Fear That Drastic Action Will Distract Attention From Currency Measure Prompts His Peaceful Policy Regarding Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The temperate attitude of the Wilson Administration in dealing with the Mexican situation has been due altogether to fear that a drastic policy would distract attention from the currency and other legislative program.

Now that all attempts to talk Huerta into a state of reason have failed, the Washington powers probably will drop from the Federals to the Constitutionalists. Witness Makes Full Statement Chief Bodoker was impressed at the beginning by the man's story. Chief Bodoker communicated with Ben M. Jacobs, an officer of the B'nai B'rith of Birmingham, who in turn communicated with the Atlanta police.

Miss Mary Browne Wins Little Folk When She Narrates of Br'er Rabbit.

White convict, No. 180, was kept in the dungeon for three weeks, contracting liver trouble which caused his death shortly afterward.

Convict 501 was in the dungeon several weeks. His legs were swollen so that he could not arise from his cot for days.

Convict 621, a man named Lang, was kept in the "hole" for 145 days, charged with assaulting an officer.

When taken in he weighed 180 pounds; when released, 115 pounds.

White men were sent into the fields in charge of an armed negro overseer.

Men were placed in the dungeon for trivial offenses, and kept chained in standing positions.

Thomas was outspoken in his accusation that conditions were little short of barbarous at times, as they came within his notice, and that the instances of which he told were not exceptions, but rather the horrible system.

The bulk of the things that have occurred in the Atlanta Federal penitentiary can never be told," he declared Saturday, talking to a Sunday American reporter.

"They will never be revealed, because the guards and officers can hardly remember the spectacles that come before their eyes. I can not, I admit, many things I can not recall, and yet there are some incidents that have fixed themselves firmly upon the pages of my memory. The story told by Hawthorne and Dr. Norton is but a mild beginning.

"The dark hole" of which they speak is a reality. Men have been kept there for weeks at a time, to my certain knowledge. They have been denied the "hole" for trivial offenses.

LA PORTE, IND., Oct. 12.—Four women were killed and Edwin Schurz, treasurer of the Robert M. Cable Piano Company, was seriously injured late to-day when Schurz's automobile was struck by a Fire Maquette freight train. The dead: Mrs. Edwin Schurz, Mrs. Fannie Helms, Mrs. Carlotta Schaffer, LaPorte; Mrs. William Brace, Washington, D. C.

Schurz declared he did not see or hear the approaching train until the machine was on the track.

"Only" Jealousies and enlarged sentiments" are given as an explanation. Mrs. Hoffman will be at the head of her own company in a few days.

This trio had been booked to appear at the Atlanta Theater later in the season.

The bill of the things that have occurred in the Atlanta Federal penitentiary can never be told," he declared Saturday, talking to a Sunday American reporter.

"They will never be revealed, because the guards and officers can hardly remember the spectacles that come before their eyes. I can not, I admit, many things I can not recall, and yet there are some incidents that have fixed themselves firmly upon the pages of my memory. NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Charles P. Murphy will abdicate as leader of Tammany Hall as soon as election is over, according to a report from very high authority, and the report came from a source in Tammany circles today that anything that has been heard in connection with the case is a mere rumor.

It is said that the veteran leader of the Tammany organization is ready to step aside, win or lose. The decision is declared to be due to recent attacks.

ST. ALBANS, N. H., Oct. 12.—Counsel for Harry K. Thaw to-day filed a brief with Governor Parker, giving the so-called "inside facts" of the effort on the part of William Travers Jerome to secure an indictment charging conspiracy against Thaw. The remarkable part of the brief is that it contains information which must of necessity have come from members of the Dutchess County Grand Jury, before whom the indictment was sought.

The brief states that the first vote taken by the jury stood 10 to 2, two not voting, against finding the indictment. The District Attorney then informed the jurors that a majority vote was necessary to return an indictment, and the matter was reconsidered. The second vote stood 12 to 5 against finding the indictment. It was then voted to again consider the matter, but the district grand jury adjourned without taking the case up for the third time.

On a dare, Claud Howies, 12 years of age, climbed last night to the top of an electric light pole 10 feet from his home, No. 210 Rawson street.

His widowed mother called, "Come down." Before he could answer, a blue flame blazed from beneath his hands and his dead body fell at her feet.

Another fatality was added to the long list piled up through automobile accidents, when Jimmie Ward, the 13-year-old mite who was run down at Marietta and Forsyth streets Friday, died at the Grady Hospital late Saturday night.

W. L. McCalley, 69 Westwood avenue, driver of the car, is out on $500 bond. He declared the accident was unavoidable. The victim, he told the police, had rushed in front of his machine.

Young Ward resided with his parents at Gordon and Wellington streets.

A hundred Atlanta children played joyously with the grand and gayly with wide and expansive eyes at the rows of "Uncle Remus" books that filled the shelves, Saturday afternoon, when the third branch of the Carnegie Library was opened at the "Wren's Nest," the home of Joel Chandler Harris, with a program under the auspices of the library board and the Uncle Remus Memorial Association.

Every child who knew an "Uncle Remus" story and most of them did—did it, and then they pleaded with Miss Mary Browne, who is to be librarian of the new place and as such the idea of the children, to tell them a story of the doings of "Br'er Rabbit" and good old "Uncle Remus." And she did.

She took little Mary Harris Camp, "Uncle Remus" granddaughter, in her lap, the hundred children crowded as close as they could get, and there, on the porch, where Mr. Harris used to sit and play with children, she read them tales of "Br'er Rabbit" and the "Snap Bean Farm," and the other creatures of "Mr. Harris' brain" that fill the childish soul with delight.

The Rev. M. J. Jackson, pastor of the St. Anthony's Church, which the Harris' attend, opened the program with a prayer. Mrs. M. D. Wilson, president of the Memorial Association, presented the library room to the left as you enter the house to the library board, and it was accepted by Mayor James O. Woodward and George H. Boynton, chairman of the City Council Library Committee, and Major Charles W. Hilder, read an original poem. At the Wren's Nest, after Miss Browne told her story, the gift of J. C. Givens, chairman of the advisory committee of the library board, served as master of ceremonies, and was enthusiastic over the establishment of the branch, and Mrs. H. L. Crumley, chairman of the Memorial Association library committee, was chairman of the day.

After the opening exercises the ladies of the Memorial Association served tea, and the children revelled for more than an hour in "Uncle Remus" stories. Little brown and white rabbits, the gift of J. C. Givens, of the Southern Bank Company, were sold by the association members, and every child clung to a rabbit that had been purchased for it by a parent or a friend.

Miss Katherine Wooley, librarian of the main library on Forsyth, said there will be about 5000 books in the "Uncle Remus" branch, including all of Mr. Harris' works. All the children were taken in, as members of the association, and served books will be issued next Tuesday.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, society leader of New York and Newport, will forsake the drawing room and the card table for the wild jungles of the Philippines, there to make good citizens of the savage Moros by force of moral suasion.

Showed at the primal savagery of the natives on the island of Jolo, which she visited several months ago. Mrs. Spencer was inspired to the belief that instruction in the religion and industries of peace would bring a surer, more substantial civilization to the Moros than the militant methods of the United States soldiers. Her faith and their intimidation.

ST. ALBANS, N. H., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Elizabeth Kay, No. 215 Court-street, reported to the police Saturday night that a thief had entered her home and rifled her pockets, took $10 while she and her family were on the front porch. The purse was hidden beneath a mattress.

Chief Bodoker was asked the name of the witness.

"Walt Hill he gets to Atlanta," he replied. "We agreed not to give it out at this end."

"Is his name Frank?" he was asked. "Well, that's something like it," said the chief.

Mangum Heard Nothing.

Sheriff Mangum last night professed to have heard nothing in regard to the mysterious informant except as he had learned of the incident from the newspaper men. It was reported, however, that he is a deputy from the Sheriff's office, who was sent to Birmingham to return with the man.

"The first I know of such a thing taking place," said Mangum, "was when someone called me on the telephone to ask me about it. I did not even know that they were hunting for a man who was supposed to have witnessed the crime. I have been making inquiries since, but I have learned nothing definite. I suppose they will bring him to the Tower if he is under arrest."

Arnold Pleads Ignorance.

Robert R. Arnold, of counsel for Frank, said that he was taken entirely by surprise by the startling story. He denied that he had any information that such a person existed as the one who is said to have walked in upon Chief Bookeler and calmly announced that he was a witness to the saying of Mary Phagan. Neither had Mr. Arnold been aware that the detectives or any of Phagan's friends had been working on a plan of this sort, he said.

Chief of Detectives Landford denied knowledge of the reported confession on Birmingham, when arrested at his home early Sunday morning. Chief stated that no man from the Atlanta police department had been sent to Birmingham recently with a view of and that he knew of no communications having been received in the department from Chief Bookeler of the Atlanta city on this subject.

"It all seems to me," the Chief said, "when informed of the Birmingham report, 'I don't know anything about it. If a man over there said he witnessed the murder of the little Phagan girl, it doesn't concern me in the Atlanta police that I know of."

Beavers Denies Knowledge. Chief of Police James L. Beavers professed complete ignorance of the Birmingham confession to the Birmingham police.

"I have received no message from Chief Bookeler," he said, "and know nothing of any development of the Phagan case in Birmingham. I have not had a detective there working on any case, and if the Birmingham chief has found a man who was the murderer he has not yet notified the Atlanta police."

HOPE LOST FOR WINEY MEASURE AT THIS SESSION

Confidential Reports Made to the President Fix November 1 as Earliest Possible Date to Expect Report of Committee on Finance

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—All hope of enacting the Administration wine bill into law at the present session of Congress was given up today. Confidential reports made to the President set November 1 as the earliest possible date upon which a report on the measure could be looked for from the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

At the same time it was stated that this week of debate would be consumed by the Senate before the bill could be passed on to the conferees of the Senate and House.

The President was assured that there was no opposition on the part of legislators of the Upper House to hold out against the Administration. Republican members of the Banking and Currency Committee have been placated by the Chief Executive's declaration that he had no intention of making the pending bill a strictly party measure, and that, in signing a report on it to the Senate,

A suggestion has been made that the Banking and Currency Committee hold next hearings beginning next week in order to carry along a report. The opening of direct negotiations with Republican Senators is understood, was declared today by the President because of suggestions from outside sources that they were endeavoring to delay action in committee.

Senator Stone, of Missouri, gave notice in the Senate today that he would address that body Wednesday on the necessity of immediate action on currency legislation. No session of the committee was held today.

A proposal that Federal reserve banks provided for in the pending bill should have power to issue treasury checks was made to the Senate today in a petition presented by Senator Hoke Smith certain currency bill will pass.

Senator Hoke Smith today gave notice of a week's respite from his work in Congress. He predicted that the measure of which he has been an ardent advocate. He thought that it ought to reach the Senate from the House by November 15.

Senator Smith said that the supporters of the measure had determined that there should be no interference with the legislative program of the bill as it was regarded. The most important items remaining to be considered by the present Congress. Any attempt to obtain prompt passage that already has been successful in keeping the bill clear for the passage of the measure, the bill is declared.

Lots on Sale To-morrow at the Germania Savings Bank at $1.00 Down and $1.00 a Week

TAKE the river electric car line and get off at Carey Park. Our sales emply will be on the grounds all day Sunday to show you Carey Park lots. You can walk to any lot in the park from the street car line in five minutes. Five-cent car fare to Carey Park, or from Carey Park to any lot in Atlanta. Carry your friends along with you. Our manager will also be on the grounds all day Sunday and will reimburse you car fare for yourself and friends.

CAREY PARK lots—50x140 feet, facing wide avenues and with 20-foot alleys in the rear, will go on the market Monday morning, October 20th, at 9 o'clock, at the Germania Savings Bank, No. 2 Whitehall street, on the Whitehall side of the Peachtree viaduct. The opening price for the first fifty lots, any choice from the plat, which means first choice, will be only $200 each, which is below the market, and absolutely assures quick and handsome profits. The opening terms only one dollar down and one dollar a week, until paid for, without interest.

CAREY PARK is the center of more street car and road development than any other suburb around Atlanta, and this absolutely assures enhanced values. For instance, a street car extension to be built out the Mason and Turner roads, which will give Carey Park another electric car line, approaching on the south. The County Commissioners have agreed to pave the Peyton road directly through Carey Park. Also the Commissioners have agreed to grade the Hollywood and Gary roads, in the east end of Carey Park. In the meantime our own grading crew is at work on streets, grades, and other developments in Carey Park, making every lot easily and conveniently accessible.

CAREY PARK is owned in fee-simple by Mr. John Carey and his son, Hon. Dan Carey, who will execute all contracts for deed, and all collections are to be made through the Germania Savings Bank.

FOR the investment of surplus savings, either for the purpose of accumulating a home site, or for the purpose of reaping the reward of growing land values, there is no better opportunity around Atlanta to-day than Carey Park. And these lots will sell faster than any lots ever sold before in Atlanta. The interest in the property is intense. Every dollar invested in Carey Park should double itself every week in the year.

WILL you act? Will you accept the opportunity that is before you? If you can not visit Carey Park, be on hand at the Germania Savings Bank early Monday morning and select one or more of the lots from the blueprint. Our Sales Manager knows every foot of this property, and will satisfy you with his own judgment as to location.

THE phenomenal interest in Carey Park is a compliment to good judgment.

SMALL colored with handkerchiefs are again introduced. They are to be taken to the top into a pocket of a sleeve or carried in the hand. Men are wearing large colored handkerchiefs, white well pulled out of the breast pocket. Top over and give a new twist to the tie. These are not only worn by Frenchmen, but by Americans and English. Nearly all of the colored handkerchiefs have a narrow colored border with a monogram to everybody.

There are no sleeves on evening dresses and the arms are free. The narrow attached "bra" is all that remains on the shoulders, and this is made of silk, lace or velvet. If a sleeve is desired light silk or muslin sleeves are attached to the neck of the dress, can be rolled over the arms.

Skirts are decidedly short but widen at the bottom with a wide plait at the hips and below an inch. They have a lifted up, "trouser" effect and are of a prevailing metallic color. The wearer wears a white tulle or netting which is still in favor and its attraction seems to be its resistance to find itself at the back instead of the front of the skirt.

This is to be a "collarless" winter, according to the latest fashion advice, and not even the coldest weather is a justification for covering the throat any higher than is accomplished by the popular round, or its more recent variation, the Tulle collar. The Season's Wraps

The novelty of this season's wrap is that, in the more daring models, the sleeve is not sharply defined portion of the garment. Instead, like the new dresses, it is often only a slit or a hole in the vague amplexure of the wrap. The wrap is often faced or lined with a cuff effect, but still it is something new than the old-fashioned cape of last season.

GEORGIA'S PROSPERITY IS ALSO YOUR PROSPERITY

The Enormous Cotton Crop Gives Every Man, Woman and Child in the State the Chance to Become Independent if They Will Start Now and Save a Little of Their Share.

WHAT GEORGIA'S COTTON CROP IS WORTH TO EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN THE STATE

Georgia's crop, minimum estimate	2,500,000 bales
Price	14 cents
Value of the cotton itself	$175,000,000
Seed produced	1,250,000 tons
Estimated crush (3/4 total)	937,500 tons
Price	$22
Value of the seed	$20,625,000
Total value of cotton and seed	$195,625,000
Population of Georgia	2,800,000
Value of the cotton crop per capita	$75.23

GEORGIA just now is engaged in gathering and selling a crop which will have a minimum total value of $195,625,000. If all the gold which the cotton crop of Georgia brings were put in one great heap, and every man, woman and child in Georgia, white and negro, were to form in line and file by it while some man gave each an equal share, each of the 2,800,000 persons would get $75.23.

When the line broke, and the people assembled in family circles, each family of five, which is the average family, would have $376.15.

This may seem a fantastic notion.

It is not.

It is just what happens. Every soul in Georgia, from the tiniest pickaninny in arms to Governor Slaton himself, eventually get a share of the money cotton brings to Georgia, perhaps half of them directly and the other half indirectly.

Like all rivers, this stream of gold grows as it rolls along. Every time the cotton passes through a Georgia cotton mill, or a mattress factory, it increases in value. Every time the seed goes through a Georgia oil mill it increases in value.

The wealth which the cotton crop brings to Georgia this year must amount to almost $100 per capita when all is said.

Now this is where we are leading.

Everyone knows the fable of the grasshopper and the ant. It has been told to children since the time of Solomon, who admonished the impudent, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider its ways and be wise."

The only excuse for quoting it now is that it fits Georgia's so well.

DO NOT BE A GRASSHOPPER. DO NOT SPEND YOUR $75.23 WHICH IS WHAT YOU WILL GET FROM THE COTTON CROP IN ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

SAVE A LITTLE, AT LEAST—MUCH IF YOU CAN.

There may not be such another crop for years to come. We hope there will be, but history is against the expectation. And if there is another such crop in 1914 and 1915, the chances are strongly against Georgia being as lucky as it was this year. Next time, the Central and Western States will have big crops, too, and the price will be correspondingly lower than this year.

SAVE NOW FOR POSSIBLE DULL TIMES TO COME.

Suppose every family in Georgia put $1 in the savings bank this year. That would mean spending the $75 per capita for necessities, say, and the $93 for trifles, and saving simply the $20 apiece.

The very first year, Georgia would be $50,000,000 over half a million dollars nearer the happy day when no one shall fear the poor house.

The savings banks of Georgia nearly all pay 4 per cent now, compounded semi-annually. At the end of one year, this meager 20 cents per capita would have increased a total of $21,008, the accrued interest, and the families of Georgia would have $44,008.

In ten years, supposing that Georgia saved no more, but simply left 20 cents per capita undisturbed, the savings of the State would amount to $722,678.41.

THIS IS JUST TO SHOW HOW PENNIES GROW INTO DOLLARS.

EVERY GEORGIAN SHOULD HAVE A SAVINGS BANK ACCOUNT.

This is the time to start it. Money never will be more plentiful in Georgia than it is this year. In all probability, at least not for years to come.

This does not mean that there will not one day be a more valuable cotton crop grown in the State, or that there will not be more factories bringing wealth to Georgia. But when the larger crop and the greater factories come there will be more of us Georgians.

If Georgians can not save now, probably they never can.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS IS THRIFT.

If the Georgia farmer had not spent his return from the crop of 1913—that wonderful crop of which we all are so proud—he would not have felt the pinch last year.

But how does this apply to Atlantians?

Atlanta lives on the cotton crop. There is no disguising the fact, and, indeed, no one tries to.

No money is plentiful in Atlanta this fall, and will be more plentiful right along throughout the present season.

There are plenty of "jobs." Wages are good.

There probably is not a laboring man who can not save 25 cents a week.

Twenty-five cents a week, at 4 per cent compounded semi-annually, amounts in ten years to $18,91 and in twenty years to $39,97.

That's not an imposing sum, but a great deal to build up from quarters. Long before the twenty years, it will insure the first payment on a home, the first fruit of independence, which stops forever the heaviest drain on the wage-earner's income—rent.

And the man who saves 25 cents a week for five years, or even one, will acquire habits of thrift which will enable him to increase that amount.

Think it over.

There is no argument against saving—absolutely none. Only one thing prevents everyone saving, and that is lack of will power.

No one can raise a whisper of distrust against Georgia's banks. They are run by men of probity, under wise laws.

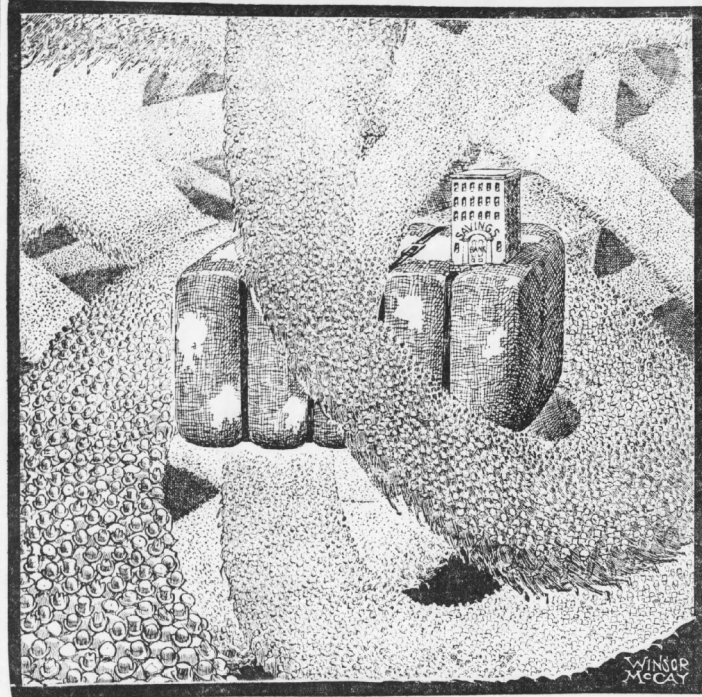

They are fostered by Uncle Sam and the State of Georgia, because every civilized government realizes that a saving people means a strong and happy people. What private gain accrues to the banker is small compared to the benefit he confers upon society. Like the physician, he brings you, and is worthy of his fee.

The Georgia banks' welfare depends absolutely upon the State as a whole. What is good for Georgia is good for them.

And nothing could be better for Georgia than larger savings per capita.

THIS IS THE TIME TO BEGIN. MAKE YOUR PENNIES GROW INTO DOLLARS!

WATSON READY TO FIGHT MAIL MISUSE CHARGE

Georgia Editor Declares Others Have Published More Extreme Charges and Escaped.

Continued From Page 1. This Section carried only those who were deeply interested in the question to have the words translated.

The defendant asked that Professor Chubb, a former Catholic priest, had written two books which were published by Fleming H. Revell & Co., New York, Chicago and Toronto, containing the same questions and that one of these books had come into the hands of the defendant and that the defendant had been prosecuted. The two books are "The Woman and the Church of Rome" and "The Priest, the Woman and the Confessional."

Watson said that the same questions were also printed in a book issued by the Jordan Publishing Company, Philadelphia and New York. In 1910, and that "The Woman and the Church of Rome" was published by John Hay, former secretary of the U. S. Revenue Service, Cambridge Mass., contained language far worse than those books and Watson, circulated in the small village of Milledgeville, Ga.

Mr. Watson claims that he always got along with the postal authorities until certain eminent Catholics prevailed upon Postmaster General Hibbons to attack him, and that Hibbons undertook the attack through the proceedings then on trial. Mr. Watson stressed the fact that he copyrighted his book before entering the mails and that therefore, it was all right. The Government holds, however, that a copyright does not give the unquestioned right of the mails.

While the case was first being heard in the Columbia court, there were many pro-Watson demonstrations and finally the hearing had to be adjourned to a private room. Watson was brought before the court to be heard to-morrow. Watson was brought before the court to be heard to-morrow. Watson was brought before the court to be heard to-morrow.

Prescher Leads Attempt to Get Smelter for Rich Gold Lode.
SULTAN, CAL., Oct. 18.—The principal mining claim owners of Olney divide have decided to pool the claims into a group as a close corporation for the purpose of securing a smelter. John D. DePree, a mining engineer, was present and gave information. The principal property is the Gold Blonson claim, which is a vein more than 200 feet wide and averaging about 100 to the ton. It is figured that the cost of smelting will be $4 or $5 a ton, which will leave a good profit. This is the first serious attempt to start any practical development and the Rev. E. M. Pils, who has been instrumental in working it up, was chosen temporary manager to serve until permanent organization is complete.

Interest Aroused in Everything Which She Adds to Her Huge Picture Collection.
One of the "worth while" members of Atlanta's younger set is Miss Christine Hooper, daughter of T. A. Hooper, of No. 719 Piedmont avenue. While she is not overburdened with a too serious purpose in life, still she has an interest that keeps her wide awake and in good company. Miss Hooper is one of an ever increasing number of Atlanta girls who have taken up the art of photography, and to her there is nothing else quite so interesting, quite so satisfying, quite so profitable, since she first owned a Kodak. She has taken pictures, thousands of pictures, since she first owned a Kodak. "Oh, I don't know how many," she said. "There are several books full of her pictures of subjects that strike her notion of anything that comes within the range of her Kodak. And out of her father she has drawn for herself a sort of philosophy that would make it seem indeed worth to go ahead with a Kodak.

"You acquire an interest in everything that comes in front of your Kodak," she said. "And it gives you a feeling of sympathy and understanding for things about you, for everything in the world you really see. Friends become friends, or life once you fix their faces and places in the photograph. You can never forget them, no matter if they leave you, because forever. There is no pleasure in the world quite so keen as that of fixing over the pages of a book of pictures taken years before.

FARMERS ADVISED TO DIVERSIFY, BUT BANKS ASK COTTON SECURITY

Southern Agriculturists Are Also Told to Economize, Though Their Hands Are Tied--Meanwhile the Merchants Seek Rural Trade.

By M. A. ROSE.

Now that the Georgia farmer is coming in the profits of a year of high and for the first time since 1911 has comparative plenty, the kindly gentleman who always stands ready to give the farmer advice are extravagantly talkative.

"Economize," says the banker to the farmer. "Remember that in 1911 you made a big crop and spent your plentiful money with a lavish hand, so this year with a short crop you get the sting of poverty. Your money was gone, your credit curtailed, you were in the grip of the grainshopper in winter, when you must have been an aut."

"Then comes the agricultural expert. "Diversify," is his motto. "Don't plant much cotton. Live off your farm. You should raise everything you and your animals need to eat, and you won't have to borrow. The overbearing man is rubbing your farm and impoverishing you. Grow corn, potatoes, beans, cow beans, field peas and vegetables, oak, cattle and alfalfa."

"Won't Let How Follow Advice." Good advice from benevolence. The only trouble with it is that the banker will not let the farmer diversify and the merchant will not let him economize.

When the Georgia farmer comes to town and asks for credit for his year's supplies, or asks for a loan from the bank, the first question he is asked is: "How much cotton are you planting this spring?"

"Five acres," says the farmer. "I planted eight last year, but I'm going to diversify like the experts tell me to this season. I'll put the rest of my place into corn and potatoes, and—"

"He never gets any farther. "I'm not interested in that," says the merchant or the banker. "You'll lose of credit will be $100 through the season. You share the risk and you take the whole farm into cotton, just as you have for the past twenty years of longer, if he is older."

MRS. GOOBBEE'S NEW TRIAL PLEA UP NEXT MONTH

Judge Hammond Defers Arguments in Behalf of Millen Double Slayer.

ATLANTA, Oct. 18.—Judge Henry C. Hammond today postponed until early in November the hearing of arguments on the motion for a new trial for Mrs. Edna Perkins Goobee, convicted of the murder of Judge Walter Goobee, her former husband, and his young wife, Mrs. Florence Boyer Goobee.

The hearing had been set for next Monday, when the hearing was to take place. Mrs. Goobee will be represented by J. H. Stafford, of Swainsboro, her hearing counsel, and Messrs. DeLoach and Reynolds, of Swainsboro, Millen and Augustin, respectively, associate counsel. Solicitor General R. Lee Moore, of Waynesboro, will represent the State. Since her trial and conviction four weeks ago Mrs. Goobee has been in the Jenkins County jail at Millen, where she has been constantly attended by her young daughter, Miss Sarah Goobee. The daughter's mother's devotion to her mother has excited the admiration of everyone who is familiar with the case, and all who attended the trial at Millen in September expressed the deepest sympathy for her.

It is expected that the principal arguments for the new trial will be that the new evidence has been discovered, that the defense was rushed into a trial without having time to make preparation; that at the time of the trial two valuable witnesses for the defendant could not be secured, and that Congressman Thomas W. Hartwick, one of the defendant's counsel, was unable to be present because of pressing duties in Washington.

Arguments for the defense also will argue that the grand jury which indicted Mrs. Goobee was not a properly constituted grand jury, since J. Lee Moore, the Solicitor General, who presented the case to the grand jury was residing in the Middle Church, whereas Jenkins County at the last session of the Legislature was placed in the Augusta Circuit.

Judge Hammond overruled a demurrer to the indictment, a motion for continuance and a plea in abatement before the case was entered into at Millen, and ordered it to proceed, stating at the time that he thought defendant's counsel had had sufficient time to prepare the case.

In the event Judge Hammond declines to grant a new trial the case will be appealed to the supreme court, and unless it decides to send the case back to the Superior Court of Jenkins County, the defendant will be compelled to serve the sentence imposed by the court and jury, and spend the remainder of her life in the penitentiary.

GARDEN SAGE DARKENS GRAY HAIR SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL

Restores Its Luster, Prevents Scalp Itching, Dandruff and Falling Hair.

Send Your Roll or Pack (Don't Send Any Money) To Me for Speedy, Efficient KODAK FINISHING IN 8 HOURS THAT'S MY BUSINESS and I'm as Busy as a Bee—Write Shelley Levy, Manager The Kodak "Cloth", 118 Peachtree St., Candler Building, right now.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brushing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. While it is a money, tedious task it will repay those whose hair is turning gray, faded and streaked. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur restores its appearance a hundred fold. Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyneth Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and luster of your hair and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Everybody chooses "Wyneth" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge of soft bread and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which is quick but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant. It certainly helps folks look years younger and twice as attractive. Sage & Sulphur—Ad.

A Gain of 2100% In the Last 10 Years FOR LYNCHBURG

In the Manufacture of Men's Fine Shoes

1899	40,000 Pairs Shoes	1909	880,000 Pairs Shoes
------	--------------------	------	---------------------

No wonder the National Shoe Wholesalers' Association Monthly Bulletin says that the growth of the shoe business of Lynchburg is "unparalleled in the history of the shoe industry."

There is little wonder that the 200 shoe salesmen who have just left LYNCHBURG with 1,000 sample trunks containing 250,000 samples are kept busy taking orders for LYNCHBURG Shoes.

It would take a train of cars three miles long to carry the shipment of shoes that went out of LYNCHBURG last month alone.

LYNCHBURG Shoes appeal alike to Southern pride and the Southern purse. Not only will the purchase of a LYNCHBURG Shoe help home industry and keep Southern money circulating in the South to the benefit of the South, but you are helping yourself to the best shoe value that that amount of money will buy for you.

When You Buy LYNCHBURG Shoes You Are Patronizing Southern Industry From Which Every Southerner Must Eventually Benefit

New Singers and Dances Are Billed at the Columbia

The White Way Musical Comedy Company at the Columbia Theater will offer an attraction this week that is rather more pretentious than anything it has yet essayed. GEORGIA WOMAN HAS BABY DRESS OF BALKAN CZAR

Mrs. A. M. Worthington Cherishes Memento Given Her by Aunt. Ruler's Governors.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 18.—Mrs. A. M. Worthington, of Savannah, can not attribute to the words "babies dress" King Ferdinand of Bulgaria. She can not think of him as the pretentious warrior that he appears to almost everybody else. Somewhere she can see him only as a baby wearing blue and pink ribbons and silk coats. Because Mrs. Worthington has a suit of Ferdinand's baby clothes, a blue, outfit, she had become today to the light of his woman's world prominence. Her maternal aunt, Miss Marie Dunningham, was governor to Ferdinand when he was a young prince and long before thoughts of the bloody Balkan war came to him. She took suit as memento. For many years Mrs. Worthington lived with the royal family. When she left Bulgaria several years ago for her home in Ireland, she took a number of mementos, among them a suit of clothes. She took also the sentimental and sentimental gifts and gratitude from the royal family and the reward for her devotion to the king and queen during the war. The suit of clothes came into the possession of her niece, Mrs. Worthington, who came to Savannah a short time ago. The clothes of the baby prince are of exquisite fineness of fabric, with hand-sewn details of marvelous distinctness. There is a narrow lace edge to the neck and sleeves, which is the only adornment except for a crown, almost under the left arm. The neck is of white silk, lined with gold, intricate that the wearer was a boy. Its scalloped edges are finished with a blue and gold. The dress is of plain, much paler than the other, of baby who she wears in wealthy American families.

Detectives in Express Case Trail Each Other

Mistakes Happen When 160, Nearly. All Disguised, Hunt $72,000 Robber.

Continued From Page 1. This Section of the female detective was quite sure she had spotted the thief in the person of one of the greatest detectives in the case. The network is laid and it may be held tight for years. Five detectives were practically without sleep for three days in shadowing the trail of one employee who was hastening on the heels of his mother. Washington was strong that they had suddenly fallen upon the guilty man, only to burst on a hoiday when the real facts became known. History of the search so far has been one of trials. There have been midnight dashes in automobiles on sudden trip. There have been silent shadowings of men who proved to be nothing but lovers. More than one clandestine meeting between suspects has been discovered. Love Affairs Are Revealed. One prisoner at the finish of his love affair doubled back in a town twenty miles away. Three sleuths boarded the train with him. He dropped from the train a short distance from the town as he did so the trio of detectives dropped likewise. He made his way swiftly through a wooded path and entered a house, the door opening quietly for him. The detective entered the house and behind a doorway saw the man later the man who left the house, walked back to the track and a few minutes later the man who had just moved freight back to his work. Two more tips of the detective managed to catch the train. The man who saw him ahead in his own home. "We have run across more love affairs on this case than you can shake a stick at," one officer declared. The express company employee, as well as those of the railroad company are depressed by the robbery and they are afraid to leave, fearful that they are afraid to leave, fearful that it attract suspicion to them.

WOMAN PLEAS AS LAWYER FOR NEGRO SERVANT

Mrs. Virginia Bizzell Parks Cross-Examines Witnesses Against Butler Caught in Raid.

Mrs. Virginia Bizzell Parks of No. 225 Forrest avenue, appeared in Police Court in the role of lawyer Saturday afternoon. She held the unusual interest of the court and the usual matinee audience as she cross-examined witnesses and dramatically defended her brother, Wyatt LePage, who was taken in a raid on the rear of No. 4 Alexander street Friday night by Policemen Gorman, Ryan, Frazier, Cooper and Cason. Mrs. Parks has never studied law, nor been admitted to the bar, but she conducted the case of Wyatt with the skill and ease of an experienced attorney. She cross-examined the various witnesses, and asked questions after question in rapid fire order at the prosecuting officers in an effort to weaken the case. However the case was against her. The Butler was bound over to the State courts in bond of $100 on charge of carrying a concealed pistol. Mrs. Parks accepted the default willingly, and confidently announced that she would see clear her "colored" in the State courts.

COST OF LIVING INVESTIGATORS TO VISIT FARMS

Banking and Currency Subcommittee Will Inquire Into Rural Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—A subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee has been given the authority of the House to investigate throughout the country to travel agricultural conditions, with a view to framing recommendations for the establishment of a farm credit system.

The Democratic party, like the other two parties, is pledged to an attempt to make living cheaper. The leaders of the present dominant party do not like the proposed price for the coming winter. The Democrats figure that if eggs are to be 15 cents a dozen and beef $1 a pound, the farm bill cuts will amount to very little in effect.

When Democratic Congressmen talk about the future of the party among the farmers, the constant word is that if Democracy can find some way to cut the cost of living without cutting wages the party will remain in power.

For some time Secretary of Agriculture Houston has been directing the work of investigators in the field of high prices. There is a belief among some of the scientists that the farms of America can be made to produce three or four times as much as they are producing now.

The Government is trying to find out how to give the average agricultural farmer a better chance of increasing the value of his land. The investigation of transportation also is a vital one.

Pennsylvania Girl Disinherited for Marrying Poor Movie Show Singer—Grandfather Aids.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 18.—Society, which was stunned when it learned that Miss G. H. aged 25, daughter of John H. Murphy, millionaire oil operator, had eloped and married Charles P. Jans, a penniless singer at a local moving picture theater, was further shocked when it was learned that Mrs. Jans had been cast off by her family on account of her hasty marriage.

Heartbreaker's Trail Ends at the Altar

Woman Who Kept New Orleans Man 'Waiting at the Church' Weds in Illinois.

AURORA, Ill., Oct. 18.—The wedding here of Miss Louise Klasseger to Jacob Eye, an Aurora merchant, has closed the career of a heart-breaker.

Throughout the country, it is said, Miss Klasseger has left a trail of bitter heartbreakers.

In New Orleans, two years ago Michael Kerriagan nearly won this traveling coquette. Kerriagan, it is said, wasn't long on looks, but was there with eloquence.

"I don't love you, but I like the way you look. Yes, I'll marry you," is the trend of the young woman's acceptance to a flowery proposal.

The date was set for April 25, 1908. Kerriagan was left waiting at the church.

GRASS VALLEY, Oct. 18.—The lookout station of the National Forest Service at Pike's Peak, in the Tahoe forest, is located in the top of a tall pine instead of the regulation tower.

A circular platform eight feet across has been built at a point 80 feet from the ground, and thence the watchman spends his days and nights on the lookout for fire.

AUGUSTA LEEVE WILL NOT BREAK, SAYS ENGINEER

Little or No Danger to City From Flood When Completed—Contractors Pushing Work.

AUGUSTA, Oct. 18.—Now that Augusta's levee is becoming more and more realistic every day, as more than half a dozen contractors are hard at work on it and the contracts already let amount to over $600,000, the question is being asked very often, is there any chance of the levee breaking, and if so, what would happen?

Walter Winfield, Commissioner of Public Works, city engineer and a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, was asked about the possibility of the levee breaking, and he gave a very interesting interview to The Sunday American.

"Of course, there is nothing impossible," said Mr. Winfield, "for it is not within the power of the human mind to conceive of the human hand to execute a task of engineering which would be impracticable, the forces of nature, once they are set in determined motion, but we are building the levee so strong as to be perfectly safe against any flood which has ever visited the city."

TEAMSTER FINDS $1,485 IN COAT HE WORE ALL DAY

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18.—After driving all day with a coat he found in the street on the wagon seat beside him, a teamster saw the owner of the coat draw $1,485 from its pockets.

The teamster, from papers in the pockets, learned the coat belonged to Henry Sings, proprietor of a saloon, and returned it to its owner.

"I sure did not know all that money was in there when I was driving around with it," said the teamster. A $1 note rewarded him.

SUFFRAGE FIGHT WILL BE WAGED BY METHODISTS

Woman Question To Be Important Issue at South Georgia Conference in Macon.

MAISON, Oct. 18.—The suffrage question will be one of the principal items on the agenda of the annual South Georgia Methodist conference which will convene in Macon during the week ending November 1st. Women leaders of numerous churches of the conference are demanding that the women members of the church be vested with the franchise with all the rights of laity—that is, that they be allowed to vote in the church conferences and to have an equal representation at the general conference.

The conference last year this proposition was defeated after a contest that lasted several hours. The leaders of the opposition claimed that the project was only an encroachment of the vote for women movement and that they sought it on that ground. The vote was sufficiently close however, and to give the women and their advocates encouragement a resolution was passed to have the question brought up at the next conference.

Another interesting contest will be the election of a moderator for the year. The word "Episcopal" from the name of the church. The last general conference gave the authority to the various annual conferences to vote in this change, and it is probable that the South Georgia Methodists will follow it. However, some of the older members of the conference are opposed to a change now, and have been known by the title for so many years ago, and will vigorously resist it.

Child Is Scientific Experiment Trained 5 Years by Eugenic Rules

Mrs. William Noyes and her son, Leonard, five years old, in the child's workshop.

Wife of Professor Noyes Keeps Minute Record of Son's Development.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—A eugenic experiment, now five and one-half years old, is Leonard Noyes, son of Professor William Noyes, of Columbia University, and his wife. From the time of the child's birth until the present Mrs. Anna G. Noyes, his mother, has kept the most minute diary that contains practically a record of every act, every indication of character or disposition, which has been noted by this child.

The child would not be handicapped by a city environment. The Noyes took up residence in Leonia, on the New Jersey side of the Palisades, and there in a big conservatory of sun-room, the little boy and several of his friends are being educated on a scientific plan.

Mrs. Noyes says this is an era of individualism, and that it should start at the very beginning of life. "Given individual training. I want my boy and his companions to have as long the same care and time spent upon them that idiots and children of arrested development receive who at present are the only children who are given special and individual training.

"Public schools keep a child's mind back to the level of the duller scholar in the class, and that's why we left New York, where my boy would have been in a class of children who in a school where the witless and dulls had to be closed in order that the street traffic would not interfere with the teacher hearing their lessons.

WIDOW TO BARE WOUNDED HEART TO GAIN ESTATE

Mrs. Hannah Wildin Says Young Real Estate Operator Promised Marriage, Then Left Her.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Hannah Wildin, wealthy Camden (N. J.) widow, is in Savannah prepared to go on the stand in Superior Court Tuesday and bare her heart to a jury to recover property she alleges Francis Greene, defendant young real estate operator, got from her by preying on her affections. Greene can not be located, although his friends say he will arrive in time to contest the suit.

"I met him several years ago when I was in the South," said Mrs. Wildin, who has every appearance of refinement and culture. "He was making a gas company near New Orleans. He was later recommended to me as a young man of keen business ability, and I sought to employ him to manage my estate, which brings in $4,000 annually. He agreed to do it for $10,000 a year. I thought it was high, but he assured me his investments would net me enough to meet such a salary.

"After the first year he began to make violent love to me. He was 45 years my junior, so I very naturally rejected him. He insisted he was serious and wanted me to marry him, and finally I consented. We came to Savannah, where we were to build our home.

"I gave him the money to buy a beautiful piece of property at Warrenton on the bank of the river, and to build a model cottage. When it was completed I moved there to live, and he used to come to see me. One day he told me that he had gone to New Orleans on business. He stayed for some time, but I never heard from him. I went into court and got an agreement whereby he was to dispose of some of the property until the matter was settled in the courts."

AKRON DECIDES TO OPERATE ITS OWN CAR LINES

Ohio City to Issue $225,000 Bonds and Break Grip of Monopoly.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 18.—A recommendation by an Akron Council committee that $225,000 bonds be issued at once to start a municipal railway system was unanimously adopted by the Council. Akron thus is in the lead in the movement to operate its own street railway system. Favorable sentiment is widespread among citizens.

The action marks the "link" of two years of fruitless negotiations with the Northern Ohio Traction Co. to obtain six miles of extension to the present 25-mile line of city tracks. Over 25,000 citizens daily have walked distances to reach cars because the company would not extend its lines. There have been no new tracks laid for years.

Did Wife Die First? $100,000 in Balance

Aged Couple Who Froze to Death on Pike's Peak Leave Peculiar Will.

COLORADO SPRING, Oct. 18.—The disposition of an estate valued between $75,000 and $100,000 hinges on the point whether or not Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Skinner, an aged couple who froze to death while walking up Pike's Peak two years ago, actually died at the same time.

Each made his bequesting their property to the other, with the provision that it should finally go to a boy living in Dallas not related to them. Relatives claim both Mr. and Mrs. Skinner died at the same time and involving the point the dead person could not transfer property.

AMERICAN CARS FIND READY USE ACROSS BORDER

Canada Still Good Patron, Despite Foreign Competition—Big Sums for Good Roads.

DETROIT, Oct. 18.—The American motor car manufacturer is more than making his own in the Dominion of Canada, according to the Canadian ambassador who has arrived in Detroit after a "business trip" through Canada.

The American market is going to get out in the Dominion because of the superior qualities and "advantages" of the American field at the present time in between the American, British and Canadian manufacturers. So far the Canadian market has had the hardest kind of sledding, due to the scarcity of parts and material and this adds considerably to the cost of the car.

Splendid Roads Built

Improvements of American cars into Canada have steadily increased in the past five years. The country is generally far in the advance of the United States in the matter of road improvement, and a magnificent new highway is being built in the Province of Ontario and Montreal is also equipped with a splendid new highway.

Headed by a car on which a streamer carried the name of the Buick Agency, there were the latest 1914 models in cars and trucks, and there were models of several years ago. One old-style motor truck appeared to be in good running order, though seven or eight years old.

Tourist on Long Trip Raps Georgia Roads; Finds Incompetence in Handling of Labor

Gabriel S. Jacobs, of Chicago, at the wheel of his Buick, Mrs. Jacobs at his side, and Master from Chicago. The trip was made on 40 gallons of gasoline, which is 25 miles to the gallon. North Georgia mountains were rough, as the story will tell.

Gabriel S. Jacobs Encounters Highways That Have Been Grossly Neglected—Travels With Wife and Child From Chicago on Forty Gallons of Gasoline.

"Right here in Georgia I found some road conditions that were startling," declared Gabriel S. Jacobs, who had just completed a tour from Chicago to Atlanta. "I found the roads in general in a very poor state of repair, and in some places they were almost impassable. The highways in North Georgia are in a state of semi-completion. Some of them have been worked and let in, but in many places they are still in the hands of the contractor. The trouble is that the ground in charge of road construction are either incompetent or careless. At any rate, they are not accomplishing results. The work is frequently worse than the fact that the State places hardly any money on the disposal of the worst of them.

"It is not the tourist, like myself, who suffers most from such conditions. It is the farmer who is obliged to travel miles to market his produce. The very life of the State suffers from such conditions. It is the farmer who is dependent on the quick delivery of foodstuffs. A little thought by the people here would be well expended."

GRAY FOX CAR IS ENTERED IN SPEEDWAY RACE

Frank P. Fox, Indianapolis Sportsman, Is Third to Sign Lists.

The entry by Frank P. Fox, an Indianapolis sportsman, of his specially constructed flyer, known as the Gray Fox, in the near Indianapolis 20-mile race at the Motor Speedway, marks the fourth car to register for that event practically a year ahead of time.

Though his car bears the same name and approximately the same exterior as the one that Fox says it is a vastly improved affair. The chief alteration is found in the motor, which has been enlarged from 28.5 to 41.1 cubic inches by boring out the cylinders. The stroke remains unchanged. Final measurements are 4 by 4.14 inches, practically a square. With a lightening in weight all around of more than 300 pounds, Fox claims he will have one of the speediest cars on the track.

Last year the car finished sixth, running steadily and consistently, though not at great speed, all the way. Its average was 62.8 miles per hour for the entire distance, including stops. Once it has been rebuilt, Fox claims that it will be able to average 100 miles per hour.

NATIONAL HAS A BANNER YEAR UP TO SEPT. 1

Annual Report Praises Management for Good Showing—Old Officers Are All Re-elected.

At the recent meeting of the stockholders of the National Motor Vehicle Company the officials of the company reported that the fiscal year closing September 1 was the best both in sales and profits in this company's fourteen years of manufacturing.

The year just closed partially answered a common question among business men: "What about the motor car business?" The National's annual report declares that at a time in his many years of association with the National company he has seen such a steady, constant growth as during the last year. The sales of cars, therefore, are numerous and healthy a condition as it ought to be.

No one knows how such rumors start, and no doubt there is need for improvement in some localities. It is simply to the conclusion that because some companies have suffered misfortune, therefore, the entire industry is "in bad," is a mistake.

THE WHITE HOUSE

THE POLLY PEACHES

ALTHOUGH the family and all concerned are busy with the White House wedding, we hear that it will be a most magnificent affair which is not a mere affair of the usual kind, but a wedding of a special kind—a wedding of a variety of the flower which is being given by the Government's horticulturists and which will be christened the "Polly Peaches." From one source we learned that the flowers to be used are of the "Polly Peach" and that thousands are being ready to bloom for the White House.

It is authoritatively stated, however, that the same peaches which are marked all sources of information concerning the wedding is maintained as to the color, size and variety. When I read, some time ago, that Jessie Wilson's dress, at least that part of it known by the name of "Polly"—was to be made of linen hand woven in the South, I almost wondered if a better grade of any linen been woven by hand in the South.

Now I understand that this linen is to be made of the choicest and finest linen obtainable—white linen is not being woven by hand in the South—and that it is to be embellished with exquisite lace, including real laces. In order to insure the timely completion of our grandiose and well as the excellence of construction, rarely found in the most "transient" I quote that last sentence verbatim from the letter from Washington, and I leave it to you to read it. It is a most interesting and a most useful one.

In the final analysis we really know nothing just yet of the wedding details which interest the United States, but we do know that the bride is to wear white satin and the bridegroom that christenings are to decorate the White House, and that Jessie Wilson is to be her sister's maid of honor, facts not strictly official or unexpected, as you will see.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD COVIL
The former South Georgia planter have taken apartments at the Washington Hotel. It is reported to be happy as the proverbial tick does one's heart. The romance of this young couple and their brilliant engagement or rather almost marriage is the exciting feature of the season at Washington.

They have been seen out by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Manning, in which they had the honor to announce the marriage. Mr. Manning has, everything he could do, to make the young couple as happy as the proverbial tick does one's heart.

A TYPICAL of the gentle Southern grand dame is Mrs. Lippincott, Adelaide Ellis, one of our popular hostesses. Mrs. Lippincott is the kind of a grand mother who were given to the world of lavender with quantities of old lace in the evening. She is not only a woman with a short white linen frock on the day-time, but she is a woman who is altogether charming with a claim that she is a young woman.

For many years as the head of the famous Lippincott, an institution which has been a part of the life of Georgia, all of whom will be interested in the world of lavender. She is a woman who is altogether charming with a claim that she is a young woman.

It is a most interesting and a most useful one.

LA SALLE SHIP, LOST 200 YEARS, FOUND AT LAST

Hull of French Explorer's Vessel Dug Up by Dredges at Saginaw Bay.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The French explorer's vessel, the La Salle, which was lost in Saginaw Bay, has been found near Saginaw Bay, and will be taken to the State Museum. For more than 200 years the whereabouts of the La Salle has been one of the mysteries of history.

The La Salle was built in France in 1685. It was a three-masted vessel of 150 tons. It was commanded by the French explorer, René-Robert Cavelier, Sieur de La Salle. It was on its way to the Gulf of Mexico when it was wrecked in Saginaw Bay.

Southerners at Washington

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. John Temple Graves, Mrs. Laura Graves and the young children of the family arrived at Washington yesterday from New York and are at their residence, No. 1114 G Street.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Nolan announced the engagement of their daughter, Helen Ruth, to John W. Carter, of Jacksonville, Fla. The marriage will take place October 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Howry and Miss Mary Henry have returned to Washington from Jamestown, R. I., where they had a cottage for the week. Miss Elizabeth Howry, who spent most of the summer making visits in the North, is now in New York, where she has again taken up the study of music.

Miss Katherine Ellis of Atlanta, Ga., who was the guest of Mrs. George C. Howry last week, and who is now visiting her aunt, Mrs. Sherie Carter, near Baltimore, was the guest of honor in that city yesterday at a charmingly appointed luncheon party given by Mrs. Allen W. Preston, daughter of the Mayor and Mrs. Preston. At each of the twelve plates were old-fashioned row-gays, with fancy lace paper holders, quite after the fashion of grandmother days, and the guests were the first debutante contemporaries of Miss Preston, who made the luncheon the first debutante affair of the season.

ACTOR GIVES SHOW FOR JUST ONE—A WOMAN

Dancer Goes Through Performance to Accommodate Lone Patron Who Wished to See Act.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—With only Mrs. J. Chandler, of No. 20 Deyen Street, Cambridge, as the sole member of her audience, Wallace McCutcheon, who has several dances to the play at the Tremont Theatre this week, had the auditorium lighted up and gave his complete program on the stage.

The theater was nearly empty after it had been announced that no performance could be given when the actress was seen crying bitterly and saying to see McCutcheon.

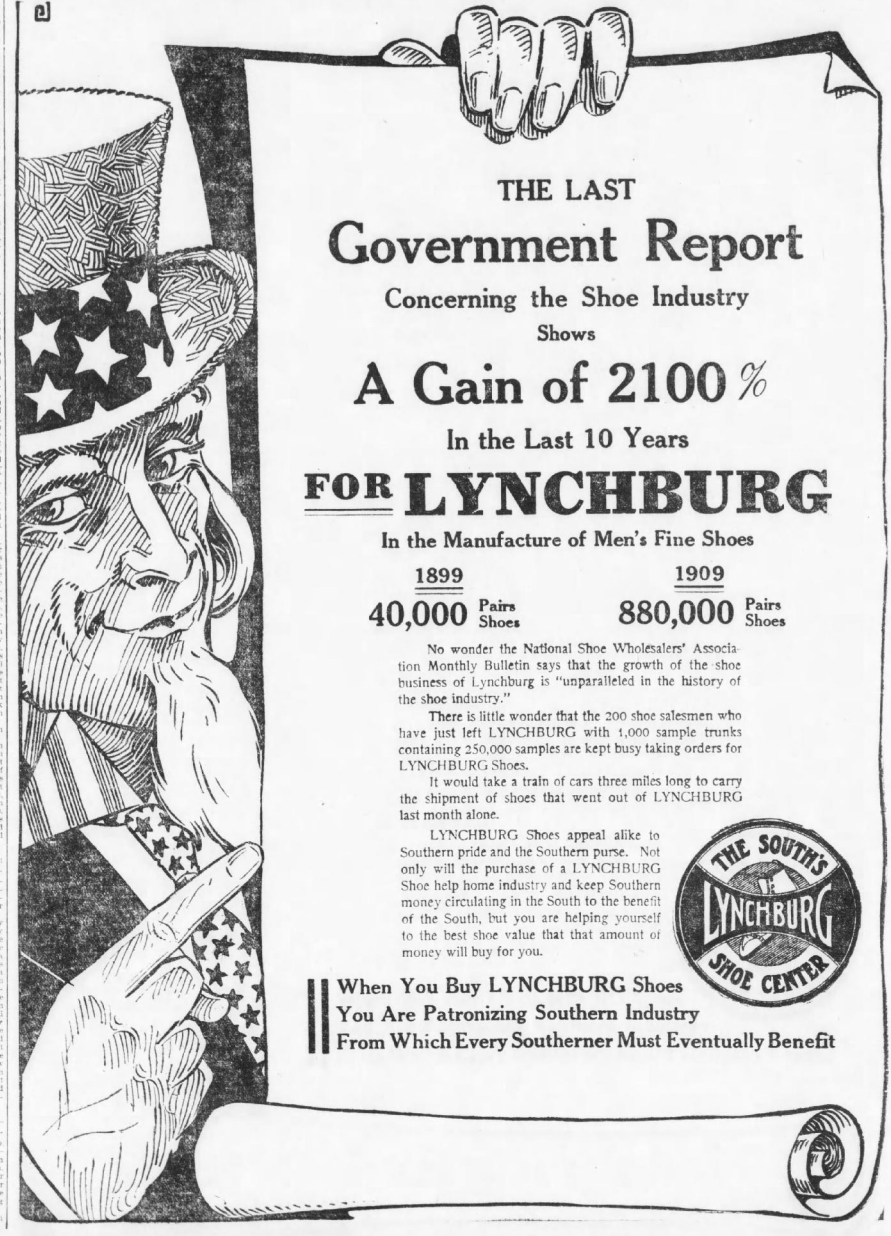

She came from the dressing room and, finding with the woman, found she had come from Cambridge with the one purpose of seeing the dance. She is supporting an invalid sister at her home, by teaching dancing and wanted to learn the new steps.

As no performance was given, and she had given up her class to see McCutcheon, she was the loser on all sides. It was then that McCutcheon with five persons playing in the orchestra went through the entire sixteen minutes of dancing called for in the act. Mrs. Chandler sat in a front row, hazy and thankful.

THE LAST Government Report Concerning the Shoe Industry Shows A Gain of 2100% In the Last 10 Years FOR LYNCHBURG

1899 40,000 Pairs Shoes 1909 880,000 Pairs Shoes

No wonder the National Shoe Wholesalers' Association Monthly Bulletin says that the growth of the shoe business of Lynchburg is "unparalleled in the history of the shoe industry."

There is little wonder that the 200 shoe salesmen who have just left LYNCHBURG with 1,000 sample trunks containing 250,000 samples are kept busy taking orders for LYNCHBURG Shoes.

It would take a train of cars three miles long to carry the shipment of shoes that went out of LYNCHBURG last month alone.

LYNCHBURG Shoes appeal alike to Southern pride and the Southern purse. Not only will the purchase of a LYNCHBURG Shoe help home industry and keep Southern money circulating in the South to the benefit of the South, but you are helping yourself to the best shoe value that that amount of money will buy for you.

Merchants and Manufacturers' Bulletin

Value of Good Customer's Stressed by Col. Ragan

COLLECTIONS to date are 100 percent better with the Ragan Sales Company than they were in the same period last year, according to Col. WILLIE E. RAGAN, who never saw anything like it. He attributes the firm's success in collections largely to the fact that he has very reliable customers, many of whom have been with us for years. Collections are beginning to come in and are helping trade wonderfully. The former is selling this year rather than holding, and he is fast paying off debts and putting the money into circulation.

A financial journal in New York recently telegraphed Col. Ragan for his views concerning the probable effect on business of tariff legislation, to which Col. Ragan replied briefly, "I think trade conditions will be very good."

Merchants and manufacturers of Atlanta have shown a great deal of interest in the convention of the Southern Textile Association, which will bring about 600 cotton mill manufacturers and overseers here November 21 and 22. Plans are being made to entertain the guests mainly only by the local Chamber of Commerce and the Convention Bureau, but by individuals in the cotton industry as well.

BRIGHT TRADE ERA SEEN BY E. L. ADAMS

Well Known Wholesale Grocer Predicts Prosperity for All. Praises American.

By E. L. Adams, President of the Credit Men's Association and the E. L. Adams Co.

It is gratifying to the merchant and business community of the South that Atlanta newspapers have realized the importance of fostering more definitely commercial activities in our midst, and I congratulate the Sunday American on the inauguration of its Merchants and Manufacturers' Bulletin.

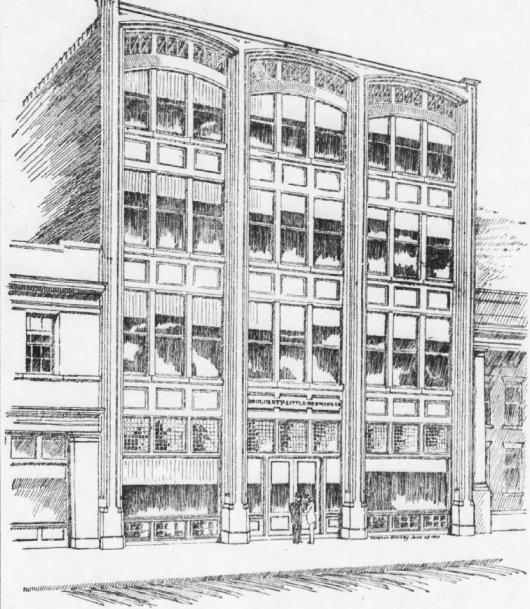

I feel that this is the time for all agencies to join hands for the promotion of the financial growth of our section of the Southeast. Providence is smiling on us in such a way as to furnish compensation for the occasional dull times in the past. Two great economic problems have occupied the minds of the South and the world—currency. A wise Democratic administration has already settled the first of these in the interest of the common people, and provided for the future of the nation rather than in favor of Wall Street.

Bountiful harvests, which are being a boon, and the settlement of disturbing political questions and unanimity in pulling together for the good of the Southern States, have combined to assure more than temporary prosperity. The South and Georgia in particular, is enjoying a new era. Prosperity and wealth—the farmers are exercising more intelligence and thereby making "two blades of grass grow where but one grew before."

If all the factors occupying a declining and uncertain future, assembling and distributing products "will" get a willing shoulder to the wheel, we shall realize more good things than we have ever enjoyed before.

The sunny American can and no doubt will be a force in bringing about the best of all trade sections all success.

Rain Coat and Umbrella In Hot Race for Favor

THERE was once a tide in the rain-coat affairs of men, according to W. O. Steele, manager of the All-Star Manufacturing Company, who led to shelter against trunk umbrellas and weather-proof suits of armor. A century or so ago the man along a street in the rain had a crude umbrella over him. He was laughed at. Ten years ago hundreds of thousands of Americans could be seen with raised umbrellas, and they were not laughed at because the umbrella had made umbrella-carrying legitimate.

The custom carrier is usually a well-to-do citizen, who will not strike you down on the highway at midnight.

Likewise, contends Mr. Steele, who sells raincoats and not umbrellas, the wearer of a raincoat is entitled to respectful consideration, because he usually has more or less of a home around, and the raincoat as an institution has come to stay. It is purely a matter of opinion as to whether or not the advent of the raincoat has cut down the sale of umbrellas. Probably not. It simply means that a larger percentage of people are keeping out of the rain, which leads us back to the original proposition that the All-Star Manufacturing Company carries a good line of raincoats.

"Wait until our buyer, M. J. Mizer gets back from New York," said Mr. Steele, "and we will get all the details then."

Force increased 50 per cent. Since the 1st of July, The Ragan Sales Company has increased 50 per cent, and is still making to keep up with the cotton business. J. K. Orr, head of the firm, reports shoe manufacturers throughout the country to be working to the limit, and is prospect of a

Woman Matches Stockings With Her Hat and Dress

WOMAN always prims in a matter of dress, but she is as inexorable as a rule that is as inexorable as that which requires her to match her hat. It is compulsory to the other side, since it holds that her hat must match her suit and her hose must match both. Conventional hose no longer occupies the once proud position, but has given way to solid colors as varied as the lines of the rainbow. True, black is still worn, and will always be, but Kelly greens, American Beauties, cardinals, grays and smokes have cut in on the popularity of the other medium.

"Wife is a stunning red" dress is found there will the cardinal stockings be and frequently carried along with. Where the choice is lady blue, thus also the hose.

This is a tendency which if it Yale has observed in handling buyers at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt's. He says dealers dominant in suits and dresses and this demand originating with the woman customer, who found bewitching effects in sameness of pigment. Man staid feet and likewise wore stockings in the cool northern countries of Europe he strapped bear-skins around his feet and sought to keep his feet warm. This fact concerning suggested a hatted apparel in Scotland in the early part of the sixteenth century, and French influences added to the creation of the modern stocking, which woman stockings wear and its flannel and must provide about the modern stocking is found at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt's. Mixed colors are not good form and dress-dresses is possible.

The concern mentioned above also presents good inquiry for articles and hose. Kelly greens and navy blues are most desirable. Velvet hose are going fast. Fifty dozen were received last night. They are usually purchased for quick sale. This is why we order express shipment."

Hats To Be Smaller And Less in Price

Here's good news for women who are interested in buying new hats: Reduction in size and the overproduction of hats in Japan and the Philippines have combined to reduce prices considerably, according to Clarence H. Palmer, manager of the Max Knits millinery establishment.

Hats that formerly wholesaled at $16.50 to $20 a dozen will hereafter be $12 to $18 a dozen. Trimming will, of course, run the price up in the retail market, but Mr. Palmer thinks the reduction will obtain all along the line.

After four years of larger hats, women are to wear smaller and smaller ones. The hat is first very small and gradually grows very large, when it drops back to small again. Or it starts very large and goes the other way, which is the same in the end.

Grocers and Butchers Are Waiting For the Promised Autumn Feast

Fully a hundred local retail grocers and butchers are waiting anxiously for the coming feast of day of Atlanta-made products, which a T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' Association, will set before them. The date of the feast has not been determined, but Mr. Camp declares that no time or expense will be spared to make the occasion a success.

"We expect to give a dinner this fall," declared Mr. Camp, "that will furnish a great many surprises. Everything on the table, from tobacco to toothpicks, will be made in Atlanta, and the display is expected to be a very creditable one."

The grocers and butchers gathered Tuesday night in the Rhodes Building to enjoy a made-in-Atlanta lunch prepared by Mr. Camp and his staff. There were home-made pork, home-made condiments, home-made lumps, home-made vinegar and everything else that can be made in Atlanta.

The occasion made the grocers and butchers think of the annual Georgia exhibit, the Piedmont Hotel exhibits give to their friends, and every man present promised to do everything possible to National the same and fame of Atlanta-made products. Among the firms contributing were the Dixie Packing and Preserving Company, Jones Brothers, Frank E. Block Company, Richmond Bros., Bakins Company, the Summit Sausage and Candy Company and the Weston Manufacturing Company.

RICKEY WILL BE BROWN MANAGER FOR TEN YEARS

Win or Lose, Colonel Hedges Will Continue Services of Ex-Collegian.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 18.—Branch Rickey will be manager of the St. Louis Browns for 10 years, Colonel Hedges has announced.

While Hedges declares that the ex-collegian would pilot the men of Shoemaker's Park for a period of ten years, the actual pilot, according to a word about the situation when the deal was made, is Rickey. Rickey doesn't care. Rickey would like to be at the bottom of the league and he would like to be manager the next season. He won't be third.

Manager Rickey yesterday declared his reasons for not permitting General Hedges, a noted manager to appear with a roster of seven million of the deal. "I want to do the very best for the St. Louis Browns," Rickey said.

Colonel Hedges and the ex-collegian, Rickey, have daily sessions. The men speak about the conditions of the club, the character of the players, and other essential subjects. Rickey is a baseball man, Hedges is a business man.

WHAT IS "PUBLIC OPINION"?

Copyright, 1913, by the Hearst Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

EDWARD A. ALEXANDER, asks: "What is public opinion?" and writes a good letter that you will find in this article.

Public Opinion is the power that controls the world, in the long run. It is not expressed by any individual, any newspaper or any mob. But IT IS FELT, and, while it is often insulted and defied, it rules in the long run.

From time to time public opinion takes definite, crystallized form and shape in laws, religion, moral doctrines, proverbs, fables, et cetera.

The Ten Commandments are an expression of public opinion. "Thou shalt not steal" is public opinion crystallized.

Public opinion does not mean selfishness or wisdom, always. It means usually that which is convenient at the time and in the place.

Public opinion in China for a long while said that women must have their feet squeezed. Public opinion in the Sandwich Islands taught that boats of all kinds were "taboo" for women. It was a worse crime for a woman to get into a boat than to kill her own child. That was convenient, as it kept women from running away from one island to another, which would have been sad for their lords and masters.

Public opinion stopped wholesale infanticide and universal cannibalism—which ruled at one time.

Public opinion abolishes capital punishment in one civilized neighborhood and in another it punishes the horse thief with hanging—the safety of horses being more important than respect for justice.

Public opinion is the expression of the wisdom of the people as a whole—and that is the greatest wisdom.

But the wisdom that finds expression in public opinion is modified by conditions, by the selfish interest of the mass, and too often by the passions of the mob. It must be remembered that a mob of human beings does not express the pub-

What Is "Public Opinion"? It Is Often Mistaken, Sometimes Cruel, Frequently Ignorant---but It Is the Only Final Protection and the Greatest Power of the People lic opinion of intellect, but the hatred of passion.

The mob is in reality a hunting pack; it is a going back of human beings to the savage state of hatred and destruction.

This fact has been admirably emphasized by the late Professor Shaler, of Harvard.

Public opinion, as we have said, finds formal, definite, crystallized expression in certain laws; for instance, the laws that protect property and sanctify marriage, thus protecting women and children; the laws that prevent the use of poison in warfare and of torture in judicial investigation.

All law, all rules to which human beings submit, are simply public opinion crystallized into definite expression.

Nothing is harder to break when outgrown than public opinion that has taken the form of law and tradition.

Only public opinion itself is strong enough to destroy and break down the barriers that public opinion has created.

No man can be said to represent or to be the spokesman of public opinion.

But a man may, TEMPORARILY, become PUBLIC OPINION ITSELF, when the public in an emergency decrees that HIS opinion is wisdom.

Abraham Lincoln was public opinion in this country for awhile, luckily for the country.

Public opinion can give to a man a power that nothing can resist.

Yet, no man's power is great enough to control or defy public opinion when that opinion changes.

It was public opinion, not love of the republic, that kept Caesar from accepting the crown.

It was public opinion, not the will or the conscience or any one man, that limited our Presidential office to two terms.

George Washington was our wisest man, undoubtedly, in his day, and certainly the man to whom this country owes most.

Yet without the pressure of public opinion Washington's fame might have been spoiled, the growth of the country checked and changed. For without the expression of public opinion Washington might well have considered it his duty to the country to remain in power indefinitely.

The strongest individual that ever lived, perhaps, was Cromwell. He never lost a battle, mental or physical. But it was not the power stored away in his round head that gave him his power. It was public opinion, that had had enough of the reign of Charles and the debauchery, ignorance and misery that went with it.

Newspapers represent public opinion only in as much AS THEY EXPRESS PUBLIC OPINION HONESTLY AND ACCURATELY. A newspaper has the power of SUGGESTION. It has many readers, and can put the same thought into many minds at the same time. And that is a great power.

But a newspaper has many readers only because it expresses the feeling and THE OPINION of many citizens.

A newspaper's power is not a menace, even when it falls into vicious or misguided hands. For the most powerful newspaper is as perishable as a mushroom. A man can change his paper as quickly as he can change his mind. A newspaper is not really a directing force as much as it is a mirror, reflecting the interest, purposes and opinion of the bigger or smaller part of the community.

True, as the friend who writes us says, public opinion has "burned people at the stake for witchcraft, thrown the greatest of men into dungeons, on the one hand, and on the other it has struck the most powerful blows for liberty, equality and justice."

Public opinion is simply the expression of the thought of collective man AT THE TIME.

When men believe in witches, public opinion forms the mob and burns the miserable victim. When men believe that the earth is square, that a few stars were put in the sky as an after thought, and that the sun goes around the earth, public opinion endorses the power which forces Galileo on his knees to recant his wonderful TRUTH.

Public opinion of course can be no wiser than the wisdom of the day, no more just than the justice of the day, no more kind than the kindness of the day. At one stage public opinion authorizes the murder of slaves as an amusement, or in testing poisons.

A little later, in the Middle Ages, it authorizes the branding with red-hot irons of miserable laborers, straying that stray from their hamlet in search of work.

But public opinion is THE CONSCIENCE OF THE HUMAN RACE and the INTELLIGENCE of the race.

As the race progresses public opinion becomes higher, fairer, more consistent.

It is difficult for us to realize it now, but the day is coming when public opinion, man's collective conscience, will do away with courts, policemen, jails, detectives and lawsuits. That will be THE BEGINNING of a real civilization.

We thank Mr. Alexander for his very interesting letter, and print it in full here:

To the Editor:

Dear Sir:—Write an editorial on "Public Opinion." Does the term "public opinion" mean the real independent opinions of a majority, or merely a majority of the opinions expressed by votes or other outward manifestations of expression?

Among the number of those who vote for an idea, conceived by a creative, intelligent mind, many do not understand its meaning or the practical effect of its operation.

Some of these ignorant persons vote for it, because some friend in whom they have confidence tells them to do so; others, because they believe they will reap patronage or other personal benefit from or through it; others, because some newspaper appears either to their intelligence or prejudices.

The result of this voting may be the adoption of a law, but not the independent opinion of a majority of the voters. In other words, a majority of votes may not coincide with a majority of opinions.

Even if every man would vote according to his own independent judgment; even if no man would be influenced by self-interest, so that every vote were the free and voluntary expression of every voter's sincere, independent, unhampered opinion—still it would not follow that a majority was right at any given time, because their judgment may have been based upon inaccurate statements or erroneous reasoning.

Then, again, communities change from time to time, and what might be regarded as right in one community would be regarded as wrong in another.

Furthermore, the same communities themselves undergo changes of opinion. What then is "public opinion"? Is it the opinion which the newspapers and the magazines say the public entertains of this man or that, of this thing or that? No, a majority of the public may and frequently do disagree with the opinions expressed in the newspapers, or in most of them.

Is "public opinion" shifting and evanescent, or real and substantial?

That it is one of the most powerful things in the world no one will deny. It has burned people at the stake for witchcraft, thrown the greatest of men into dungeons, on the one hand, and on the other it has struck the most powerful blows for liberty, equality and justice. It is and always has been more powerful than kings, or other rulers, than armies, or than other physical or mechanical force.

Without pursuing the subject further, it must be admitted that the meaning of "public opinion" is somewhat indefinite and is based upon complicated conditions. Will you please throw some light on its real meaning and give your readers the benefit of your views on the subject? Yours very truly,

EDWARD A. ALEXANDER

Davis Tells of Long Gridiron Runs Honor Roll of 'Kick-Off Sprinters'

By Parke H. Davis.

It is difficult to determine how far the full-field run from kick-off to touchdown. Theoretically, such a performance would seem to be impossible. Actually, however, it has been accomplished thirteen times during seasons of major strength in the past 15 years, and probably has been achieved as many more against minor teams.

Consider the extraordinary difficulty surrounding the accomplishment of this great feat. Here are eleven men deployed in a space 100 feet wide and 200 feet long to prevent a solitary runner from traversing the line. How does that mark this achievement as the last line for a touch-down? The disposition of these eleven men within this space is not made at random. Indeed, their system of deployment represents the study and experience of 45 years, and presents the most important arrangement that has been devised to prevent every inch of the field against any and all comers. Further, the defensive eleven is not handicapped on this play by the feature of surprise. The attempt to make a full-field run upon kick-off does not come unexpectedly, like a sudden thrust at end following a prolonged attack upon the line, in its performance. Before the ball is kicked, every man upon the defense knows that only one play can follow, and a return kick or an attempt to make a run, and such is the information that is returned to the offensive character of a return kick. The eleven may divert its entire attention to preventing the run.

True, the runner is racing and dodging through the crowd of eleven men, but he has the assistance of his own comrades to knock an opponent out of the line at the moment he is only momentarily, easily evaded, and overcome. A low sharp kick, a high punt, a broken or scattered line, and the runner is free to advance into and through the center and back of the offensive. In the thousands of instances where a runner has tried to fly up the outside strokes in all ways one he has failed.

THE longest run achieved in any game in the history of the major games was 100 yards by Walter H. Peckham of Chicago, against Wisconsin, on November 26, 1909, by complying with the law of these runs. This flight was made straight through the center of the enemy. The battle was fought closely, scores by one side being quickly followed by a score by the other. Near the middle of the second half, C. DeTray, of Chicago, kicked up a muffed ball and ran 100 yards for a touchdown. Notwithstanding this feat, the game was too close for Chicago to feel sure of victory, and for Wisconsin to feel sure of defeat. Kennedy added a fourth point to the Chicago score by kicking the goal. Thompson Malmgren kicked for Wisconsin, but he was soared high, then sank swiftly down into the arms of 20 opponents who were standing on Chicago's 4-yard mark. Crouching forward he ran up the center. On the 20-yard line he cleverly fumbled the ball, and the Chicago Wisconsin ends by leaping between them. The ball fell forward with an interference of seven men closely massed about him, he crashed into right Wisconsin players. Again these colliding masses inexorably bore in two at the center, and the runner was shot through into a clef-hole, save a solitary secondary defender whose fitness of foot was no match for the incomparable Peckham.

SINCE 1911, an improvement has been made in the defensive plans of teams to prevent a full-field run from kick-off. Many eleven men deliver the kick-off into a corner of their opponent's territory instead

Cornell Resorts to Bucking Machine

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 18.—The Cornell football coaching staff was disappointed yesterday afternoon by the arrival of William Newman, crack center on the team of 1906 and 1907. He will assist Line Coach Jim Fied in drilling Center Coach, and Williams and holding the other forwards.

One of the problems presented by the Cornell game was the high clearing of some Cornell men, particularly by McKeitrick and Mason. By use of a bucking machine and other devices, head hopes to overcome this fault in the next game.

The critic eleven reported today on account of satisfactory work, most of them were late in arriving and only signal practice was had. Not a player was hurt badly in the Ithaca game.

CLABBY TO STAY EAST. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—The Johns Cabby Frank Logan (wrestler) round robin fight set for October 20, this year, was called off today. Cabby telegraphed that business affairs would keep him in the East.

McKetrick Sails to Arrange Big Fight

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Tom McKetrick has sailed for Paris with his promoter, Frank Moran, which means the first move in a possible battle between Jack Johnson and Moran for the world's title. As soon as McKetrick reaches Paris he is going to post a written check for $10,000 and then formally challenge for the title.

Johnson announced some time ago that he was willing to defend his crown in the capital of France, and the leading boxing club there is anxious to stage the match.

In addition to McKetrick and his promoter, the only one on the day counts of Joe Jeppino, who beat Sam Langford recently, Tom Sawyer, a middleweight, Fritz Kowalski, a light weight, and Young Alinsky, a welter weight.

VAL TIGER GOES TO MEET BRINNINGTON, N. J., Oct. 18.—A row between the Princeton and Yale eight-oared crews, it was agreed today, will sail on October 21, or November 1. It also was agreed that the Tigers would give Yale a return race some time next spring.

Vast Fortune Spent By Public on Recent World Series Games

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The cost in actual money to the public at large during the recent world series (total) was placed at close to $1,500,000 by statisticians, who also declared that at least $10,000,000 changed hands at the result of the nine games. It is estimated that the game of working time was lost to the thousands who attended the ball games, and the millions who chose to go to the scoreboards throughout the country for more than two hours each.

The money spent for admission to the ball parks of course, was the biggest item of expense in the actual baseball output.

TERMINAL MATCH AT SAVANNAH. SAVANNAH, Oct. 18.—Richard W. Lewis and William Johns, Philadelphia, will play a tournament at Savannah, Ga., this afternoon, on October 21, or November 1. It also was agreed that the Tigers would give Yale a return race some time next spring.

Milwaukee Is After James Coffroth to Promote Ring Bout

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Milwaukee fight promoters are seeking the services of James W. Coffroth, owner of the promoter, and if suitable arrangements can be made with the former holder of boxing bouts, James will lead the leading ring organization of the Great City.

Bouts are drawing well in Milwaukee and it is thought that with a promoter like Coffroth to help out the Wisconsin city will have a leading place on the boxing map.

GIANTS PLAY AT PORTLAND. PORTLAND, ORE., Oct. 18.—The New York Giants (Nationals) and Chicago White Sox (American) will play a exhibition game in Portland on Wednesday next. The game will be held at the Exposition grounds.

ATHLETICS RELEASE YOUNGSTER. PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—The Athletics have released Charlie Graham, who was drafted from the Savannah club, of the South Atlantic League. Graham has a very fair youth, but needs a little more experience.

Buck O'Brien May Enter Stage Career

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—Buck O'Brien, pitcher last season for the Red Sox in the World's Series, but now drawing his pay from Oakland, must be yearning again for some of the limelight. Buck doesn't propose getting it on the diamond, but rather on the stage.

The pitcher is seriously considering his retirement from baseball to go before the footlights. O'Brien has a pleasing voice and has a droll wit. Going on the stage will not be new to Buck, for he had full bookings last winter as a member of the Red Sox quartet which was quite a success.

Buck was the star singer, and figures that he can get by alone.

BRESNAHAN VS. GRIFFITH. YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, Oct. 18.—A twelve-round match between Tommy Bresnahan, of Omaha, and Johnny Griffith, of Akron, factworkers, will be staged here Monday, October 20. Griffith gained a show decision over Bresnahan here last winter.

Wilson, Griffith and Anson Talk Baseball

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Captain Arthur C. (Pop) Anson, leader of the Chicago National League baseball team for many years, called on President Wilson with Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington American League team, to-day. The President chatted about baseball with his cabinet members for some time.

Maria Dressler, the actress, followed the baseball victors.

FRANK KLAUS GETS RETURN GO WITH CHIP. PITTSBURGH, PA., Oct. 18.—A return match, to be held within the next two months, was arranged today between Frank Klaus, of Erie, Pa., and Frank Chip (Chapman), of Newcastles, who knocked him out before the Fort Pitt A. C. last week. The fight probably will be held here.

"By George--There's Exactly The Shoe for Me!"

The shoes shown in our window frequently bring forth just such a remark, which culminates in an easy and satisfactory sale.

The cut shown here is made from a photograph of a shoe that we are selling at $5.00; and our knowledge and experience warrant us in saying that this nor any other public has ever been offered a shoe of greater intrinsic worth--- GREATER INTRINSIC WORTH---at this price! Just drop that in the pocket of your mind and munch on it at your leisure. Put your feet in a pair of the shoes at your will and your later knowledge and experience will parallel ours.

The Matter of COMFORTABLE FEET

Did you ever have a happy moment while your feet were uncomfortable? Never! Did you ever WIN A BUGLE, NESS TRIUMPH or a social triumph or even ordinary success when your SHOES HURT? We think we are not mistaken in asserting that you never did.

THE ONLY RIGHT SENSATION ABOUT FEET IS NO SENSATION AT ALL. As soon as you are conscious of them something is wrong. And that something is generally the shoes!

Opportunities have been lost, mistakes committed and failures resulted because of ILL-FITTING, WRONGLY MADE, TORTUROUS SHOES.

It is perhaps not too much to say that more than once the "fido in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune," has NOT been taken at the flood, because at the psychological moment a Shoe tortured.

Many wise people have awakened to the NECESSITY FOR THOROUGHLY COMFORTABLE SHOES and are wearing MUSE SHOES.

This shoe is a member of a royal family here. The members at a lower price, viz., $3.50, $4.00 and $4.50, carry every ounce of value and style that human skill can transfer to leather; while those at $6.00, $6.50, $7.00 and up to $10.00 are supreme in their class.

When you think of shoes, think of MUSE. Tie the two ideas up together; give your pedals their best chance, and walk ever after in ease and comfort, and with the consciousness of being sure-shod.

Atlanta Under Fire of Invaders--Two Women Tell of Those Trying Days

Mrs. Catherine L. Wooten Has Vivid Recollections of Hunting a Yankee Who Wore Horns and Recounts Other Girlish Impressions of the Battle Here With the Northern Army.

There were times in old Atlanta that "hard men's souls" and women's too, according to the stories of two prominent Atlanta women. The tales are of Atlanta during the siege between the States, when suffering fell alike on men and women, boys and girls, when, as Mrs. G. J. Foreacre, one of the narrators, says a gallon of ordinary sorghum cost $50, and her Christmas turkey cost $150.

Mrs. Foreacre, wife of the provost marshal of Atlanta during the battle about the city, who had a price on his head, and Mrs. Catherine Lynch Wooten, whose three brothers were in the Confederate army, tell the stories.

By CATHERINE LYNCH WOOTEN.
My father, Patrick Lynch, came to Atlanta in 1847, direct from Ireland, and was followed by my mother in 1848. In 1852 they began the erection of the house now known as 20 Gilmer street in the block just this side of the Auditorium, and now used as a blacksmith shop. I was born and married in this house, although the greater part of my life was spent in the convent at Augusta, and later at Sumter, S. C.

I was not quite four years of age when the war began, but I can remember many incidents before the close of the war, and older sisters have heard others. My three brothers enlisted in the Confederate army, although the youngest was only fifteen. My father weighed 320 pounds, so would hardly have made a good soldier. When the shelling of Atlanta began we "retreated" to our plantation, but from the front porch we could see the shells falling into the city. They looked like skyrocket.

Mrs. G. J. Foreacre, Wife of the Provost Marshal Who Had a Price on His Head, Recalls Her Fears and Privations and Incidentally a Turkey Costing $150 in War Times.

By MRS. G. J. FOREACRE.
DORBLESS many of us, if not all, who are beyond the meridian of life, live principally in the past. And this I think must be especially true of those of us here who were all too early familiar with privations and hardships during that time. In the invaded country, left idle impressions on our memories. While our husbands were away fighting for the cause which was so incessantly dear to us, we were in most instances, as you all know, the women of the Confederacy, waiting a warfare literally with foes within and foes without. The foes within were those that threatened our households, and our children's health and happiness from day to day, and now and more severely as the length of the struggle exhausted the resources of the South. I refer to the actual scarcity of food, and the difficulty of obtaining clothing. We were all too early familiar in those days with the expedients of supplying variety for the table, where no variety existed, for me to go into much detail.

We parched sweet potatoes and made coffee from them, that if not as satisfactory as the power of obtaining it. One of the most painful recollections that I have of that, or any other time of my life, was the day when my little son asked at the table for a little more of the sorghum which had been the place of the view of the city. He asked for it because he was waiting on the table for the pitcher. It is incidents of this kind, and many others, that I have in my mind, that make me shudder when I read of a war in any part of the world.

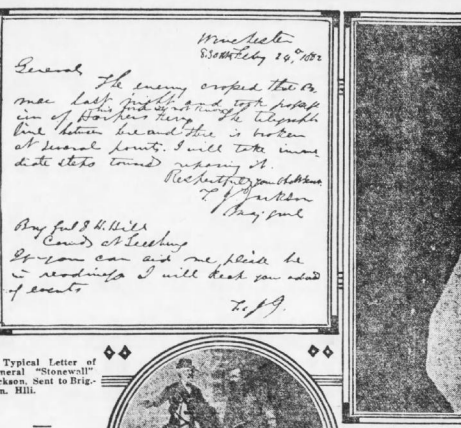

When I was seventeen I married Bowling Wooten, who had entered the Confederate service when he was sixteen years old, and served four years, so when the war ended he was not twenty-one. He was in Cobb's Legion, and served as courier to General F. M. B. Young and had many interesting stories to tell of his experiences with the general.

My father buried a bag of gold and silver under the short post of the "big gate" on the sidewalk, and it stayed there until after the war. When I was seventeen I married Bowling Wooten, who had entered the Confederate service when he was sixteen years old, and served four years, so when the war ended he was not twenty-one. He was in Cobb's Legion, and served as courier to General F. M. B. Young and had many interesting stories to tell of his experiences with the general.

The Famous Confederate General's Widow Presents Some Characteristic Epistles in the Current Number of HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

I have seen; but there may be some law embraced in the Army Regulations which I have not seen. . . . My promotion places me between a brigadier and a full general; but a full general will be paid any additional pay as commander of an army my additional pay is $100, making in all $400 per month. I send you a check for $1,000, which I wish invested in Confederate bonds, as I think, as far as possible, persons should take Confederate bonds, so as to relieve the government from any pecuniary pressure. You had better not sell your coupons from the bonds, as I understand they are paid in gold. Citizens would not receive a cent of gold from the government when it is so scarce.

Classic Music Is Forced to Bow to Ragtime in Atlanta, but--- Devoted Members of the Musical Association Bravely are Fighting to Make the Philharmonic Concerts a Real City Institution and Raise Atlanta's Standard.

BY TARLETON COLLIER.

THE audience, being composed essentially of highbrows, sat patiently enough during the first fifteen minutes of delay. Patience is an invariable adjunct of intellect, just as home runs are usually associated with the name of J. Franklin Baker.

But when nothing happened during the second fifteen minutes, there came a stir. A certain young lady with a splendid hat, whose lofty plume reminded one somehow of the lonesome pine, complained audibly. However, she may not have been much of a highbrow.

Then there came fifteen minutes more, and nothing happened. The big crowd had sat in the Atlanta theater for nearly an hour, waiting for the curtain to rise for the first Philharmonic concert of the Atlanta Musical Association for the season of 1913. The time had been set for half-past four in the afternoon, and visions of delayed suppers, irate husbands, and of even greater inconveniences, beset those persons there assembled, most of them being women.

A little more delay. Highbrows of the lowly degree began to clap their hands. In indignation that it was high time things were started. They had come to hear the outpourings from the soul of Beethoven, and Mozart, and Wagner, and not to view the classic stage curtains. They knew the Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra of old and were eager that the feast of Wagnerian effulgence and Mozart harmonies should start.

Then out spake a brave man who had mounted the stage: "Ladies and gentlemen," announced he. "We are sorry to keep you waiting, but the orchestra men from the Lyric Theater are detained by a matinee. They will be here soon. The matinees from the Foxworth and the Bijou are here, and the concert soon will begin."

Soon they came, just five minutes from the end of a program of ragtime, the program that everyone hears in the popular theaters. The national flag still hovered about them, their instruments still tingled with the dry notes of "Here Comes My Daddy Now."

But Conductor Mortimer Wilson waved them to their seats, pausing as they were after the spirit from the hall of ragtime to this temporary temple of art. Another flourish, this time technically significant, the rattle of the snare. The Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra plunged into the majestic strains of Wagner's "The Master Singers of Nuremberg," a composition as far from the syncopated strains they had just been playing for hours as is heaven from this wicked vale of tears.

The situation, which occurred at the first concert of the Atlanta Musical Association several days ago, presents only one of the thousand difficulties to which the sponsors of that association are subjected in their efforts to urge a higher standard of musical taste in Atlanta.

The Atlanta Musical Association, whose president is Mrs. John M. Slaton, whose patrons are the leading men and women of the city, is the bravest of organizations. Adhering conscientiously to its policy of furnishing no music except the best, it is up to a heavy expense to establish and maintain a philharmonic orchestra, including the services of a director who is acknowledged one of the most prominent in the country. A continual struggle accompanies the attempt to raise money for the enterprise. The orchestra is recruited from the ranks of music teachers and musicians from various corners about the city, who can give only a limited time to rehearsals. And even if they had abundance of time for practice, they must be paid for each rehearsal, and the funds of the association are not sufficient to permit of this. Altogether, the fight which the association is conducting to establish an art standard of music in Atlanta is as exciting and trying as the fight of any other plenary.

Adhering conscientiously to its policy of furnishing no music except the best, it is up to a heavy expense to establish and maintain a philharmonic orchestra, including the services of a director who is acknowledged one of the most prominent in the country. A continual struggle accompanies the attempt to raise money for the enterprise. The orchestra is recruited from the ranks of music teachers and musicians from various corners about the city, who can give only a limited time to rehearsals. And even if they had abundance of time for practice, they must be paid for each rehearsal, and the funds of the association are not sufficient to permit of this. Altogether, the fight which the association is conducting to establish an art standard of music in Atlanta is as exciting and trying as the fight of any other plenary.

And yet, the leaders say, they are winning out. Organized in 1908, the association had a stormy youth. Last season the anticipated number of concerts was cut short, because of lack of resources. This season, because the members of the association have worked hard, they believe they can give the whole series of eleven concerts. They plan to bring to Atlanta, Alma Gluck, John C. Freund, and other notables of the world of music. Next year, Director Mortimer Wilson prophesies brightly, weekly concerts will be possible.

Mrs. Slaton, president of the association, said she found much encouragement in the first concert of this season. Mrs. Lamar Meek, vice president, was also optimistic as a result of that first performance and of the audience that heard it. Yesterday they told a Sunday American reporter that the future of the association's work in furthering the interests of good music in Atlanta seemed bright, although it is a bit difficult at present.

"Atlanta can do what other cities have done,"

After Beethoven, came Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance," a stirring composition. By this time the orchestra was beginning to find itself. The audience was beginning to catch the spirit, and when Saint Saens' "Swan" was played, the hearers went enthusiastically mad. From that point until the end, with Greg and Wagner being played, there was never a doubt as to the success of the concert and as to the fact that the Atlanta Musical Association is doing a great work. Its active members, most of them women, are giving Atlanta the best there is in music, out of the altruistic motive of furthering the interests of Atlanta and music.

Mortimer Wilson, conducting the orchestra, performed a feat of which few conductors in the country are capable, according to persons of musical intelligence. He directed the musicians throughout all the heavy, elaborate program without once a reference to notes.

For a man to have memorized several Wagner overtures, a Grieg composition, a Beethoven sonata, Elgar's march, Saint Saens' "Swan" and one or two lesser numbers was regarded by the audience as marvelous. For him there came a sincere applause.

When the musical association brought Mr. Wilson to Atlanta two years ago as the conductor of its orchestra, it did so with a great faith in the future of music in this city. Then the days were indeed hard for the association and Mr. Wilson was a conductor and a composer of exceptional note. The tenacity that prompted the association to employ him is an index to their tenacity in every particular. This tenacity is being justified, for the association is finding a foothold in popular favor, and its leaders think, and the conductor thinks, that its establishment as an Atlanta institution, generally and widely recognized, is a matter of months.

Behind all this really creditable showing, though, there is the ever recurring story of the trials and hardships of the courageous pioneers who make up the Atlanta Musical Association, and who are struggling to gain public recognition for their enterprise. To a large degree their struggle has been successful. For several months ago they called 100 men and women of Atlanta's musicians, each receiving $100 if necessary for the support of the association and its work. The money is not all available this year, however, and the association members are endeavoring, in the midst of their fight for art, to acquire with as little of it as possible.

The association gets its principal revenue from the dues of the members, which amounts to only $10, and which entitles the members to admission to all concerts. The hard fight all this is for new members. Lately letters were sent out broadcast, setting forth the plans of the association, and soliciting members. The statement and appeal was as follows: "We want two hundred more members for the Atlanta Musical Association. The work that we are doing and the encouragement we are receiving mean much for Atlanta's cultural life. The orchestra, for which we stand, is an asset to be proud of, and is augmented and improved for this season's work."

In addition to the regular number of concerts, there are to be extra features this season for the benefit of members, the first of which is a musical lecture on October 18 at the Capital City Club, by John R. Freund, editor of Musical America, and one of the most eminent living musical authorities.

Madame Alma Gluck will appear with the orchestra in February, and arrangements are being perfected to present other well known artists during the season.

The officers of the association are Mrs. John M. Slaton, president; Mrs. John Lamar Meek, vice president; T. S. Florence, treasurer, and Forrest Gardner, secretary. The board of trustees is composed of Mrs. Edward T. Brown, Miss Edwina Behre, William J. Lowenstein, L. E. Rogers, Mrs. Bertha Arrowwood, and J. M. Van Hartlingen. A permanent office is maintained in the Cleveland-Manning building on Pryor street.

How I Won Success :: :: :: :: By John Marshall Slaton

John Marshall Slaton, Governor of Georgia, was twice a member of the Legislature, twice Speaker of the House and twice President of the Senate, successful lawyer and man of affairs, attributes such measure of success as he has achieved in life to one thing primarily—work.

"It is," says Governor Slaton with modesty, and only in reply to a direct query, "and ever has been the big inspiration of my career."

Answering the question, "What ONE thing, more than all others, has helped you to success?" pronounced by the Sunday American, Governor Slaton said:

"I left my country home in Meriwether County at the age of 8. With my parents I came to Atlanta. At the age of 12 I went to work and it was hard work, too, which is the only kind worth while—with the express purpose in mind of making and saving enough money to see me safely and surely through college. And I saved enough to do it! Labor is the all essential factor in the solution of every problem. Without it the most simple tasks are not to be accomplished at all. Study is hard work, and I studied the best I knew how in college. I graduated with the degree of Master of Arts, with two side studies included.

After leaving college I came to Atlanta and entered upon the practice of law. I began in keeping with my situation, and that meant with nothing much more than a well-worn copy of Blackstone and a more or less indistinct ambition to get along.

I never saw what one would call brilliant. I did not get my lessons with one-half the ease some other blessed fellows did. It often was necessary for me to sit up all night in order to keep pace with some students who found much more time for recreation.

These things I state as plain matters of fact. Since I have been asked to say what has helped me most in my life—whatever degree of success that life may have possessed—I can but state frankly my reply.

I never got anything worth having, in my estimation, that I did not work for. Labor is the most dignified thing in the world. It may seem a hard taskmaster at times, but its rewards are ample and infinitely satisfying.

When I was a member of the Legislature, whether as a member on the floor or presiding in the chair, I found it necessary to work in order to keep informed. I never liked to vote upon a question without knowing something about it. It is more I could find out, the better. In order to get at the bottom of things it was necessary to read many bills and study them carefully. I became a glutton for assimilating proposed legislative measures. Some of them I perhaps digested imperfectly, if so, so much the worse for me!

I was sent to the Legislature to work. If I was not willing to work, it was up to me to get on. I speak that not in any manner humbly, but merely as a thing that I believe to be true.

As Governor, I came down early and I remained late in my office. I have not, I can not get things into my mind in a jiffy—but I am not willing to act until I DO get them in. My young men and old men, beginners or finishers, if they think my words of advice and suggestion worth while, I would say this: Never permit yourselves to think that labor is not the noblest and most precious thing in this world!

Work, labor—these bring more rest, more pleasure, more joy, more calm and joy in the heart and soul, than all things else combined.

Sir Walter Scott used to sit up in his humble house far into the night, working, working, working! For what?

He was possessed of a noble ambition to own Abbotford—the beautiful home he loved so passionately and so devotedly. He achieved that ambition finally, because he unswervingly the dignity of work and was not afraid to make it the inspiration of his life's work.

Grover Cleveland used to burn the midnight oil in Washington, long after his Cabinet members were abed and asleep—working, working, working. For what?

That he might know whereof he spoke, when next day it came to him to answer to serious and important questions propounded to him as President of this great nation.

What these great and noble men have done I say strive to imitate. Since work—hard work—made them what they were, I must work, too. Not that I may become as great as they, for I never shall—but that I may journey just as far as I am permitted to succeed!

Whatever my final measure of success may be, and whatever it may be now, I attribute it all to one little thing—the biggest little thing in the whole universe when one considers the number of billions it takes to spell it!

It is work!

Make England Laugh?

By WILSON MIZNER

I accuse England of general inefficiency and a woeful lack of a sense of humor. I think you will acquit me of ego when I admit that I wrote a comedy for the English and it was successful.

The difference between English and American comedy is as wide as the difference between French and English cooking, and as both nations seem to thrive fairly well on the respective cuisine in this respect is like holding the Atlantic Ocean up to ridicule. But if an American author of abused humorous stuff wants to reap tears of pure poison, let him stand behind the women in an English theatre and hear his pet jokes bounce off the heads of the British aristocracy.

On Sunday, June 24, 1906, there appeared in a reputable London newspaper a communication to the effect that if America were in earnest in her resolute efforts to outdo Great Britain, she should not lose a moment in translating the Confederate mode. How are you going to make a nation like THAT laugh?

An effort on my part to analyze humor would be more than presumptuous, but, risking this, I say it is simply a matter of imagination and the ability to see a verbal picture. Lacking this, even elaborate, tangible stage effects can fail. The great water tank of the New York Hippodrome was translated into English and was planted in its entirety to our show at the London Opera House.

Forty American chorus girls in martial array approached the tank eight abreast. Down they came step by step, to the accompaniment of an orchestra of a hundred pieces, into the water they advanced, splashing as they went, and disappeared, leaving nothing but a distorted water surface and a few bubbles. As London had never seen this marvelous effect, it was the general opinion that it would not leave a cool pain in the house.

What, then, was our concernment when nobody clapped or seemed to pay much attention to it? During the intermission, which immediately followed the disappearance of the last amphibious character, I mingled with the audience in an effort to understand their lack of interest.

Here I came on every side "over audacious, those Yankees." "You know it wasn't water at all, Reginald." "Certainly not, they couldn't breathe, you know." "That's just it, old fellow." "It looked like water, and all that sort of thing."

You wonder if an author's life wouldn't be happier travelling with a patent medicine show in Northern Montana. By this time you are disgusted with the audience, and decide to stay on the stage during the rest of the performance. If you know what was in store for you, you would break into a dental parlor and tell the man to pull whatever he thought was right.

Here is the stage with you in a waistcoat and man who has been hired at some exorbitant salary such as $1 a week to guard the destiny of a hissing "bunch" light. With his right hand he is throwing a deep purple glow onto the stage, while the other 1400 lights are of AMERICAN hue, and in his left hand he balances a cup of English breakfast tea. You call his attention to this slight chromatic error, and to show his contempt for routine, he sprays his nose and throat with more tea.

A glance at your watch shows 11 p.m. and the show not half over. You run frantically to the wing and dance team that is just going on to do an act in "one." They threaten to do twenty minutes. You plead with them to cut it to ten. "Cut to ten?" they exclaim, "why, you're bawling; we BURY for fifteen." True to their word, they did twenty minutes. But it was a lucky thing that, for the stage hands were having trouble in setting the next scene behind the drop curtain. A table and a loaf of bread, required in the scene, were missing. This valuable property had been sitting in the wings for five or six days, but being a table only about eight or ten feet long, it eluded discovery until, at last, some casual spectator fell over it. But our troubles were only half over. The loaf of bread was still missing! From my little experience I would consider it had judgment to leave edible properties exposed in a country where poverty and hunger, like their flies, are a legacy.

It was three minutes of extra time. So I grabbed a shad-eyed call boy, drew the picture of a loaf of bread on the back of a programme, spelled it for him in the only two languages I know, English and American, and dispatched him post haste to a tea shop across the road. He was the most intelligent messenger I encountered while I was abroad. He returned with a bookstall pie.

The table with the bread on it, according to the scene plot, was to be scene centre, but instead of one man making the table, with the bread (or pie) on it, and shoving it on, one man took the table and another took the pie. London's combined efforts of the cast and the remaining 260 stage hands were successful in bringing them together again at the proper spot, with a slight stage wait of three or four minutes.

After a few things like this, it is most comical to dash wildly from the theatre and have an occasional friendly voice assure you that you are still in wireless connection with the theatre.

Appense among the upper classes is considered vulgar, but a deeper scrutiny of the national attributes will show that they abstain from this beautiful habit through a spirit of economy, as no Englishman would break a pair of shifting gloves at a second-hand contact between David and Goliath.

To prove this, let me inform you that each native Englishman carries a change purse.

Can you picture anyone buying a grand piano or paying over a dime for terrapin Maryland out of a change purse? Granting a man may have been born with a drop of liberality in his stringent system, he can't stand off the narrowing effects of a change purse. If Henry Clayman, the greatest plunger America ever knew, had been given a change purse at the age of eight, in later years he wouldn't have bet a dime that the Flatiron Building was over a foot high. Showman with a change purse, and I'll show you a man that can't be amused.

"KIDDING THE CLERK" Jack Gardner's Funny Sketch In Vaudeville.

JACK—Ship ahoy, clerk! Our show plays this town for a week and I'd like to find quarters at your hotel.

CLERK—Quarters? With the season we've been having around here you'll be doing good to find nickels and dimes.

JACK—Shipreck that ship?

CLERK—Have you always been an actor?

JACK—Not me. Up to and including last year I was making big money selling margarine knives for front doors.

CLERK—Why didn't you stay with it?

JACK—The 1 o'clock closing law went in force and my company went bankrupt.

CLERK—Do you intend to marry the girl you now have for a partner in your act?

JACK—I think I will, but sometimes she acts like an awful boob.

CLERK—The other day she went into a department store and asked if they had any desirable hair sets. They admitted they had, then she said: "Let me see one."

CLERK—Have you seen her father?

JACK—Yes, but he's rather crusty. He doesn't see my point of view very well. Here one of these fellows who's arrived at the years of discretion—too young to die and too old to have any fun.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

CLERK—Say, I've been trying to dope out a little scientific problem. Have you ever noticed that where the muscles move rapidly no hair ever grows?

JACK—Sure. That's the reason women don't have whiskers.

CLERK—Did you make a bit with your sketch the last town you played?

JACK—Did it? Why, we had 'em falling off their seats. The audience gazed in open-mouthed wonder before I was half through.

CLERK—I never knew 'em to rawn all at once before.

JACK—But the house was split on this song of mine: Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt, Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown; The cloth that before simply served as a sleeve, Now maketh the skirt of her gown.

CLERK—Too bad that accentuated lavine waste the waist.

JACK—But they say she ate one last something up her sleeve.

JACK—Say, that's a shiffling looking boy over there. Doesn't he ever comb his hair?

CLERK—He hasn't any comb, poor boy.

JACK—Why can't he borrow his father's?

CLERK—His father hasn't any comb, either, poor man.

JACK—Doesn't his father ever comb his hair?

CLERK—He hasn't any hair.

JACK—I see Sylvia Paucack's in again.

CLERK—Oh again, in again, starred again.

JACK—Women don't want the voters.

CLERK—No, they want the voters.

JACK—Women would suppress the chewing gum traffic.

CLERK—That's bad, cause there are still a lot of barbers who should chew it.

JACK—It would be terrible to suppress chewing gum. The less chewing gum, the more garlic.

CLERK—The soap's forgot-me-not.

JACK—You're all to the velocity for a dub clerk. I suppose you mean by velocity?

CLERK—Yap. Velocity's what you let go of a bee with!

JACK—Now here. The nut used to being treated this way. I'll have you understand that at one time they wanted to make me king of a certain European country.

CLERK—Why didn't you take the job?

JACK—Well, the crown was six and seven again, and I wear a six and a quarter.

THOUGHT-CONCENTRATION FOR THE HENS.
A CERTAIN farmer in Richmond, Va., who is engaged in the poultry and egg industry, read a popular article in an old magazine concerning the power of thought-concentration, and became convinced that what he had learned might prove of service in his business.
 After some correspondence and a great deal of trouble he managed to secure an ostrich egg. This he affixed to a beam in the hen-house, in such a position that it was in plain sight of all his hens, and above the huge egg he placed a card with these words:
KEEP YOUR EYE ON THIS AND DO YOUR BEST.

HOW TO GET THE PLAGUE.
IN San Francisco the extermination of rats, as conductors of the plague, is ever a question of the utmost importance and discussion. That even the children there have their notions on the subject is evidenced by the following conversation, overheard by a city official:
"Rats have got the plague," said one child, "and if you see one, you'd better look out, or you'll get it, too."
"If you just see a rat, do you get it?"
"No, I see you don't know anything about it. You get the plague when you've been bit by a flea that's been bit by a rat that's been bit by a sailor."

"I won't do so each thing. You go to grass yourself, Jose Dilly-pickie."
"I will not do so grass."
"You haven't."
"Why doesn't it?"

Take It from Solomon

By J. J. LEIBSON.

NOTE: Marriage is conducive to wisdom, for trouble is a great educator. That is how King Solomon grew wise. Before long, wisdom was all he had, so he was obliged to write proverbs in order to defray household expenses.

- 1. Hear, O, my son, incline thine ear unto Wisdom. 2. The feet of Youth are upward and seek to stray from the narrow path of Judgment into the Lanes of Love. 3. Thou gnest as in a dream, and when thou wakest thou art deep in the Mires of Matrimony. 4. Yes, verily, thou feelest a lightness about thy heart and thou callest it Love. But the lightness is only in thy head. 5. My son, thou playest a game, "Whit Dipper" (whisk at thy right hand, Thou thinkest to hold a queen; see that it be not a knave and fill thy days with the very deuce. 6. If thou chooseth such and such a woman, and sayest with fine scorn for Wisdom, O, this one is DIFFERENT, then say I unto thee, thou art hapless and mayest so well join the Tribe of Suckers and be a Gink forever. 7. He that investeth in the Bonds of Matrimony buyeth above par and hath neither security nor profit. 8. The coveted kiss of a strange woman is like fruit out of season; but the kiss of a wife is as a daily dish of prunes. 9. A man that kneeleth before a woman the least of his sorrows shall be a pain in the knees and baggy trousers. 10. Thou rantest about love. Love is found only in the dictionary. Even there, behind, "liberty" and "life" came before and "hilarity" after. 11. Beware the woman with a blue eye; beware the woman with a brown eye; beware the woman with a gray eye; beware, O, my son, the woman with any but a glass eye, for only such cannot see thee and mark thee for her own. 12. It taketh the combined wisdom of a sage and a weather prophet to say what a woman will do next; even then she will do different. 13. Beware the false philosopher who hold that there is safety in numbers; 'tis but a saying of Satan, for many wives make woe. 14. These things shalt thou hold in abomination: a coy look and a painted lip, a pencilled brow and a coil of false hair, for in the make-up of a woman lieth the unmaking of many a man.

Worst Jokes of the Week

- "WERE THESE REALLY SENT IN TO YOU?" "SILVERBENT" is he a Hobnob? "I believe he is; comes from out West, Oklahoma, I think." "Aha! He's not only kosher; he's an Osh-kosher!" ... "WHY DOES HE CALL IT 'TUBET'?" "Because it is 6, Times Square." ... "HERE'S A BEAR." "HAVE YOU GOT YOUR NEW SHOES BROKEN IN YET?" "Pretty fair. Wore them three hours at a stretch at the movie show last night, though they hurt some." "I see. You can wear them a while—on a pluck." ... "YOU'LL HAVE TO STUDY THIS ONE." "I read the boards before the footlights—an actor. And you?" "I read the footboard, behind the headlight. An engineer." "Stimake." "Top." "Then they both had a light." ... "HERE'S SUBTLE HUMOR FOR YOU." "WHAT MAKES THE PICTURES MOVE SO FAST? YOU CAN JUST HEAR THAT REAL HUM." "It's near their clouding time, and I suppose the operator wants to go hum." ... "SOME ARE ORIGINAL." "PA. Uncle cut the stem of a spaghetti leaf and made a whistle out of the tube." "Oh, yes, son. When a boy I used to make whistles out of elder twigs that way." "Well, if I made a whistle out of a string bean, would that be a wind instrument or a string instrument?" ... "OTHERS ARE CRIMINAL." "SUPPOSE A PIOUS MAN, UNABLE TO RAISE A MARCHA, SHOULD TRY THIS SCHEME: COULD HE ACT HAVE PART OF A RABBIT'S LEFT Hind, HAD HIS FOOT GRATED ON HIS UPPER Jaw, and so get a nice brown 'stache?" "It might be done, but ever after the young man, of course, would have a bare 'no."

BOOK REVIEWS

By JUNE TREMONT
Senator Sage-Bush.
One of the most encouraging symptoms of our national life is the interest which people in general are taking in politics. And as demand usually follows supply, the natural result of this interest has been a crop of political novels of which Francis Lodge's "The Honorable Senator Sage-Bush" (Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.25) is an excellent example.

There is a love story, of course, with a local, quick-witted girl for its heroine, but it plays only a small part in the book compared with that taken by the fight between the Transcontinental Railroad and the "Big Boss" otherwise known as "The Honorable Senator Sage-Bush."
The book begins with the return of Evan Blount, the Senator's only son to the Western "Sage-Bush" State, where he was born, full of ideals and an ardent desire for reform. Even before his coming the struggle to control one evidently destined to become an important person in the political world had fairly begun, and thanks in great measure to the return of the Senator, the struggle is now in its fiercest phase.

But his real head, Hardwick McVicar, had failed to reckon sufficiently with that exceedingly clever little lady who was Evan's stepmother, and so at the end he was surprised in a not altogether agreeable manner.
From the first page to the last the grip of this book on the reader's attention never relaxes for a moment. It is a very tangled web the author has woven, with plot and counter-plot so interesting that it is no wonder Evan Blount became confused. And always in the very midst of the snarl, strong and subtle and kindly, sits the Senator, with smiling eyes and a soft, but not a feeble, hand, never out of tempo, pulling wires and tugging at the threads.

He was one who in his time had been noted for his wisdom and shrewdness with the best, but now, faced by the Senator, he was a little of the wall to which McVicar was blind, and his plan for the "machine" has a weakness which his conscience had forbidden him to see.
"Senator Sage-Bush" and goes to work to clear his name and extract the truth from a very likeable person, this political and his plan for the "machine" is not without a considerable amount of common sense.

Despite the fact that he is often fairly fatigued by the time, and is frequently aware that there is a great deal to be said for both sides, there are plenty of dramatic bits which might be better transferred to the stage. At any rate, it is certainly well worth reading.

Scientific Cotton Culture.
"The Key to the Cotton Industry" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) is dedicated by the authors to the memory of the late Dr. Solomon A. Knapp, who founded the Farmers' Cooperative Demonstration Work, an organization which includes thousands of the most successful cotton growers. The book is a practical, up-to-date method is twice as great as that secured by the older methods of cotton growing.
H. E. Savely and W. R. Mercer.

the authors are Government experts in the United States Department of Agriculture. The object of the book is clearly stated—"To give in concise form a practical treatise on cotton, instructive to the cotton grower."
The book is, however, instructive not only to the grower, but to anyone interested in what is perhaps the most important of all American industries. It deals not only with the actual growth of the cotton, but also with the present and future of the industry.

"Marsh Lights."
The struggle between Materialism and Idealism, a common enough subject in real life, is depicted in "Marsh Lights," a novel of New York life by Helen Hamilton (Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.50). And as the story develops, the quality of the materialism is shown to be a very real and a very human thing, and the idealism is shown to be a very real and a very human thing.

Tale of a Dream World.
Fairy stories have their charm all ways, even through men and women, and it is no wonder that the story of today, with real men and women, is there a story of a dream world. This has been accomplished by the author, who has written a story which is not only a story of a dream world, but a story of a real world, and a story of a real world, and a story of a real world.

By EDWIN MARKHAM
"Otherwise Phyllis."
Meredith Nicholson is progressing achievement-ward, though still clinging to the "Honor" State—that holden of literary fame.
"Otherwise Phyllis" (Chapman & Co., $1.50) is the latest work of this author, and it shows a distinct advance over his previous work.

Here is a story, simple, honest, full of life and vigor, that shows the author's command of the English language. It is a story of a young man who has a dream world, and a story of a real world, and a story of a real world, and a story of a real world.

By H. EFFA WEBSTER
"The End of Her Honeymoon."
When an author writes a "mystery" novel in which the dominant interest is the search for the truth, the author is usually called a "detective" writer. But in "The End of Her Honeymoon" (Chapman & Co., $1.50) the author has written a novel which is not only a mystery, but a story of a real world, and a story of a real world, and a story of a real world.

FOUR CHARMING DEBUTANTES AND A YOUNG MATRON OF ATLANTA

This row of beautiful young women, taken at the opening dance of the Driving Club, includes four of the charming "buds" of the winter. From left to right, Miss Jessie McKee, Miss Hoke Smith, Helen McCullough and Dorothy Harmon. On the extreme right is Mrs. John Morris, Jr., formerly Miss Bessie Conroy of East Orange, New Jersey.

GROUP OF SOCIETY PHOTOGRAPHER HEARST'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

CHAPTER OF SOCIETY POLLY PEACHREE

AN array of stern-faced ladies, sitting on the porch of the East Lake Club house and frowning over open books, the pages of which they seemed never to turn, showed in me a wandering curiosity last Sunday afternoon. Finally I could stand it no longer, so I said to myself: "For goodness sake, go ask Mrs. G. — why she is reading that book with such a fierce expression instead of playing golf as she usually does?" When he remonstrated feebly, I insisted: "Isn't she a good friend of yours?" Then go ask her. "What means that unworldly reading? What are they all reading that makes them so stern and silent?"

So the obedient fellow went and after a little while he came back with the report to Polly that 200 men had signed a petition asking that the women be prevented from playing golf at East Lake Sunday afternoons as well as mornings.

"Don't misinterpret my slogan," she said. "There was a rule made last March, or thereabouts, that prohibited the women from playing until 12:30 weekdays on Sundays. Then this final club was taken at the instigation of the men. Through the amiable women suffers not a book, took a chair and sat firmly through the afternoon while their husbands and sweethearts played a posser game than they would have.

"With this knowledge, I ceased to marvel at their frowns. It is enough to drive those women to equal suffrage! The men give as their reason for the ungalant ruling that the women, playing so slow a game, interfere with their games, but I do not believe there is anything to it—not that I know anything about golf, except that one puts a little ball on a little pile of dirt, called a tee, and then hits it—if he can. At any rate, I must say, that the East Lake men are not so chivalrous as one would suppose when seeing them take out their bats in the elevators, and sitting up their seats in the street car when a woman appears upon the scene.

Now I say, let's get the ballot—not only in public affairs, but on the governing boards of the clubs and things. Hurrah for equal rights to all and special privileges for none!"

"To arms, my sisters, to arms!"

"Don't misinterpret my slogan," she said. "There was a rule made last March, or thereabouts, that prohibited the women from playing until 12:30 weekdays on Sundays. Then this final club was taken at the instigation of the men. of a special kind—a wonderful new variety of the flower which is being grown by the Government's crack horticulturists and which will be christened the "Missie Wilson." From one source it is rumored that the flower is a green chrysanthemum, and that thousands are getting ready to bloom for the White House bride.

It is authoritatively stated, however, that the same reference which has marked all sources of information concerning the wedding is maintained as to this new chrysanthemum, the horticulturists refusing to give information as to its color, size or variety. When I read, some time ago, that Jesse Wilson's tresses—at least, that part of it known by the name of "igniter"—was to be made of linen hand woven in the South, I greatly wondered; for I never heard of any linen being woven by hand in the South.

Now I understand that this igniter is to be made of the sheerest and finest linen obtainable—which insures its not being woven by hand in the South—and that it is to be embellished with exquisite hand sewing and real lace—in order to insure the old-time elegance of our grandmothers, as well as the excellence of construction rarely found in the modern trousseaus." I quote that last sentence verbatim from a news letter from Washington, and I leave it to you, Gentle Reader, to figure out what it means.

The hunt started about 8 o'clock. It reminds me of the comment one actor made of the speech of his partner at a local theater recently, "Phoo, phoo, go ahead; it sounds well and you aren't saying anything!"

In the final analysis we really know nothing just yet of the wedding details which interest the United States just now—except that the bride is to wear white satin and fine lingerie, that chrysanthemums are to decorate the White House and that Eleanor Wilson is to be her sister's maid of honor—facts not strikingly original or unexpected, to say the least.

—LIZA DANBY, of Baltimore, who participated in a unique pre-nuptial affair last week at her home in Baltimore. This was nothing more nor less than a "moon hunt" and "possum hunt," in our young and glib days, but as a form of entertaining for a bride, the pastime is new.

Miss Danby was one of 40 well-known society young women and men to take part in the moon hunt, announced as "the first of several entertainments to be given for Miss Frances Hollister and Charles Price," whose wedding takes place soon—and so forth, all in the regulation style, you see. One of the underlings, William Paul Johnson, Jr., was host of the moon hunt, which I understand was an excellent event.

der River. The hounds chased a son up a tree—"tread the coon" is the proper idiom. I believe—about 2 o'clock, and the young folks then gathered around a caudron near the tree, and sang songs. Later on they returned to the home of the host and portion of breakfast.

Now this may suggest something to an anxious host of prospective bridal parties in Atlanta, especially if he wishes a theater party, or a formal dinner, which two forms of entertaining is about all that others have attempted in this city. I heard tales of "possum hunts" on the grounds of the Brookhaven Country Club last year. Why not have some more?

some time. However, it is thought that a complete rest and a time of recuperation may enable Miss Davis to enter into social society before the season reaches a climax.

It is a matter of general regret that one of the prettiest and most charming "buds" of the season is thus to be deprived of the first story of the social blossoming time.

Miss Eugenia Ivey Who has recently returned to Atlanta to live, after a year's absence. Miss Ivey is a very pretty girl, and talented, her musical gifts having been trained at Brenan Conservatory. (Photo by Stephenson.)

Georgia, all of whom will be interested in the quiet little "speech" she made last week at the afternoon tea she gave to introduce Adage to her "home folk" in Athens, before the debutante had her formal bow to Atlanta society.

Mrs. Lipscomb would tell most of the guests had come in and had greeted her and the honor guests, when she spoke a few gracious words in her pretty way, saying that as all of them knew she had, in course of her life, introduced many girls in a musical way, and it had always been her desire not to have the opportunity to do this for a member of her family, none of them having shown talent for her beloved art until the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coy have taken apartments at the Harrington Hotel, 128 and 129 on Washington street, and are now in the city. The romance of this young couple and their subsequent elopement rather sudden marriage, at Asheville this summer, was one of the exciting features of the season.

William Owens, of Nashville, on his trip abroad this summer, bears on this subject, too. He and Mrs. Owens, on a trip from the North Cape, made friends with a young English couple on the ship, the acquaintance resulting with an invitation to visit the English couple at their London home.

At the social affairs they expect to give from time to time the girls will send out invitations to their friends, which will admonish the prospective guests that nothing but French is to be spoken at the affair. Those who can not speak French will have to employ the deaf and dumb language if they expect to attend these functions.

He had a couple of seats for every Monday night, right down in front of the stage. Since the wedding, an event of several months ago—the couple have still occupied the front row seats. That is, they occupied them until a week or so ago, when a presidential commission chose to address her most fervent songs to the ex-wedding husband.

Soon afterward, it was noticed by the Monday night crowd that the couple had seats in the middle of the house. Last Monday night, they occupied the new seats again, so now everybody supposes the wife has received a commission to address her most fervent songs to the ex-wedding husband.

City Editor Polly Peachtree

OTTHARD may amuse remarks on the fact that a prominent young married couple have changed their regular Monday night seats at the Porth. The young man in question, you must know, is large and handsome and good-looking—new to his wife, for that matter, but her personal appearance doesn't count in the least.

How a DEAF Mute "HEARD" Her First MUSIC

HELEN KELLER, celebrated the world over for her struggle against the handicap of being deaf, blind and almost dumb since a fever robbed her of these faculties at the age of eighteen months, has at last been enabled to "hear" the tone of a violin and to appreciate the wonder of a musical harmony. Professor Keller, of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, and Kragge, the concert master of Pittsburgh Orchestra under Emil Pauk, after a series of experiments, was able to penetrate the dead wall of her useless eardrums and arouse some dormant auditory power that responded to the powerful low D he played on the G string.

Miss Keller's utter amazement at the new sensation of "hearing" this thing which was called music was intense. Her whole body quivered with excitement, and when some particular note seemed to make her feel the most, she shook with a spasm of emotion as if she was a very part of the violin.

Mrs. Macy, Helen's teacher, declares that it is a "miracle," since her pupil has never had any knowledge of musical tones, and that the feat of "singing the scale" before the International Otological Congress at Harvard Medical School in Boston last summer, which attracted such world-wide attention to Miss Keller, is a purely mechanical result obtained by muscular control of the throat and vocal cords.

Professor Keller used a Stradivarius made in 1722, "the golden age," when Anton Stradivarius turned out his most perfect work. Improvising through three octaves, he finally struck a low D on the G string, which seemed to first arouse Miss Keller's new faculty of "hearing."

throb girl at Oberlin College, whom he was able to teach to differentiate between violin tones of two intervals. He declares that "while the ear drums is the medium by which sound impressions are conveyed to the human brain, it is not so in all creatures. Many small insects and beetles seem to be more responsive limited. And there are many sounds either too low or too high for the human ear to catch. Yet these other sounds have an equally important place in the world of tone. You have seen the experiment where a diaphragm in a glass chimney can be almost extinguished by the rapid vibrations of a shrill violin tone. It is the same way with beetles and small insects which are influenced by sound and the physical feeling of vibrations.

"Now, in Miss Keller's case, there is a more sensi-

the fever which robbed her of hearing did not take from her all auditory power."

Professor Keller went on to state that he has seen many instances where deaf people who were robbed of hearing by some sickness or accident, still retain a large amount of auditory power, and that when communication is properly established they are able to distinguish musical tones and catch a glimpse of real harmony.

The effect on her personally of this experience was unique. When the vibration gave her the first distinct shock of "hearing" she shook with a convulsive spasm as if she herself were a part of the violin to which she was clinging. And at each repetition of that one she responded just as she did the first. Keller then improvised simple phrases, running three octaves, from high G to low G.

When playing in the major keys with open strings he frequently struck notes which later she grew to recognize more and more easily. With the strings covered and playing flat he got only a comparatively small response from her.

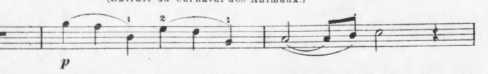

In order to get the most effective communication between his instrument and Miss Keller's sensitive brain, he had her clench her teeth tightly on the scroll of the violin. This enabled the vibrations to travel instantly up the lower maxillary bones to the lower lobes of the brain, where they set up a responsive vibration and established first physical feeling and later some dormant auditory power.

Miss Keller later, of her own accord, transferred the violin's scroll from her mouth to the cheek bone, just above and in front of her right ear. There she presented us so insistently that her flesh was discolored after the tests were finished. The vibrations of the violin, according to Professor Keller, are so penetrating and insistent that they will pierce through almost any solid substance, and if it is not too thick, will set it vibrating in response. He quotes the language of several music halls where the violin tones have gained unusual vibrating intensity that the steel girders at the top have been shaken from their rigid setting.

Professor Keller first experimented on a deaf and to sound of a reflected character close to any which would appeal to the human brain. In other words, the physical feeling of vibration seems to have quite as sure an effect to any creature sensitive to it as does the sounds, such as words and familiar harmonies and characteristic noises to the intellect.

"There are myriads of sounds in the universe which are never heard by the human ear. Its range is very

the response of feeling to external elements that average human being has. Miss Keller's fingers will recognize an old friend, whom she has not met for ten years, by the hand clasp. She can feel the sound of a great audience applauding her, because her feet hear the vibrations of the floor on which she stands. Her mental faculties are more keenly alert to these strange manifestations, which the senses of average folks are never conscious of. So that when she first felt the physical sensation of the violin vibrations and attained herself more and more carefully to differentiate, she was not long in arousing whatever auditory power was left to her. And the fact that she can now catch the harmony like the voices of singing angels proves that

Wear BRIGHT COLORS When You GO HUNTING

WEAR white or bright colored clothes when you go hunting. They will not make the deer or the duck any easier to bring down, but they may prevent your being killed or seriously injured by some fellow hunter.

Each year sees an increasing number of hunters shot through being mistaken for game in the dim, uncertain light of the woods. Sensible sportsmen minimize the danger of such accidents by wearing red hats or red sweaters or scarlet coats. Even a red handkerchief pinned over the eye or tied around the neck will help prevent being mistaken for a deer by some over-cautious animal.

The provinces of Manitoba in Canada has a law requiring hunters to wear white coats or sweaters, and Saskatchewan insists that those who "hunt big game must wear complete outer suit and cap of white. Experienced sportsmen say that the wearing of white, or bright colors does not interfere in the slightest degree with the success of a hunt, while it is an invaluable way of preventing accidents.

Owing to the great amount of damage which thoughtless hunters have done to life and property, hunting in most parts of America is beginning to be carefully regulated by law. Vermont, Ohio, Oregon and several other States require all hunters to be licensed either residents of the State or not. Maine and New Jersey are two of eight States which prohibit the use of silencers or scopes. The hunter who injures a fence or lets down a bar without replacing it in Connecticut is liable to be deprived of his license privilege for two years.

How to Make a FARMHOUSE Efficient and COMFORTABLE

EVEN the house in which the farmer and his family live is beginning to feel the effects of the new scientific notions which are working such a revolution in agriculture. Although the farmhouse is the very centre of rural life, it is often inconvenient, uncomfortable, inefficient and even unwholesome. But now increased attention is beginning to be given to the problem of reorganizing the farmhouse.

According to Director L. H. Bailey, of the Cornell College of Agriculture, there are twelve cardinal points to be borne in mind in building a new dwelling for the farm or in remodeling an old one. These are as follows:

1. Plan a waterworks system with a supply coming from an elevated tank in the barn or in the attic, from a pneumatic tank in the cellar, from a pneumatic cistern, from a cistern or a well or a spring at an elevation above the house, or from a hydraulic ram.
2. Plan a compact room arrangement that will allow a woman with two or three children to do her work without servants and also to have some time for reading and for social activity.
3. Consider how a hired man may occupy a room which has a separate entrance from the remainder of the house and yet which may be under family control.
4. Plan the addition of outdoor sleeping facilities and provide for a fireplace.
5. Plan a house with an accessible and attractive back door or work entrance.
6. Plan a lighting system either by acetylene gas, electric light, or other means that are now available. Extend this system to the barns, if practicable.
7. Plan a plain workroom or reading room for the woman of the family, particularly for the wife and mother. This should be a retreat room that is free from the cares and noise of the remainder of the house, containing perhaps a few books and other means of recreation.
8. Provide an office that shall be the business nucleus of the farm scheme. This office should be of easy access on the first floor of the house, rather than in the attic. It would be easy to add such an office to almost any farmhouse. It should have an outside entrance as well as connection with the living rooms.
9. Plan out a system of storage rooms that will hold the family supplies and such products as need to be sold or handled from the residence, assuming that the family is six persons and the place a general farm of one hundred acres.
10. Plan the simplest and most compact arrangement of rooms so as to accommodate properly a family of six persons on a farm of one hundred and fifty acres.
11. Devise a system of light power that can be applied to household work, and indicate the kinds of work that may be effected by it. The plan may contemplate a water-power just an elevated tank or hot-air engine or an installation through electric wires.
12. Plan a garden or a yard that shall be a real supplement to the house. This should not be so much for the raising of vegetables and fruits for the house but supply a "preening pleasant outdoor" spot for reading, sitting, smoking and the like. Every opportunity should be seized to get the farmer and his family out of doors, since contact with nature in hours of leisure will add much to the resourcefulness of their lives.

How CIVILIZATION Makes Us IMMUNE to Many DISEASES

It is evident to every one, and more especially to those who are in the artificial conditions of city life, that civilization brings a host of diseases in its train. The extremists of the back-to-nature cry have gone so far as to declare that civilization is a disease. But it is only just beginning to be clearly perceived that civilization is its own disease, that it preys upon itself, and that the aim of man is not to be civilized, but to avoid being civilized, though using to the full the opportunities that civilization affords.

Perhaps an illustration may make this quite clear. Measles is a definite germ disease. It is widely spread over the earth, but not by any means universally spread; for example, it seems to have been unknown among the North American Indians prior to the coming of the Spaniards. As a consequence, when an epidemic of measles strikes an Indian settlement the mortality is tremendous and in some cases an entire village has been swept away, every man, woman and child perishing from measles. Yet, among the white race, the disease has been so prevalent that it has become one of the common maladies of childhood and is hardly dreaded with regard to its fatal effect. The Fuegians, though living in the most inhospitable region of the world—that in the neighborhood of Cape Horn—fled from a sailor who had a cold in the head because they thought the inside of his head was coming out through his nose.

The white race, therefore, by having had these diseases for many thousand years has built up an organism that is almost immune, or in other words it has perfected its resistance to a hostile environment. In the terms of civilization, living in a badly ventilated tenement or apartment with court rooms is not a disease, although it may bring diseases, but if several generations are forced to do this it will build up a resistance which will add one more strength to the organism.

Especially is this true in the world of work and thought. Too hard work is one of the diseases of civilization. The very fact of the compulsion of enduring life, although working too hard, has enabled a man or a woman to endure heavy toll and has developed the human race to that extent. Eight or ten hours of continuous toil to a race not accustomed to it would kill it off speedily. The same is true about thinking. The Bushmen and Negroes, for example, can by no means follow a conversation with each other for more than two minutes, and when a white man learns their tongue and tries to talk to them, at the end of three or four minutes of questioning or attention in listening they fall to the ground in sheer dizziness and weariness or go temporarily mad under the strain. Yet, under the force of poverty, civilization, but the very fact of the compulsion of enduring life, although working too hard, has enabled a man or a woman to endure heavy toll and has developed the human race to that extent.

Something to REMEMBER When You BUY A PIPE

THERE seems to be no doubt that when you put a new pipe in your mouth you run the risk of infecting yourself with the germs of any number of serious diseases. The risk is the greater if you are a confirmed smoker, for then the mucous membranes of your mouth and throat are apt to be tender and more susceptible to infection.

If you keep your eyes open when in a store where pipes are sold you will notice that the average pipe purchaser puts at least a dozen pipe stems in his mouth and blows and sucks on them before making a final selection. Even if his mouth is free from the germs of a communicable disease the moistened pipe stems he lays back on the counter are just the things to catch any germs or dirt that may happen to be floating in the air and hold them for the next customer.

Although there are laws against spitting in public places and against the use of common drinking cups, there is no law to prevent the innocent purchaser of a pipe from getting one that has been contaminated by numerous mouths before it reaches his.

As few smokers feel able to select a satisfactory pipe without placing it in their mouth, the truth is suggested that danger of contact could be avoided by providing pipe salesmen with an antiseptic solution in which they could dip each stem after it has been examined. Unless this is done every man who buys a pipe with his own money will then be sure you treat the stem with some good antiseptic before you smoke it.

What YOUR NAILS TELL About YOU

ALTHOUGH you may not know it, your finger nails will tell an observer more than you know concerning yourself! To one who knows the science of the nails, your character and nervous tendencies can be clearly diagnosed, even as you sit talking to him, says an Italian scientist.

Those who have very long nails have not the same stamina and strength as those who possessed of short, broad nails. Persons with long nails are inclined to have weak chests and lungs, and must be exceedingly careful that they do not contract any lung affection. If the nails are fluted and ribbed, these characteristics are even more marked.

Long nails, as a rule, denote poor circulation. Plenty of outdoor exercise is what such persons need.

If the nails are short and flat at the base, there may be a tendency to heart disease. If the moons at the base of the nails are small, this denotes poor circulation; while, if they are large, the circulation is good. Flat, sunken nails are indicative of nervous troubles. If very short and flat, and particularly if they are white, denotes a tendency to paralysis. Short-nailed persons usually have trouble with the lower half of their body: long nailed persons with the upper half.

If the nails are flecked throughout with white spots, it denotes that the patient's nervous system needs a thorough overhauling. Thin nails, as a rule, denote poor health and lack of energy.

Long-nailed persons are, as a rule, calmer and more peaceable than short-nailed individuals. They have a calmer temper and are more gentle. They are more likely they might play and pain well, and probably have talent for the stage. Such persons are rarely inclined to be visionary and idealistic, and must sometimes come down to earth again with a bump.

Short-nailed individuals, on the other hand, are critical, severe, stubborn. They make good business men because they subject everything to keen analysis. They are quick-tempered and love to debate, and even fight. They are skeptical, and have to be shown before they will believe anything. They have quick tempers, but also forgive easily.

If the nails are broader than they are long, this indicates a very pugnacious disposition, with a tendency to worry and to interfere with other people's business.

If the nails are bitten, this of course denotes a nervous, worrying disposition. A woman with short nails and marked knots on the fingers will usually be a good and a "nagger."

The perfect nail ought to be white and naturally pinkish; transparent without being too thin; slightly notched or brittle; length, to the ends of the fingers. Such are the nails of those possessing refinement, correct natural taste and tact.

If there are any black spots on the nails, these denote grief, contention and melancholia, while they last. They are very rarely found, however.

faithfulness to duty, the desire for fame or some such motive, men have worked all their lives twelve and fourteen hours a day without suffering for it. It is not always easy to see wherein the good may lie in all the evils that the world holds, but this strengthening by the processes of immaturity is rapidly becoming adopted as one of the main articles of the modern thinker's creed.

What NOTHINGNESS Is Made Of

IN George Euler's good deal of talk, "Seraphs," there is a typical bit of talk about "nothingness." Now by no effort of the imagination can be conceived such a state as "nothingness." A vacuum, that is, a vessel from which the air has been exhausted, is as near an approach to "nothingness" as we can get at. Therefore, science, long before science had a hypothesis ready as to the constitution of "ether," stated that interplanetary space was filled with the universal ether.

Lord Kelvin about a decade ago formulated the hypothesis that "the ether is a highly elastic solid filling all space." To those who appear in matters of science the sentence may seem like a nonsense line from "Alice in Wonderland." Into the wonderland of science Dr. Osborne Reynolds, of Owens College, Manchester, England, one of the world's most famous living physicists, has penetrated so far that he is ready with an hypothesis of the structure of the world—that is, of the substance of both matter and ether.

Matter and ether, he claims, are both built up of "cosmic grains," spherical in shape, infinitesimally small, which never vary as to shape or size. When the cosmic grains are piled normally, that is, each grain resting upon and supporting one another grain, the result is that when piled so that each spherical grain rests upon two other spherical grains, the result is in which cosmic grains piled in this manner is a "solid" matter. There is a less number of grains in spots where matter exists, and this deficiency forms a sort of break in space, so that matter is really a hole in space.

Dr. Reynolds states that Newton's law of gravitation can be thus explained in a purely cosmic way. The pressure of the ether per square inch is nearly seven hundred and fifty thousand tons, more than three thousand times greater than the strongest material can sustain. Yet, paradoxical as this statement seems, the truth is corroborated by the work done by the great Scotch mathematician Clerk Maxwell, who arrived at the same conclusion independently of Professor Reynolds.

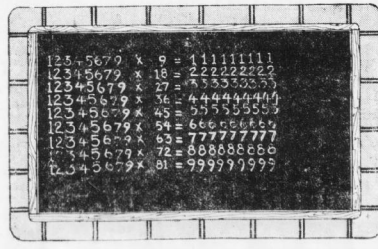

All motion is due to pressure of some force exerted upon bodies which move, and the motion of bodies through universal space, that is, gravitation, falls under this rule.

Thus, any change of bulk or arrangement in piling of cosmic grains causes a change in volume. This is called dilatancy, and is observed upon bodies through universal space, other than upon spheres, grains, cosmic ether, otherwise, under pressure, they must be inclosed within a bounded surface. Thus, if cosmic grains are piled in a bag, and the balls of ether are allowed to settle by themselves, they will settle into the smallest amount of space possible, and any disarrangement of that arrangement of the separate grains will increase the volume. Now, in the universe the grains expand and contract in a periodically and the grains are thus practically inclosed, since they cannot change their relative positions. Pressure consequently can be exerted, whereby the cause of gravitation is explained.

There's MAGIC in These NUMBERS

DR. ALBERT NEUBERGER, a German mathematician, has lately been making some interesting figures which result in the so-called "magical" properties of certain numbers.

One of the most remarkable series of figures he finds to be 12,345,678. The surprising rotations of the same figures which result when this number is multiplied by nine and the multiples of nine are shown in the accompanying illustration.

Why Manuel COULDN'T Stay Married.

The Girl Who Kicked the Little ex-King Off His Throne Tells Why the Princess Who Got Him Could Not Keep Him

By Gaby Deslys

London, Oct. 4.

YOU ask me, Gaby Deslys, why the marriage of Manuel and his German princess has come to what you in America would call the grand smash-up. To answer this question, I must not only go deep into the psychology of Manuel and of his bride, but I must take into consideration the very peculiar incidents and conditions which poor Manuel encountered in his courtship of the German Princess Augusta of Hohenzollern.

Am I surprised that Manuel's wife refuses to live with him after a four weeks' trial? But not her world would be surprised if she did continue to be his wife. They are psychologically unfit to live together. Manuel is utterly incapable of playing successfully the irksome role of husband. There is no one who knows Manuel better, more intimately, than I do. Who knows his every mood so intimately as I, Gaby Deslys?

When the engagement of this fiery, impulsive, youthful-minded and most poverty-stricken little king to the staid, stolid, unimaginative but fabulously rich Princess Augusta was whispered to me, I was most unhappy, most distrustful. For myself? But no, but no. Only for my little king. I knew that he would never be happy in what that amusing Anthony Hope calls "double harness."

I knew that so perfect a lover as Manuel is could never make a good husband. And knowing the mind of the German princess and her temperament, or rather her lack of temperament, I knew, alas, that Manuel would never be happy and that his marriage would be short and uneventful.

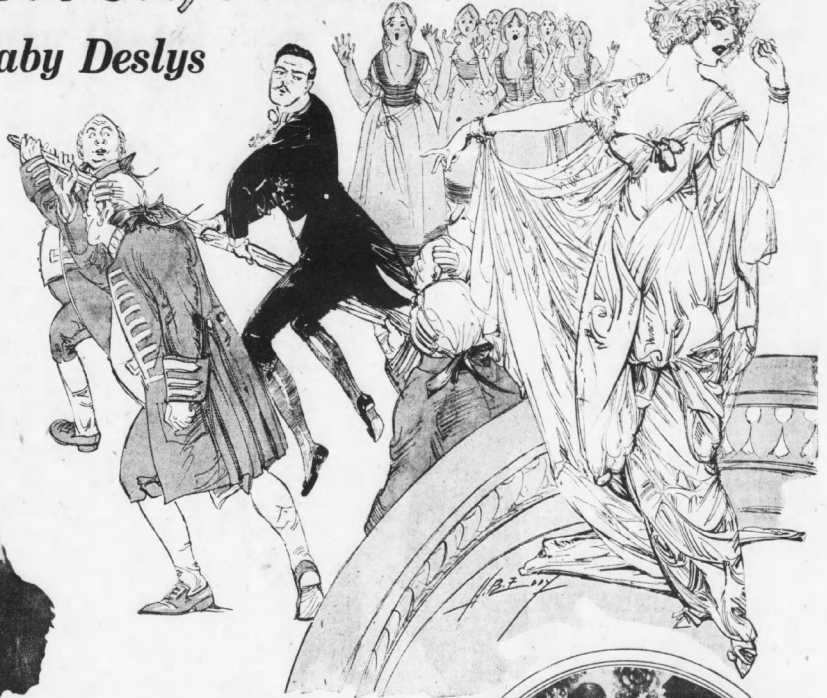

Manuel is a delightful lover. Yes, he is very young for such perfection, but he is a king and a king, and they learn to accept love in their cradles. But the perfect lover never makes the perfect husband. The perfect lover must first be free to love where he pleases. He must never settle down in the bonds of any man. At least, not until he is fifty or more.

Manuel is the last man in the world to make a marriage of convenience. The fact that he is expected to show devotion to a definite woman, whether he wanted it or not, is just the thing to send him flying from her even though it cost him a throne or a fortune. We had a saying in Southern France, where I was born, that love dies when the man is tied.

Manuel, as I said when his engagement was told me, is not the man to kiss, to embrace to order, embracing matrimony and embracing his wife are two different things. The minute Manuel found himself married, he began to chafe. He could not embrace his wife with the ardor with which he had embraced his fiancée. Whenever occasion required him to display affection, he unconsciously turned cold and rigid. Where he should have pressed forward he unconsciously stepped back.

Alas, poor Manuel, he could not help it. The whole thing was psychological. Then again, Manuel is very impatient of control. He is stubborn, and the more he is opposed, the more stubborn and impatient he becomes.

He is generous. Ah, who knows better than I the generous nature of this little king! It is his nature to be very generous. He is always the lordly benefactor. To receive material favors from a woman would sear his soul. The favor of her kisses and caresses, ah, yes, these he accepts, because he loves, because he is, after all, a man. But in return he gives of his largesse. And oh, so long he has had none to give.

"The Princess's peasants rode Manuel into her village on a rail," says Gaby. "It was their custom. And now they may ride him OUT on a rail!"

How, then, could Manuel be happy with a wife to whom he owed all his worldly wealth? He is not, er, what you would call analytical, he does not know his own peculiar traits, but they affect him strongly unconsciously, and the feeling that he has received material favors from his wife would make him hate her. And my little king has never been able to hide his feelings. He is but a child in many ways.

He must always feel that he is the king pin, the one who leads. He can not stand dictation. Puff, it makes him so triste to be dictated to.

But yes, he can be led, if the woman has the sagacity of the serpent, if she leads through love or through some emotion which he mistakes for love.

Could Manuel settle down to play the part of a phlegmatic, unimpulsive, home-going husband? No, but no. Marry him to the Princess Augusta who simply wanted to found a family and, perhaps, become queen, is like mating a high strung racehorse with a steady, plodding workhorse.

But this is not all. Study the facial characteristics of the king and his princess. She is strong, almost masculine in her strength. She would do her duty if it killed her, but she can not love, save in a material fashion, whereas Manuel puts love beyond all else. Love is an art with him, and, alas, the princess has never learned the art. Had the princess known even the first principles of love as an art she would never have permitted Manuel to be made ridiculous.

The vanity of man can stand much, but it can never stand ridicule. The princess, being, oh, so foolish, so lacking in finesse, insisted that Manuel take part in all the funny peasant customs that the members of her family have encouraged in their followers for centuries.

But oh, how my heart ached for Manuel when the vulgar peasants of Silesia tossed him in a blanket in the public square and then rode him around on a rail, throwing flowers and sweet cakes at him! But think of it! Riding Manuel on a rail! What torture for a proud man. Could love live under such conditions? But no.

Manuel wanted to be married as a king. The princess agreed to that, but only because she hoped some day to be queen. Manuel wanted the settlements made so that his share of the princess's wealth would be absolutely his own. But the princess, fearing he might become too independent, scorned and refused such a condition. She would not pay her future husband's debt. Ah, foolish princess! If she had ordered her lawyers to pay these debts privately, so that Manuel might know who was his benefactor, she might have kept his love. If the settlements had been made as coming from her father, Manuel's pride would have been spared. But no. The princess had to put her finger in the pie, had to "toss in," you would say in America, and Manuel felt the halter galling him even before the marriage.

All these things I have written about are the big things back of this very bad smash-up. Oh, the many, many stingy small things that I have not mentioned. It is the small things, the petty stings that cause the contradictions of the flesh and the soul. But to explain,

Manuel is sensitive to color, to sound. Certain shades of red make him, oh, so triste, so out of humor with the world. But greens and blues and pale yellows make him happy. The Princess Augustina knew this, but she said: "How foolish, how womanly to be angry with a color. I adore red," and she had her boudoir done over in just the shade of red that Manuel hates! And she had several red gowns made! The morning after the wedding, when she poured his coffee for him, Manuel's soul became triste, for the china was red, and the bride's negligee was a red chiffon!

When Manuel got up from the table and threw his cup on the floor, did the princess blame herself? But no, she scolded Manuel for his bad temper.

Manuel does not like Wagnerian music. He loves the lighter Italian and French music. He adores American ragtime. The princess plays badly, and always the rumbling music of Wagner.

When Manuel stormed, the princess banged the poor piano harder and said: "It is my piano, and it is my money which pays for this splendor about us. I shall play what I please. You are merely my husband, not my master, not even my equal."

Was it any wonder that Manuel fled to Paris for a two days' respite from so much matrimony? His trip made the princess very angry. She thought he had fled to join some Paris beauty, when he only wanted to get away from the red boudoir, the red china and the piano. The princess is a careful hausfrau.

Manuel does not like to have his sitting room or his study disturbed. He likes always to find everything where he left it. The princess adores order. She would not let him put anything out of place. When he threw his dressing brushes at his valet, and told the valet to leave them on the floor, she would run and pick them up. She cleaned out his desk every morning. Oh, how her order fretted his soul! "Could love live under such conditions? But no." Am I sorry for the princess? "Puff. Why should I be? She made her bed. Let her lie in it."

The Proper Way to Announce Marriage Engagements

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED, Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THE proper and the recognized custom in the world of society in regard to announcing an engagement is that the two mothers should write notes to the other members of their respective families and to the older friends, and that the engaged pair should write to friends of their own age. It is, however, especially kind and thoughtful of young people to write to the older relations, instead of allotting that duty to their mothers. It is advisable to make a list of the friends and relations who are supposed to be interested in the news of the engagement and to decide to whom shall be delegated the duty to write the special notes. All of the notes must be sent out together, otherwise some sensitive persons may feel offended if not informed promptly. Of course, there is no formula for notes of the sort. They should be brief, simple and natural in expression, and necessarily, they vary according to intimacy or friendship. Words of this sort may be used, with the required beginning and termination: "I wish you to be among the first to know of my engagement to —" or if a mother is writing, it is obvious that the terms are changed.

It should be distinctly understood that telephone messages announcing an engagement are not good form and not customary among those who wish to do things with delicacy and dignity.

No matter what others may say about the possibility of making an announcement at a luncheon, dinner or other entertainment, it is not correct. It must be remembered that we have not in the world of ceremonial, and there is a decided lack of dignity, propriety and delicacy in making an unexpected or a premeditated announcement before assembled guests and before the young people themselves. The engagement ring is worn when the engagement is announced. The ring need not be a solitary. Colored stones are used, usually in combination with diamonds, the sapphire being a favorite. Much depends on a man's means as to the choice of a ring. A girl's own good sense will not allow her to receive what her fiancé cannot afford to give. If the family of the young man live at a distance it is their duty to write to the bride-elect, expressing their pleasure and interest in the engagement. The future mother-in-law of the bride-elect may invite her to come for a visit. Of course, it is generally understood that it is not allowable for a girl to make a visit at the home of her future husband unless invited by his mother personally or by letter and very explicitly. A message sent through another person cannot be considered a proper invitation. Strict etiquette is safe in a girl or a man may be in their relationship toward each family the better they will be liked. A strict rule is that young people who are engaged may not travel about alone, nor do they go to public places, theaters or restaurants alone. Wherever they may be well-bred young people are careful not to be conspicuous by demonstrative attentions to each other.

Where Suffragettes Have Everything Their Hearts Desire

Mrs. Naik Komisheva, the Tibetan Who Found the Petticoat Government of Her Native Land Intolerable, and Who Is Now Leading a Movement for Freeing the Enslaved Men.

An amazing account of conditions in Tibet, the mysterious land, which for centuries has kept its doors closed to the rest of the world, is given on this page by Mrs. Naik Komisheva, the first native Tibetan woman to visit America. Women have enjoyed political and social supremacy in Tibet for nearly 700 years. Polyandry is only one of the surprising results which have followed their control of affairs, and it was because Mrs. Komisheva found herself unable to conform to this custom by having more than one husband that she fled from her native land and became an active anti-suffragette. She presents here her reasons for believing that Tibet would be better off if her own sex were not the masters of the men.

By NAIK KOMISHEVA.
The First Native Tibetan Woman to Visit America.

WHILE in Tibet woman suffrage is an antiquated story, I find it here an exciting novelty of the day. Our women have not only enjoyed political equality, but supremacy for seven hundred years, and for about the same length of time we have had a feminist tyranny in its last word.

In Kuo State, in Eastern Tibet, has always been the backbone of all our feminine folk. There a man can never be a ruler, a judge, or a general of the army. In some of our western States men have only recently been made the nominal administrators, but in reality women are the power behind the curtain. I find that your American women are demanding only equality in political affairs. Thus did the women of Tibet in 1236, nearly 700 years ago. As our women did, thus yours will soon, demand the supremacy, and they will get it, too. In our country a woman is the master of everything. She is not only the head of the family, but the head of every more or less conspicuous social institution. She commands and the men obey.

If you ask me whether our men like their inferior position, I must reply: They have grown indifferent in their social ambitions and do not care whether a cow or a woman is on the throne.

The women of Tibet did not gain in one generation their social-political

"Men who linger on the streets or in the parks after sunset are considered immoral, and are severely dealt with by the women police officers."

supremacy. It took them a century to become the masters of the situation. They got their victory by the cunning trick in directing all the attention of their men on Lamaism.

In Tibet a man has limited property and political rights. As long as he is unmarried he is under the guardianship of his mother, but after the marriage the wife is the master. When a wife dies the man inherits her property only when she has no children. Yet, in spite of that, the men are obliged to take care of earning the means of living for the family. In the upper class the men figure as the ornaments of society and attend all the religious rites, in stead of their women. On other occasions they are housekeepers, nurses, servants, cooks or practitioners of a certain profession. They are not doing but commercial automaton. Our men serve in the army as common soldiers, while women are always the generals.

In the various arts women maintain the same supremacy that they have in social and political affairs. Our artists in sculpture, printing of books, painting, decorating and carving are predominantly women.

Our women have a larger freedom in their conduct than our men. They can go out at night, sit in the cafes and visit the theatre at any time. But a man has to pray after sunset and stay at home. Men who linger after sunset in our public parks or on the streets are considered immoral and are severely dealt with by the women police officers.

This peculiar woman rule in Tibet has resulted in polyandry. A woman can have as many husbands as she likes, also in monogamy without any trouble. But usually our women have only one or two husbands.

When I was a girl of eighteen my mother said to me that it was time to look for a husband. But I already was in love with a young musician at Lathing, the highest town in the world, being fifteen thousand feet over the sea level. I told the secret to my mother and she said I should go and make the proposal, as that is the tradition of Tibet.

"I must like the long journey to Lathing, where the idea of my romantic dreams was employed as a teacher and musician. Like all the young men, he was very bashful and shy when I called on him in his apartment."

"Ritsig, I love you and want you to become my husband," I said. Drooping his eyes he whispered: "Miss Komisheva, you make me happy. I feel confined at your sweet message, but shall try to be your obedient servant as long as you love me."

I threw my arms around his neck and kissed him for the first time. He felt greatly embarrassed, for in all romantic affairs women take the initiative and men for that reason are respectful and effeminate. He was a very handsome and fascinating youth of my age, and I asked him why he had not been married by some woman before.

"My women proposed to be before but they were all married and already had two husbands, so I refused. As a musician in the temple service I can refuse proposals of married women. But your proposal makes me truly happy," he replied.

It was already evening, so I asked him: "Could you come with me to a show and have supper with your bride in a restaurant?"

"Kissing my hand tenderly, he whispered: "I have never dared to go to any public places after the sunset. But I shall be happy to accept your invitation."

In Tibet a man can never invite a woman to any public amusement place if it is not a close relative or wife. But a woman can always invite a man. We had an enjoyable evening, and I bought him some pretty presents from the jeweller. It was late at night when I accompanied my fiance to his home and bade him good night. After six months I married him and he became my husband to me.

I occupied the position of a tax collector of our town before I was married. But after my marriage, which was considered in our town a successful match, I was also elected alderman. Those official functions kept me away from home much, and my husband volunteered to help me. But kissing him tenderly, I replied: "Please take care of the household and do not mix yourself in the affairs of women of which you are ignorant."

According to our traditions a woman can make love to men behind her husband's back, and it is not taken as seriously as when a man makes love to another woman. But our men, as a rule, are very obedient, and we have hardly any family scandals or divorces. As women are the judges, they never pay any attention to family troubles, but send couples to priests.

When a woman of the middle class has been married a year or two she sends her first husband to a monastery, where he has to pray, study the masculine virtues and stay until she invites him back. In the meantime she marries another man, lives with him until she sends him in turn to a monastery and invites the first husband home.

After she feels that the husbands are religious enough to make her happy, she gives them different commercial instructions and keeps them always so busy that only one husband at a time is a home. Frequently the two or three husbands of a wife live half of their life and never meet each other. But there are women of the upper class who keep for their various husbands luxurious apartments and do not give them any religious or commercial functions.

A woman who

Mrs. Naik Komisheva, from Tibet, Asia, Explains How Women Have Ruled the Men for 600 Years, Do All the Proposing, and Send Their Husbands to Monasteries Whenever They Tire of Them

"If a man tires of showing his married life, with several husbands his one refuge is the priesthood, where he can dress like this to drive away evil spirits."

"When a Tibetan woman has been married a year or two she sends her husband to a monastery to pray and study the masculine virtues. In the meantime, she remarries another man. When she tires of him she sends him over to the monks and takes the first husband back again."

has only one husband is considered abnormal and ridiculed behind her back. For that reason my mother said to me after I had been married a year:

"My dear daughter, it is time that you get a second husband. Have you anybody in view?"

"Mother," I replied, "I shall not marry another husband as long as I am happy with the one I have."

"But you must, or I will accuse you of monogamy, and the law will forcibly give you a husband, regardless of your affections or consent. Meanwhile your first husband will be put in jail and kept there until you regret your sin and live according to tradition."

I realized that it was a serious proposition to live an illegal married life of monogamy, so I made a plan to escape. I had heard that there were countries outside of Tibet where a woman could be married legally to one husband. This appealed to me, and I revealed the secret to my husband. As he loved me, he consented to share my fate, and thus one night we left the State Nu Kuo and finally, after a hard journey of weeks, reached Persia. Here we learned that this was a country of polygamy, where a man was in the same position in which a woman was in Tibet.

As soon as I am through with my musical engagements here in the West I shall make a trip to my native land, where I shall meet my husband, who went there to begin a rigorous masculine movement. He is now publishing a weekly paper in which he advocates that the men should be at least equal to the women politically. He is organizing a vigorous campaign against polyandry by publishing caricatures of our ridiculous families. And when I return I certainly will join him and say: "Down with petticoat politics!"

"Like all the young men in Tibet, my future husband was very shy when I first called on him. 'Ritsig,' I said, 'I love you, and want you to marry me.'"

Dynamiting Out $5,000,000 of Golden Treasure

At Last Success Awaits the Searchers for the Vast Golden Hoard of the Warship Lutine Sunk Beneath the Zuyder Zee 113 Years Ago

The Lutine, although a Government warship, was carrying gold and silver bullion belonging to a company of London merchants. The destination of the vessel was Hamburg. There is some mystery about the purpose for which the treasure was sent, but, as the Napoleonic wars were then at their height, it is supposed that it was part of the vast sums sent to the Continent by Pitt to aid in fighting Napoleon. Presumably the London merchants lent it to the British Government under a secret agreement.

The ship was driven out of her course by a storm on the black night of October 9, 1799, and was driven ashore on an aboat in the Zuyder Zee, off the coast of Holland. She lay near the small island of Terschelling. Only one sailor escaped from the wreck and he died shortly after being picked up from a spar to which he had lashed himself. Lloyd's, the famous marine insurance company of London, had a right to what could be recovered from the wreck, but owing to the state of war prevailing in Europe, it was unable to undertake serious salvage operations at once.

Meantime the sands near the wreck held a golden harvest for the Dutch fishermen of nearby islands. At low tide the wreck of the Lutine was partly exposed, with a channel running close by.

Later findings have verified this estimate, showing that there were in all one thousand gold and silver bars in the Lutine's hold. The latest estimate of the total amount of treasure original in the ship is as follows:

Salvage in the years 1800 to 1801	878,850
Salvage in 1857 and 1858	196,015
Salvage in 1859 and 1861	24,000
Total salvage	1,098,865

Total treasure estimated to have been lost, $5,872,000. Treasure remaining on the wreck, $4,773,235.

The sands gradually covered up the wreck and made it practically hopeless to recover more treasure at one time. Then the recent progress of engineering science once more gave a hope that the bulk of the treasure might be found.

The National Salvage Association of London, with the assistance of American experts, took up the work, under an agreement by which Lloyd's was to receive 15 per cent of the treasure recovered, the Dutch salvage company 15 per cent, and the new company 70 per cent.

One of the greatest difficulties the salvors had to contend with was the fact a strong circular current ran around the Lutine, constantly filling up with sand any excavations that had been made. To remedy this, a deep channel was cut around the ship. Over 1,500,000 tons of sand were pumped away in this work, and the depth of water over her had been increased from four feet to fifty feet. She now lies on a hard clay bottom in clear water, and the divers can operate there safely.

Many boxes containing coin have been recovered, but the most important discovery made is that the bulk of the treasure in the form of gold and silver bars is rusted together with the ammunition.

A special treasure ship called the Lions, has been built for this work. She is fitted with an electric magnet, capable of lifting three tons, with which to draw up the fragments of metal produced by the dynamite explosions. In many cases it is expected that the fragments will be found cemented together in mass.

Communication between the divers and the ship is kept up by telephone.

The captain in a letter has told how he hit upon the discovery that revealed the real position of the treasure. "The dredge was working on one edge of a mound of sand which persisted in holding its position near the port bow of the wreck, and between me and the signal flag. I hastened aft upon getting the signal and found we had pumped up a piece of iron rust weighing about ten pounds. The crust of oxide had formed about a rectangular bar of some sort. When we scraped the surface of the impress we uncovered bright specks, and the metal proved to be particles of gold by means of the acid test."

London, October 15.

An extraordinary situation has confronted the treasure hunters engaged in searching the wreck of the British frigate Lutine, lost in 1799 with over $5,000,000 of gold and silver on board.

It has at last been found that the bulk of the treasure is hidden in the magazine of the old ship. There it is surrounded by metal, consisting largely of iron cannon balls. These have been cemented together by rust and seawater until an impenetrable armor has formed around the treasure.

It was entirely beyond the power of divers to penetrate this barrier. Finally recourse has been had to dynamite. The divers are now dynamiting holes in the metal barrier and a huge magnet is used to draw out the pieces of rusty iron lying around the holes. But for the use of this explosive it would never have been possible to reach the treasure.

This is a case where treasure hunting is no merely fantastic and romantic adventure. Many hundreds of thousands of dollars in gold and silver have already been recovered from the Lutine, but all that has been found is a mere trifle compared to the hoard that lies concealed within the iron-bound magazine.

The New Figure

Lady Duff-Gordon Describes the Return of the "Stomach Shape" Made Famous by Ten Eyck and Holbein.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

HA VE we discovered a new figure or are we returning to an old one? Alas! even in figures there is nothing new under the sun. The figure which we are heralding as new is simply the figure handed down to us by Ten Eyck and Holbein. The ladies of those days frankly accepted the one whose soul is above the subtle art of draping must also use the pad, for it is only the most subtle and skilful artist who can simulate this Holbein stomach unaided.

But, of course, the well-liked straight figure will also continue to be with us. The smart woman may display her straight silhouette in the morning, when she is wearing her tailored costume; her Ten Eyck figure in the afternoon, when she wears her draped gowns, and in the evening again she may present her no-figure appearance when she wears the clinging gown, which demands no corsets. In a way it is all a matter of choice.

This week I am showing you one of the new evening wraps developed in that most delightful and expensive of fabrics, the new brocaded chiffon. This coat seems to be cut from one piece, so graceful and intricate are its folds, but of course this is not so. The sleeves are, however, cut in with the body of the wrap and are very wide and edged with silver fox. The long boa is also of the fox. The chiffon, by the way, is an exquisite tone of grape.

I particularly like the gray green satin gown for receptions and other afternoon affairs which I am showing you here. The skirt has the new knee band, which holds the fulness in place in the back. The muff and the hat are of the satin. The muff is banded with brown fox. There is a charming simplicity about this whole costume which pleases me greatly. The one stunning effect is given by the violet and silver girdle. The hat is small, but has brim enough knowledged that they had stomachs and were unafraid to let the world into their secret. Since those days of frankness, however, the stomach has become taboo in polite society. Everybody knows that everybody else has a stomach, but the word itself is never mentioned.

This extreme delicacy has reached its height in England, where, with delightful lack of logic, the woman of fashion will discuss everything under the sun, no matter how broad it may be, but never will she even intimate that she has a stomach. This attitude of the age was delightfully satirized by my good friend James Barrie in his play "Little Mary," which in early English would have been called "My Stomach."

The straight front age was the logical outcome of the feeling about stomachs. We assumed the attitude that if we must not speak of them we must change our figures so that this part of our anatomy did not show. And from that day to this we have attempted to be as flat as a sheet of paper.

But the coming in of the new silhouette has brought us face to face again with our stomachs, and with the new gowns if one has not enough flesh to give the required figure, one must wear a little bustle in front. Let me say right here, however, that the draped skirt which creates the Holbein figure does not require a pad if they are properly draped. The amateur dressmaker or to shade the eyes most bewitchingly. The bird perched smartly on the front strikes an unusual note.

And here is one of my favorite morning models. I am always glad when I have to create a walking costume in corduroy. There is something so wearable about this fabric and yet so sumptuous. This skirt has an odd little turned-up panel in the front, which buttons on each side just below the girdle. The coat has the square lines that are pre-eminently chic, and both the skirt and the coat are banded with moleskin.

The small pale yellow colour hat has only a band of the mole around the crown, with two ends showing at the side.

Speaking of new figures, I am reminded of some of the new fabrics.

Tinsel-patterned embroidered ninnos are to be the rage of this season, just as they were of the last—only more so, I should say, for truly they are lovelier than ever.

The quaint thing about them—and of many other of the new fabrics, too—is that they bring together in an entirely inconsequent but also exceedingly effective fashion the deliciously dainty patterns of the Pompadour period and the world-old and wonderful colorings of the East. And so it is that you will find little shadowy bouquets scattered at regular (or irregular) intervals between weirdly entwined and colored devices. And each one will seem so superlatively desirable that you will not know which to choose as the fabric for your tea gown or coat, your theatre wrap or your evening dress.

Personally I am making frequent use of these particular and perfect fabrics for the fashioning of tea gowns and boudoir wraps, and you can perhaps imagine that I have found positive inspiration in, for example, one-ninnos whose exquisite and elusive blue is interwoven with a shadowy device of azalea pinks and yellows, and then a touch or two of vivid emerald green, while over all there shimmers a brocade of silver in a design of trailing foliage and flowers.

And then again imagine—and love—a deeply purple ninnon, where blossoms some of the faintest blue, others of a strange soft green, and still again some in vivid orange, their petals all alike, outlined with a shimmering tracery of silver, while in between cluster leaves wrought in silver and showing purple veining.

There is a new shade of old gold, too, which makes a beautiful background for full-blown roses worked in shaded tinsels, each thread being so twisted that the whole flower stands out in bold and beautiful relief, and, at some little distance, looks almost as if it were studded with myriads of tiny many-colored jewels.

On a pale gold colored ninnon, too, a shower of little golden roses is lightly scattered, while here and there one giant bloom shines out, iridescent, exquisite in tinsel threads, shading from silver to green and from blue to purple.

Another new make in ninnon is of special texture and strength, so that it may better bear the burden of a brocaded device of gold or silver, such as is usually only seen on a heavier satin ground.

Tall, palm-like fronds of silver, shining out against a blue as bright and beautiful as the Mediterranean Sea under the summer sun, is one example of the patterning and the possibilities of this new ninnon, while gold brocade on black or emerald green will also and surely find many admirers and wearers.

Why Manuel COULDN'T Stay Married.

The Girl Who Kicked the Little ex-King Off His Throne Tells Why the Princess Who Got Him Could Not Keep Him

By Gaby Deslys

London, Oct. 4.

YOU ask me, Gaby Deslys, why the marriage of Manuel and his German princess has come to what you in America would call the grand smash-up. To answer this question, I must not only go deep into the psychology of Manuel and of his bride, but I must take into consideration the very peculiar incidents and conditions which poor Manuel encountered in his courtship of the German Princess Augusta of Hohenzollern.

Am I surprised that Manuel's wife refuses to live with him after a four weeks' trial? But not her world would be surprised if she did continue to be his wife. They are psychologically unfit to live together. Manuel is utterly incapable of playing successfully the irksome role of husband. There is no one who knows Manuel better, more intimately, than I do. Who knows his every mood so intimately as I, Gaby Deslys?

When the engagement of this fiery, impulsive, youthful-minded and most poverty-stricken little king to the staid, stolid, unimaginative but fabulously rich Princess Augusta was whispered to me, I was most unhappy, most distrustful. For myself? But no, but no. Only for my little king. I knew that he would never be happy in what that amusing Anthony Hope calls "double harness."

I knew that so perfect a lover as Manuel is could never make a good husband. And knowing the mind of the German princess and her temperament, or rather her lack of temperament, I knew, alas, that Manuel would never be happy and that his marriage would be short and uneventful.

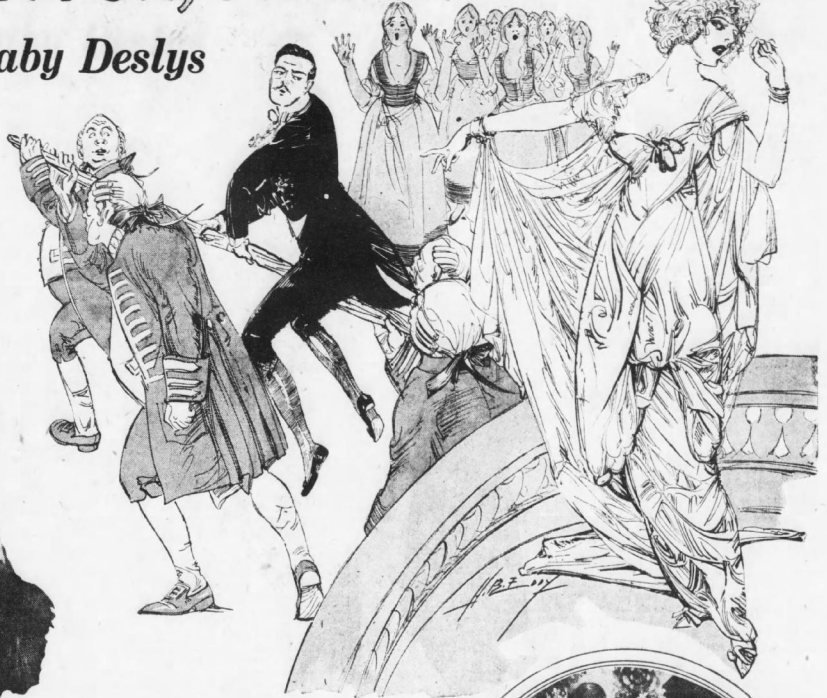

Manuel is a delightful lover. Yes, he is very young for such perfection, but he is a king and a king, and they learn to love and to accept love in their cradles. But the perfect lover never makes the perfect husband. The perfect lover must first be a lover to love where he pleases. He must never settle down in the bonds of any woman. At least, not until he is fifty or more.

Manuel is the last man in the world to make a marriage of convenience. The fact that he is expected to show devotion to a definite woman, whether he wanted or not, is just the thing to send him flying from her even though it cost him a throne or a fortune. We had a saying in Southern France, where I was born, that love dies when the man is tied.

Manuel, as I said when his engagement was told me, is not the man to kiss, to embrace to order, embracing matrimony and embracing his wife are two different things. The minute Manuel found himself married, he began to chafe. He could not embrace his wife with the ardor with which he had embraced his fiancée. Whenever occasion required him to display affection, he unconsciously turned cold and rigid. Where he should have pressed forward he unconsciously stopped back.

Alas, poor Manuel, he could not help it. The whole thing was psychological. Then again, Manuel is very impatient of control. He is stubborn, and the more he is opposed, the more stubborn and impatient he becomes.

He is generous. Ah, who knows better than I the generous nature of this little king! It is his nature to be very generous. He is always the lordly benefactor. To receive material favors from a woman would sear his soul. The favor of her kisses and caresses, ah, yes, these he accepts, because he loves, because he is, after all, a man. But in return he gives of his largesse. And oh, so long he has had none to give.

How, then, could Manuel be happy with a wife to whom he owed all his worldly wealth? He is not, or, what you would call analytically, he does not know his own peculiar traits, but they affect him strongly unconsciously, and the feeling that he has received material favors from his wife would make him hate her. And my little king has never been able to hide his feelings. He is but a child in many ways.

He must always feel that he is the king pin, the one who leads. He can not stand dictation. Puff, it makes him so triste to be dictated to.

But yes, he can be led, if the woman has the sagacity of the serpent, if she leads through love or through some emotion which he mistakes for love.

Could Manuel settle down to play the part of a phlegmatic, unimpassioned, good husband? No, but no. Marry him to the Princess Augusta who simply wanted to found a family and, perhaps, become queen, is like mating a high strung racehorse with a steady, plodding workhorse.

But this is not all. Study the facial characteristics of the king and his princess. She is strong, almost masculine in her strength. She would do her duty if it killed her, but she can not love, save in a material fashion, whereas Manuel puts love beyond all else. Love is an art with him, and, alas, the princess has never learned the art. Had the princess known even the first principles of love as an art she would never have permitted Manuel to be made ridiculous.

The vanity of man can stand much, but it can never stand ridicule. The princess, being, oh, so foolish, so lacking in finesse, insisted that Manuel take part in all the funny peasant customs that the members of her family have encouraged in their followers for centuries.

But oh, how my heart ached for Manuel when the vulgar peasants of Silesia tossed him in a blanket in the public square and then rode him around on a rail, throwing flowers and sweet cakes at him! But think of it! Riding Manuel on a rail! What torture for a proud man. Could love live under such conditions? But no.

Manuel wanted to be married as a king. The princess agreed to that, but only because she hoped some day to be queen. Manuel wanted the settlements made so that his share of the princess's wealth would be absolutely his own. But the princess, fearing he might become too independent, scorned and refused such a condition. She would not pay her future husband's debt. Ah, foolish princess! If she had ordered her lawyers to pay these debts privately, so that Manuel might know who was his benefactor, she might have kept his love. If the settlements had been made as coming from her father, Manuel's pride would have been spared. But no. The princess had to put her finger in the pie, had to "toss in," you would say in America, and Manuel felt the halter galling him even before the marriage.

All these things I have written about are the big things back of this very bad smash-up. Oh, the many, many stingy small things that I have not mentioned. It is the small things, the petty stings that cause the complications of the flesh and the soul. But to explain,

Manuel is sensitive to color, to sound. Certain shades of red make him, oh, so triste, so out of humor with the world. But greens and blues and pale yellows make him happy. The Princess Augustina knew this, but she said: "How foolish, how womanly to be angry with a color. I adore red," and she had her boudoir done over in just the shade of red that Manuel hates. And she had several red gowns made! The morning after the wedding, when she poured his coffee for him, Manuel's soul became triste, for the china was red, and the bride's negligee was a red chiffon!

When Manuel got up from the table and threw his cup on the floor, did the princess blame herself? But no. She scolded Manuel for his bad temper.

Manuel does not like Wagnerian music. He loves the lighter Italian and French music. He adores American ragtime. The princess plays badly, and always the rumbling music of Wagner.

When Manuel stormed, the princess banged the poor piano harder and said: "It is my piano, and it is my money which pays for this splendor about us. I shall play what I please. You are merely my husband, not my master, not even my equal."

Was it any wonder that Manuel fled to Paris for a two days' respite from so much matrimony? His trip made the princess very angry. She thought he had fled to join some Paris beauty, when he only wanted to get away from the red boudoir, the red china and the piano.

The princess is a careful hausfrau. She would run and pick them up. She closed out his desk, every morning. Oh, how her order fretted his soul!

She could live under such conditions? But no. Am I sorry for the princess? "Puff. Why should I be? She made her bed. Let her lie in it."

Manuel does not like to have his sitting room or his study disturbed. He likes always to find everything where he left it. The princess adores order. She would not let him put anything out of place. When he threw his dressing brushes at his valet, and told the valet to leave them on the floor.

The Proper Way to Announce Marriage Engagements

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED, Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THE proper and the recognized custom in the world of society in regard to announcing an engagement is that the two mothers should write notes to the other members of their respective families and to the older friends, and that the engaged pair should write to friends of their own age. It is, however, especially kind and thoughtful of young people to write to the older relations, instead of allotting that duty to their mothers.

It is advisable to make a list of the friends and relations who are supposed to be interested in the news of the engagement and to decide to whom shall be delegated the duty to write the special notes. All of the notes must be sent out together, otherwise some sensitive persons may feel offended if not informed promptly. Of course, there is no formula for notes of the sort. They should be brief, simple and natural in expression, and, necessarily, they vary according to intimacy or friendship. Words of this sort may be used, with the required beginning and termination: "I wish you to be among the first to know of my engagement to —" or if a mother is writing, it is obvious that the terms are changed.

It should be distinctly understood that telephone messages announcing an engagement are not good form and not customary among those who wish to do things with delicacy and dignity.

No matter what others may say about the possibility of making an announcement at a luncheon, dinner or other entertainment, it is not correct. It must be remembered that we have not a betrothal ceremonial, and there is a decided lack of dignity, propriety and delicacy in making an unexpected or a premeditated announcement before assembled guests and before the young people themselves.

The engagement ring is worn when the engagement is announced. The ring need not be a solitary. Colored stones are used, usually in combination with diamonds, the sapphire being a favorite. Much depends on a man's means as to the choice of a ring. A girl's own good sense will not allow her to receive what her fiancé cannot afford to give.

If the family of the young man live at a distance it is their duty to write to the bride-elect, expressing their pleasure and interest in the engagement. The future mother-in-law of a girl or a man may be in their relationship toward each family the better they will be liked. A strict rule is that young people who are engaged may not travel about alone, nor do they go to public places, theaters or restaurants alone. Wherever they may be well-bred young people are careful not to be conspicuous by demonstrative attentions to each other.
