East and Chicago in the West today hold undisputed claims to the championship in their respective sections, although coached in entirely different ways, has led to much speculation as to just what coaching tactics produce winners, and just how far coaching enters into the success of a football team.

Haughton, of Harvard, drove his team to victory; Stagg, of Chicago, led his charges to the crest of Western football. Haughton, of a stern, forbidding type when handling a team, drives his men at the top speed of the moment in the days of the field, and inspires something like fear in his men. Stagg, with a gentle, kindly temperament, makes his men love him and fight for him because they do love him. He never gives out the idea that he is their boss; rather, his attitude is that of a big brother, one who suggests, more than orders, what his men should do.

PRaises are being sung to-day for both these men, and they are given immeasurable credit for the accomplishment of the teams in their charge. Yet, with all due respect for the marvelous coaching skill of Haughton and Stagg, as well as Yost, of Michigan; Warner, of Carlsle, and the legion of others, it seems to us that the success of a football team does not depend so largely upon the caliber of the coach as is generally believed.

It is our theory that the best coach in the world can not produce a winner unless he has the material, and that the most mediocre coach, having great natural players under him, will lead a championship team.

Yost and the artless Michigan teams stand out as the best example of our argument. Several years ago Yost took charge of the Michigan eleven and soon whipped it into the greatest football aggregation that ever donned the moosekins. Yost praises were sung throughout the length and breadth of the land. Yost, in a measure, was responsible for the success of the Michigan teams in 1901-02-03-04, but around 1905 and 1907 and for a number of years later it was plainly shown that a coach, without football marvels under him, can not produce a winner.

BACK in 1906 Michigan's position began to wane. Yost still was in charge. He certainly knew more about the art of coaching than he did when he took charge in 1901. Yet he could not put through a winner. The Michigan team for the past five years—with the exception of the 1913 aggregation—staked up as only ordinary teams.

The fault was not with Yost. He didn't have the players. But he was back in the arena this year with a team that reminded one of the aggregations in the days of Houston, Reichen and Snow. The aggregation went through the season with only one defeat, and that at the hands of the despised Michigan Aggies, a team that the Michigan Aggies had underrated, and which swept its way to victory before the Wolverines woke up to their peril.

GOLF SCHOOLS A GREAT AID TO EXPERT PLAYER

Evans Tells How Northerners Can Improve Their Work by Winter Practice.

By Chick Evans. CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—In spite of the pleasant weather in the past few weeks there is a feeling in the air that prophesies the fact that the indoor golf season is at hand. There are golfers who play outdoors until the ground sports a wide, deep carpet of snow, and the nipping air so chills the fingers that it is impossible to grasp a golf club; others, on the contrary, fly indoors at the first suggestion of cold, but whether they play early or late a large number of summer golfers console themselves in the indoor schools.

Australian Promoter Is Aroused Baker Answers Moran's Charges

By W. W. Naughton. AN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—In the past a good many American pugilists who visited Australia returned with harrowing tales of the unfair treatment they received at the hands of Hugh D. McIntosh. Naturally these stories, whether true, false or merely highly colored, had to go uncontradicted for a long time. It took a couple of months sometimes for the newspapers containing the complaints to reach Australia and as long for McIntosh's side of the case to reach here.

.. A Cheerful Wife the Real Home Maker ..

By DOROTHY DIX

I KNOW a woman—you know her also, or one who is her living image—who literally wears herself to a frazzle doing her duty by her family. Her house is swept, and scrubbed, and rubbed, and polished until it is clean and shiny as a new pin. Her husband's socks have never a hole in them. Her children's clothes are ruffled and tucked and hand-embroidered until they look as if they had come out of a shop instead of being made at home. Not a penny is ever wasted in her home, and with her own hands she cooks dishes that require her standing over the stove for hours, because they are husband's or children's favorites. Sounds like a description of the ideal wife and the ideal home, doesn't it? You would think that her family would worship her, wouldn't you, and you couldn't pry them away from their own fireside? But not so. The woman complains bitterly of the ingratitude of her family, and that they make no return in affection for the endless devotion and labor that she lavishes upon them. She says, truly enough, that they never stay at home if there is any other place to which they can go. She doesn't know the reason why, but it's plain enough to every one else. She toils so hard doing the little things of life that she has no time for the big things. She's so busy sweeping under beds and brushing down cobwebs that she has no leisure in which to get acquainted with her husband and children and to be companions to them. Above all, she keeps herself so worn and weary that she is nothing but a bundle of raw nerves, and is so irritable that she nags and frets and scolds at her family and is about as soothing and agreeable a companion as a fretful porcupine would be. Therefore, husband and children dodge her society as often as possible. Now, I am not minimizing the value of good housekeeping. It is essential to the health and happiness of a family that the house be kept clean, and the food well cooked, and the clothes mended, and the bills looked after. But it is of far greater importance that a wife and mother should be amiable and pleasant, and if she's just got enough physical strength to be one or the other, by all means let her put her force into jolly instead of jelly-making.

Letters From the Readers of The Georgian

SEEKS TO BE ENLIGHTENED.
Editor The Georgian:
In many of your articles you lay great stress on the proposition that men should be thoughtful, should think for themselves. Now, just what constitutes a thoughtful man? In what manner must a man read and think to use his thought to the best advantage? Is not the majority of mankind to be classed as such, as evidenced by the rapid progress being made in social and industrial welfare, in invention, peace principles and in general ethics? Again, how can I, and others, improve our thought? How can we better concentrate?
• The gist of my effort is this: We are constantly being told to think for ourselves, but no one tells us just how to think to the best advantage. If you think this subject worthy of consideration in your editorial column, I am sure many thousands would be benefited by your advice. E. H. T.

FAVORS CREMATION.
Editor The Georgian:
Why not write an editorial on cremation, and help wipe out superstitious and religious ideas which bear the stamp of barbarism?
Give the earth to the living, to whom it belongs, in the shape of parks or playgrounds. As a progressive paper you will admit that 100 years hence a cemetery near a crowded city will be a curiosity.
The man or woman who has lived right will require no monument to keep alive their memory, and their ashes will rest in peace. I am not interested in real estate or cremation except as a problem which will no doubt adjust itself in the future. C. T. F.

AGAINST CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.
Editor The Georgian:
Dear Sir—The law of hanging, or whatever the method of taking a life for a life, is handed down to us from a despotic age, and should have died with the despots who framed it. We have creditably done away with other relics of barbaric times. Why not do away with this? J. H. D.
INTERVENTION IN MEXICO.
Editor The Georgian:
Mr. Hearst's recent article on the Mexican situation is the most sensible I have seen from any public man, either in the Government or out of it. It describes the case exactly and points out the remedy. Our Government's so-called "policy" has become a joke and we are becoming the laughing stock of the world. WILLIAM EATON.

Current Comment on Live Subjects

"GLASS ON VANDERLIP."
(From The Washington Times.)
We had rather believed that the wide world's experience with banking and currency systems based on the national central bank had been sufficient to gain for that system's advocates immunity to the sort of criticism that Mr. Glass so deftly indulges. If we are yet to appeal, in the face of two generations of world experience, to the ancient prejudice against Nick Biddle; if the ghost of Andy Jackson is to be conjured forever from the shades to curse the plan in which Jefferson, Hamilton and Washington were able to join forces; if, in fact, the most efficient scheme of banking and currency organization ever devised for the purposes of nations all the way from France to Japan is to be condemned without a hearing, and put down as a red herring of the money power, then indeed is it useless to impose earnest investigations and sincere study against the commands of a caucus.

"DANIELS' NAVAL POLICY."
(From The Philadelphia Press.)
Secretary of the Navy Daniels expresses himself as being entirely in accord with his equally deep-sea colleague, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty in the British Government, in forcing a "naval holiday." * * * But this attitude of Secretary Daniels, while entirely creditable to his good sense, is not so important as his conviction that the naval shipbuilding program for the next fiscal year should provide for the addition of three dreadnoughts to the fleet. * * * Democratic pork-hunters are responsible for the failure to keep up an adequate navy by refusing to authorize more than a single battleship during the last few years. The power to repair that criminal neglect rests during the next two years with the Democratic party now in power.

Garrett P. Serviss

Writes on Mental Age and Bodily Age

"Psychologists Are Recognizing That Some Children Who Are Branded as Mentally Inferior Are Only Mentally Younger Than Others. This Presages the Dawning of a New Day for the 'Feeble-Minded' Child. In the Schools Only the First Standard Is Yet Recognized."

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THERE is a mysterious power in words. Sometimes a mere phrase has engineered a revolution. It may be so with the new term, "mental age," which you will find interestingly discussed in the November number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. It will be a revolution, if it comes, which will reform our whole system of education, and the children will be the beneficiaries.

This new term in the science of the mind is based upon a recognition of the fact that a human being may be physically old, and, at the same time, mentally young. The state of a child's mind should not be judged from the number of years that have passed over its head. A boy or a girl may be 14 years old, reckoning by birthdays, but only 7 years old measured by mental development. Yet in the schools only the first standard is recognized; all who are of similar physical age and growth are thrust into the same classes; and if some prove unable to hold the pace they are branded as mentally inferior, when in fact they may only be mentally younger.

Here, then, is a new definition, and a most hopeful one, for what we have been accustomed to call "feeble-mindedness," meaning by that essential and incurable weakness of mind. The subject assumes a different aspect when we see that what we are dealing with is not so much weakness as lack of development. It is the dawning of a new day for the "feeble-minded" child when his parents and teachers instead of pityingly pushing him aside as hopelessly incapable, begin to treat his mind as they would treat his body in case the latter showed signs of lack of nourishment or of assimilative power. Many a physically feeble, stunted child has grown up, under proper care, into a strong, healthy, energetic man. Isaac Newton when a baby was so dwarfed and feeble that his parents despaired of raising him. His was a case in which the mental age outpaced the bodily age at first. In the "feeble-minded" child this is reversed, and it is the mentality that is backward, but the right kind of care should restore the balance in one case as well as in the other.

It is the point of view that tells. When you come to look upon your intellectually backward child simply as being mentally younger than his years, you will treat him according to his mental and not his physical age. You will know where and how to apply the remedy. You will not break him down with burdens too heavy for his mind at the stage of development at which it has arrived. You will not do him the injustice of assuming that he is essentially inferior to his brothers and sisters whose mental and physical stature have kept pace with each other. You will feel that his mind may be developed and strengthened to a full maturity, just as Newton's body was. The article in The Cosmopolitan to which I refer tells how science has discovered a way of measuring the mental age when it differs from the bodily age. The system of measurement is due to the French psychologist, Alfred Binet, and his associate, M. Simon. It depends upon a very simple principle—that of taking the average mental stature at various ages, which may be determined by experiments with a large number of normal children, and comparing with this standard the development of any particular child. Various ingenious devices and tests are employed, including the recognition of colors, the tracing of outlines, the memory and comprehension of words, the time taken to receive impressions, the drawing of plain inferences, etc. But anybody, when once the idea that there is such a thing as mental age which may differ from bodily age is understood, can make tests for himself. We know how the mind of the child slowly advances, for we were all once children, stretching out feeble hands to grasp the clouds and the moon, and comprehending nothing of the world around us. Probably there is not one of us whose mental growth has not either exceeded or fallen behind the bodily growth, but in the vast majority of cases the difference has been too slight to lead to important results. But when the difference becomes great, as when a child of 10 years has the mental stature belonging to the age of 5, a quick remedy must be applied to prevent an entire arrest of the development of the mind. That remedy must be applied through more intelligent and sympathetic treatment of the "feeble-minded" at home, as well as through a grading according to mental instead of bodily age in the schools.

Mind and Electrons

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN.

I here state, assert and affirm in addition to my original publication, first, nothing exists but electrons; second, they were created by Mind. But the confusion in the mind of my Persian correspondent is due to the word "nothing." This can not apply to Mind. It is no thing. Any word whatever that can be connected with matter can not be used in relation to Mind. Electrons at rest are not matter—they are pure electricity. How often have I stated that an atom of any chemical element can appear in space until electrons revolve around each other. Specific speeds, distances or orbits, numbers of electrons revolving and directions of their revolution determine what elementary atom shall be formed. This is the self-rigid and basic fact of modern science. After an unusually long period of absence of sun spots a small group of four has appeared. They are all small, none larger than the earth. A scene of supernatural splendor is now on display. The colossal cluster of many thousand heaped-up suns on Sagittarius and the planet Jupiter with its moons are now both in the field of view of the finder up here. Mortal eye hath not beheld a scene more magnificent. And the air of the mountains is free from dust and vapor. It is pure and a small new comet is in sight. —Lowe Observatory, California.

"GO-TO-CHURCH DAY" in Atlanta Should Bring Out 200,000 Earnest Believers in Helping Along a Great Religious Movement.

The hearty approval by the ministers and laity of Atlanta of the suggestion made in The Georgian of a "Go-to-Church Day" in this city proves the earnestness of our people and the big-mindedness of the occupants of our pulpits. Atlanta is a God-fearing, church-attending community. Our ministers are earnest and able. They are carrying on their great work, some staggering under tremendous burdens, but all of earnest endeavor and eager to spread the gospel and build up their churches wherever they may be located. These ministers deserve more than they are getting from this community. They are entitled to the support of EVERY MAN AND WOMAN in this city. They are building up the waste places and reclaiming humanity. They are seekers after truth and are spreading their knowledge of the truth wherever and whenever they can. They deserve the substantial support of those financially able to help, and every good work they are engaged in should be promoted conscientiously and determinedly to the end. The "GO-TO-CHURCH DAY" suggestion should encourage the ministers. It ought to be easy to get 200,000 earnest men and women into the churches of Atlanta on the day set apart by the ministers for that purpose. This very large attendance will bring the churches and the ministers into a new and closer relationship with people who are not regular church attendants. It will inspire the ministers to do better things than they are even now doing. It should be an incentive to men and women to regard church-going not only as a duty, but something to be looked forward to each Sunday with profit to the soul and mind and pleasure also. The Georgian asks its readers to consider this "Go-To-Church Day" suggestion, and to write to this newspaper briefly as to how it can best be made successful with the largest possible results, making for greater religious strength in our city, extending civic virtue and righteousness and upholding those ministers who are doing God's duty toward men in a fearless way—and sometimes to not overcrowded churches. And would it not be a good idea if the ministers would agree to select an identical text of Scripture, and each of them preach from that text on the day decided upon as inaugurating the new movement? Perhaps there is a thought in the last sermon preached by Dr. John Bradley Robins, pastor of Trinity Church, who was stricken last Sunday and died with a prayer on his lips. He was in the middle of an eloquent sermon on a theme of the chief thought of the Apostle Paul, discussing the text "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and forever." There is not the slightest doubt that "Go-To-Church Day" can be made tremendously profitable, not only for the churches but for the entire community as well.

Didn't Your Great-Grandfather Have Grit? Where's Yours?

Some time when you are given to whining that you have no luck, wheezing that you don't even get a square deal, and whimpering that you deserve much better than you get, pull up short and ask yourself: "Am I half the man my great-grandfather was?" Your great-grandfather overcame problems that make yours appear easy by comparison. He didn't waste the passing hours by moaning and moping—HE DID THINGS. On wintry mornings he broke the ice in his pitcher and started the day in rugged earnest. He wore a buckskin shirt and homespun of his own manufacture, and wasn't ashamed of that fact, either. He cleared his land by the sweat of his brow and made his crops pay dividends despite the fact that he often had to work with a squirrel rifle handy for redskins. When your great-grandfather was sick he did his own doctoring. He got his learning by walking across country to a log schoolhouse when there was one within a dozen miles, and if there wasn't one he got his education by thumbing a dog-eared book by firelight; but HE GOT IT JUST THE SAME. His creed was a rough but honest one, and he raised his children in the fear of the Lord and nothing else. He and his kind built a nation that is founded on the greatest principles known to men. But are you perpetuating his name—are you taking advantage of the heritage that is yours? It was his spirit that made possible the great things of the present day, the things that make life worth living—but are YOU making life worth living? This is an age when everything is made easy, when even the poorest enjoy comforts which would have been untold luxuries in the past, yet you talk of "being up against it!" The comparison of life then and now ought to make any man with a red corpuscle feel like getting into harness; like standing up and handing failure a knockout blow. The trouble is that things have been made too easy for you—you haven't had to hunt opportunity. Look about you at the thousand and one tools for success building that lie ready at your hand. YOU'RE LIVING IN AN AGE WHERE NOTHING IS TOO GREAT FOR ANY MAN TO ACCOMPLISH IF HE ONLY WILL. A million passages of endeavor are holding wide their portals for you to enter—are you going to pass them because some one does not take you by the neck and throw you into fame and fortune? You only need a tenth of your great-grandfather's grit and spirit—you have it in you now—USE IT.
