WILSON'S TARGET FOR VEILED ATTACK BY HAYS HAS MAJOR POLICY REVISION, MEXICAN POLICY AND DENUNCIATION OF "MATERIAL INTERESTS" COME IN FOR CRITICISM

Mr. Hammond said that the United States has neglected foreign trade because of its home market being so large. He said that the domestic supply has been near the point of exhaustion. He said that the tariff revision, which will result in the importation of manufacturers and the consequent restriction of home markets, for our own benefit.

$2,000,000 BUILDING FOR COCA-COLA IN BALTIMORE

Asa G. Candler, in the name of the Coca-Cola company, is planning to erect another big building in the city of Baltimore to be occupied by the company's entire eastern headquarters force and retail tenants.

According to the announcement of Mr. Candler, Tuesday morning, the building is in addition to the one he already owns in Baltimore, and will cover the entire block on one corner of the present building stands.

The new building will be modern in every respect, twelve stories and a basement, one of the largest in the country for diversified manufacturing. It will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

With the erection of the new building, the eastern department of the company, including all the territory north and east of Richmond, will occupy the building for office and manufacturing purposes, the remainder to be leased to tenants, many of whom had offices in the old building. Their demand for more space is the growing need of the company and new applications for office space have been received from several of the city's prominent firms.

The building will be located on the block bounded by Market place, Pratt street, Lombard street and Concord street. It will overlook the harbor, the city market and people's court.

The Market street and Pratt street piers will be arranged for retail stores. The corner of Market place and Lombard street will be reserved for the company's chief of construction.

The building will be owned by the company and the construction of it will be supervised by the company's chief of construction.

The original Baltimore building was destroyed by fire in 1907. The new building will be a complete reconstruction of the old building.

The building will be a landmark in the city and will be a great asset to the company.

HOLY GHOST BAND OBEYS LEADER IN ATLANTA PEN

Durham, Maine, Stirred Over Orders Sent From Atlanta by Elijah Sandow

DURHAM, Me., Dec. 29.—There is considerable agitation here because it is claimed that a portion of the state school money is being used to maintain what amounts to a private school for the "Holy Ghost and United States Society." According to the agitators, the circumstances are that the three children of Lee Smith, a former shipboard, a pioneer who is said to have renounced the faith and moved his family from the Shiloh hillside a few months ago, were refused admission to the Shiloh school. Mr. Smith appealed to the towns school board who notified Mr. Smith to send his children to the towns school. Then the Holy Ghost society, who is head of the Holy Ghost school, issued a notice warning a term in the Federal prison should attend the Shiloh school. The arrangements made with the Durham school board were null and void. Hence the trouble.

COMMITTEE ON RESERVE BANKS HAS TOUGH TASK

Long Railroad Jumps Overnight and Hearings in Many Cities on Program

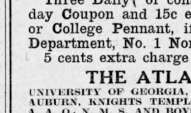

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—When the reserve bank organization committee begins its tour of the country next week it will give hearings morning and afternoon six days a week, make 100-mile railroad jumps overnight and in the old moments about trains will hold down testimony taken at hearings. The committee has less than two months to complete its work in which it will visit fourteen cities and spend a week or more in Washington. Indignations of candidates for positions on the Federal reserve board are pouring in at the White House. The attitude of President Wilson and the members, however, which is reflected by practically all members of congress, has been to leave the program entirely free in the selection of his appointees.

As usual, the man reckons without his wife, who sees in Fitzgerald a worthy opponent. So all ends happily.

Acrobats who were honest-to-goodness comedy acrobats advertised a party of stingers who sang too much, but looked funny in their little brown suits, dancers who didn't dance half enough, an amusing black-faced sketch that was unique, and another sketch, new to these parts, featured Monday night's bill at the Forsyth, to say nothing of the big headliner, "Neptune's Garden."

From the synopsis it may be gathered that there was a great bill on which is prominently featured, but looking high above the other acts, is the magnificent spectacle offered in "Neptune's Garden." Dramatists have come and pantomimes have come, but seldom has there been such a one presented to an Atlanta audience as that witnessed Monday night. The settings were superb, especially the principal sketch, "The Blue Bird" which will be here the entire week, and that whether you are old or young, theatergoer or straggler, you must see it.

Atlanta's hearty welcomed the stock company which, with Norman Hackett at its head, opened at the Lyric Monday night. The players, a few are above the average. "A Double Deceiver" the play this week is interesting though, in general, it is founded upon the O. Henry story, "A House of Mystery."

An adventurous young American, Andrew E. Fitzgerald, who has chosen himself—gets into a tight fix. A Texas barroom with a Spanish band one shoots out the light; several shots are fired; the Spanish band leader, Fitzgerald believes he did the killing, which was the work of the Spanish band leader.

Fitzgerald flees to South America and lands penniless in the town from which the dead man came. The Spanish band leader is grief-stricken over the loss of their son, who, it seems, ran away some time before. To atone for his crime, Fitzgerald is invited into the home of the band leader, whom the parents believe still alive. American can do as well as a big blond, black-eyed, olive skin Spaniard, and that's all that is necessary. But a "pater" and the heavily marked sword makes her seem to be the girl of the night, and the old man won't fall for him, and orders him away. But he stays on.

HAYS HAMMOND MAKES VEILED ATTACK ON WILSON

Great Britain, Germany and other countries.

It is said that trade follows a nation's flag. It is equally true that trade follows the investment of a nation's capital; indeed, this is the essence that opens the door of trade.

PROTECTION FOR INVESTORS.

To stimulate the investment of capital in foreign countries, it is proposed that the investor be assured of protection by his government against any discrimination on the part of foreign governments where these investments are made. If a nation is to pursue a policy of laissez faire its nationals will not be so foolhardy as to risk the investment of capital in the development of foreign countries.

It is a mistake on the part of high officials of our government to lavish indiscriminately against the obtaining of concessions from foreign governments. The implication is that such concessions are dishonestly obtained. It is true, in often the case, the development of new territories, whether or not a concession of land, is of incalculable benefit to the people themselves of those countries, and it is to be encouraged. It only from a humanitarian point of view, not disapproved as acts of exploitation by foreign capitalists.

A government is not expected to guarantee the success of commercial enterprises for business men are willing to assume legitimate risks in their investments. But it is obligatory on the part of a government to guarantee the fair treatment of its nationals who have invested their money in legitimate industry.

It has been stated that interests do not unite nations together—sometimes they separate them; but sympathy and understanding do bind them together.

This implies that the development of foreign trade is a matter of international peace and consequently should be encouraged. It is a matter of how sympathetic and understanding can be developed without that intimate intercourse which results only from commercial relations. It is community of interests above all else, and the basis for the peace of the world.

At 1 o'clock the Sigma Xi held its fifteenth annual convention at a luncheon in the Piedmont Hotel.

GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION.

Governor and Mrs. Sloan will hold a reception in honor of the delegates from 3 to 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, in the executive mansion.

The annual dinner to members of the Sigma Xi society and their guests will be held in the Piedmont Hotel Tuesday evening.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in Telford Hall, Dr. C. W. Shiles, of the United States public health service, in the name of government work with relation to the seacoast, will lecture on "The Health of the Mother in the South."

A lecture on "The School Gardens of America" by Van Eric Kilpatrick, president of the National Association of America, in Wesley Memorial church, was on the program from 7:30 to 8:30 Tuesday afternoon. The lecture will be illustrated.

CRITICISE OBSERVATORY.

Criticism of the methods and results of the United States observatory near Washington was contained in the address of Dr. Edward C. Pickering, of Harvard observatory, retiring president of the American Association of the Advancement of Science, at the association's first general assembly, which was held Monday evening. Dr. Pickering's subject was "The Solar System."

He said in part:

The just criticism has been made of American astronomers that would share of the work in astrophysics, the oldest science of astronomy of position has been greatly neglected. This is due to the fact that much of the work has been left to the hands of the navy observatory, which in the past has failed to justify the appropriations made for its support.

In L. H. Britain, state superintendent of schools, welcomed the association on behalf of Governor John M. Sloan, Mayor J. G. Woodward visited Atlanta's welcome.

The response was made by Dr. Edmund B. Wilson, of Columbia university. Dr. Wilson said that the field of science has grown so broad that all sciences have become specialties by force of circumstance.

The meeting was preceded by an organ recital by Charles A. Sheldon. Dr. A. reaction at the University club followed it.

Experts Fail to Study

Whims for Foreign Buyers

That the international commerce of the United States suffers by lack of proper appreciation on the part of the exporters of the likes and dislikes of customers in foreign lands was the view of Dr. George F. Kuntz, of Trinity college, New York, in his paper Tuesday morning at Tech before the social and economic science section of the American association for the Advancement of Science.

A painstaking and thorough study of the fashions, preferences and even peculiarities of the natives of the foreign lands to which the merchandise is to be sent, said he, is a most important condition to success for the exporters. It is neglected too generally, exporting losses in the United States.

"We are too prone to think that what is good enough for us should be good enough for everyone else; that if foreigners do not like things as we like them, they ought to be educated up to liking them.

No one who has visited an international exposition can fail to be impressed with the fact that every country has its own methods of exhibiting, casing and packing. It is important that the exporter should be thoroughly familiar with these different methods and thus be able to apply them intelligently."

STUDY TEMPERAMENT.

It is also most important to understand the special temperaments of various peoples. An Englishman, for instance, will be cold and formal in his dealings, and he might resent any other attitude on the part of those he deals with. The Latin peoples, however, are cordial and courteous, even in the most absorbing business deals.

"How many students realize the number of hours a German salesman will consume in figuring out the exact cost of everything in connection with a business deal? He reduces economic value, action to its exact economic value, knows what the profit ought to be, sells to his customer, and usually keeps him."

"In 1901 I met a young man acting as an assistant in one of the Austrian exhibits at the Paris exposition. He discussed a plan he had of coming to America. He carried out his intention. He is now a financial efficiency man for one of the greatest corporations, with a salary greater than that given to anybody in a like position five years ago.

"There is no reason why our exporters should not be students. It would, indeed, be a most profitable course of action for the son of the head of a factory or a director, to devote certain number of hours per day to such systematic study, and the remainder to actual work, just as law students devote half a day to the practice of law, and the other half to his study."

SCHOOL SUGGESTED.

"My plan would be to have a school with a two or three years' course of actual practice all the time; to own a factory by a year's trip through various countries.

"The best way to carry this out would be to charter, or better still, to own a steamer, a kind of commercial school-ship, and have this specially fitted out for the purposes. A library, an observatory, a workshop, a laboratory, and all subjects relating to international commerce, would be provided, covering all subjects from port to port.

"The students, during the stay in port, would be able also to become thoroughly familiar with the local methods of loading and unloading cargoes, with the customs and port regulations, with like ways of packing and arranging the special most appropriate and best goods, and with many other matters."

"Any young man of good intelligence, after passing through the course here outlined, would become a most valuable addition to the business staff of any large undertaking, and he would undoubtedly have to cause to complain of the

"The Night Is Far Spent"

"The darkness is passing away and the true light already shineth." --1 John 2-8.

"God said—Let there be light: and there was light." Jesus said— "The light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than the light." They crucified Christ. But John, who with Mary Magdalene saw the risen Lord—John before he died wrote— "The darkness is passing away—the true light already shineth." Tomorrow, before the break of day when the coming sun is only crimsoning the eastern sky with its rays, go forth and cry— "O night remain! Dawn not O day!" But when the day has come cease crying against the sun and know that God rules. MEN HAVE PRAYED "THY KINGDOM COME." They have asked wisdom of God. Ye, they have asked it not alone with moving lips but with beating hearts and tireless brain. Today, man can map the course of star, planet and sun—He knows the exact point in space where Halley's comet goes hurtling on its way. We may not hope to see its flame again. But our children's children will know the minute and the hour, long after we have fallen asleep, that the comet's mystic blaze will be seen again sweeping across the horizon of our world.

Man, too, has mapped the course of certain sins. Made in the image of God man knows with unerring accuracy, how the image of God in man is marred and defiled by the track of sin. Men see children blinded—asylums crowded—jails overflowing as the result of vice and alcohol. They see the innocent suffering and dying because of the sins of men. They know. And then they behold the Cross of Christ—They hear him say—

"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." Christ has shown the way to block the path of certain sins—Light—the Light of His love—the Light of knowledge. And throughout the world light in His name is being brought to bear upon the evils that blight and mar the lives of men and children of men. Christ has said— "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." For freedom God's children fight. Atlanta is only a small part of the battlefield. But here look—

CHRISTMAS 1912 was the first that beheld every public brothel closed in Atlanta. They are still closed; none will open them. And many, many cities as a result have driven Protected Vice from their midst. Throughout the world the alliance between police departments and criminals is being broken. CHRISTMAS 1913 locker clubs and bars in Atlanta were closed for the day. Mayor Woodward rightly said:—"We should close them on the birthday of our Savior."

All agreed—Drunkness on that day is out of place. Yesterday, in a distant state, fifty-seven little children were buried: they were crushed in a panic; it is said, a man with alcohol laden breath coming from a saloon shouted fire in a crowded hall. Doubtless, he thought it fun before he saw the frightful results of his folly. None desired such a thing Christmas day in Atlanta. Men were unwilling on that day of days to have a part in sending drunken men home to innocent women and children.

Thank God for the results! A local paper says:—"A perceptible decrease in the violence, debauchery and bloodshed that once was associated with the holidays." Mayor Woodward said:—"We should close them on the birthday of our Lord." In His name we ask that they be closed every day—that our laws be obeyed. Our safety depends upon respect for law. Georgia's Legislature seeing the monstrous evils of the liquor trade has forbidden it. Judges on the bench, jurors in the box, gentlemen in their clubs have no option—the law applies to all.

The sale of an intoxicant in a club, whether it be purely a social organization or one organized simply to cloak the blind tiger, is a violation of the law of our state. WE APPEAL TO THE MEMBERS of those clubs which are organized purely for social purposes and for the city's good—your love Atlanta and your State—you, too, have no wish to furnish an excuse or an example to men who are committing crime for gain. We ask that you do it—not that you see that the law in your club is obeyed. We beg the men who are committing crime for money to desert— The end is certain. You will pay the penalty.

Most respectfully we ask our Mayor—to Police Department—and our representatives in Council—we most respectfully petition on the State and County officials to see that the laws of our State are enforced in every place, every day as well as on the birthday of our Lord. Followers of Christ are averse to law-breaking and oath-breaking every day as well as Christmas.

Men are seeing THE FUTILITY OF A RELIGION LIMITED TO CHRISTMAS OR TO FIFTY-TWO SUNDAYS IN THE YEAR—it cation cartoons such as one recently published in a magazine devoted to attacking the Church and building up Socialism—a group of women and working girls are standing before the door of a great church building—one says to another with a sneer— "That's right, girls—the cross on Sundays, the double cross on week days." Poison distilled and brewed by the deadly inconsistencies of our lives. The cross of Christ—its light is driving slowly but surely greed and treachery from our midst. Men who think rejoice— Everywhere they see the signs of the dawning day. THE NIGHT OF "THE DOUBLE CROSS" IS FAR SPENT. "The darkness is passing away and the true light already shineth."

Perhaps the main truth is a bare statement of facts.

How some men do hate other men because of their superiority.

The Passing of "J. Rufus."

Those suave adventurers of finance who live by their wits, or as Dickens would say, by the lack of wit in others, will soon find Georgia a discouraging field of exploitation; for on January the first the act popularly known as the Blue Sky law, which was passed at the last session of the Legislature, becomes effective.

These and other requirements will go far toward putting an end to wild cat schemes. They will protect a guileless and too gullible public and at the same time fortify and uphold legitimate business undertakings.

Some credit is due the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce for its persistent work in behalf of a Blue Sky law. The chamber aroused public interest in a problem that had long been neglected.

Some people prefer popular songs to real music.

Living up to our ideals isn't responsible for the high cost of living.

When a married woman loses her temper her husband is apt to catch it.

Explorers of Today.

Seven men out of ten would like to be explorers, but it is doubtful that two out of a thousand could be even if the opportunity were offered. The Temple of Fame is filled with great warriors, great statesmen, scientists, poets and artists, but only here and there in the ages do we find the wind-swept niche of a truly great explorer.

The impulse for adventure, for El Dorados and Treasure Islands, throbs as warmly today as it did four hundred years ago, or when the old Green mariners turned their prow toward misty Hebrides shores.

There are nearly five thousand applicants, it is reported, for the British expedition that is to set out for the Antarctic in 1914, among them being young peers, scores of scientists, any number of young graduates from college and not a few sobered men of business.

Of course you are lucky. Just think of the many times lightning failed to strike you.

Every once in a while you meet a man whose actions you can't fully describe without swearing.

When a young man calls on a girl and she tells him she expects to die an old maid, it is equivalent to a proposal.

The Seriousness of a City's Play.

Progressive cities the country over are giving more and more thought to public recreation. The mere maintenance of parks and playgrounds, it is being realized, will not suffice the community's need for free and wholesome amusement.

With this end in view, it has been proposed in Louisville, Ky., that a municipal Board of Recreation be formed, made up of five members, the Courier-Journal tells us, "one of whom shall be a member of the board of park commissioners, one member of the board of education, one member of the board of trustees of the free public library, one member of the board of public safety, and the fifth to be a private citizen interested in recreation work."

This plan is interesting for what it suggests rather than for what it actually embodies. A city's play, whether it be that of the children or their elders, should certainly be under sympathetic, competent supervision.

Some time ago Manager Carey, of Atlanta's park department, made the well considered suggestion that the province of this department be widened so as to include all fields of common amusement.

A SCHOOL FOR LIVING

By DR. FRANK CHAMP,
(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Champ.)

What is needed in the world is some sort of school or asylum or institution or correspondence course to teach people how to live.

More than anything else they need to know that. Yet statistics and school systems are telling them everything but that.

Only one kind of education is of firm account for a bad boy; it is the kind that educates him to live. Geography and manual training will not cure him of his cussedness, nor will common fractions and United States history help him to be clean brave and kind.

Here are the subjects in which a public school could be taught to be drilled: How to control my temper. How to use my imagination so as to strengthen me instead of making me weak. How to improve and toughen my will. How to find pleasure in common things.

When a man commits a crime it is simply because he doesn't understand how to live. Why look him up as a prisoner when he is formed and bred in his den? Why not have a "how-to-live" school and send him there? It is the first place, so that he will not become a criminal!

They think they want money, or notoriety, or to be able to get out of jail. They don't want any of these things; but they don't know how to live. They need to know how to live.

Millions blunder along and make a mess of life because they have studied anything else under the sun except living.

They turned in, and one of the pair was soon fast asleep; the other and heard how after hour strike on the church clock, until 2 a. m., when he awoke.

How do you like her singing, Elia? asked the mistress. "Oh, mum!" sighed the maid. "It was grand! She sung just as if she was gargling!"—Harpur's Magazine.

A lady, returning home unexpectedly, found her domestic using the drawing room for the purpose of giving the rest of her friends. "Ann, I am surprised," she exclaimed.

"So am I, mam," replied the unabashed girl. "I thought you had come to see a fortnight." "A burglar," in the act of breaking open a safe, was greatly astonished, on raising his head, to see a man sitting at the typewriter. He tried to engage, but the man stopped him, saying:

He is a great big fellow who could take me and throw me over a "staked and rifled" ten-rail fence and I'm six feet. He is one of the most capable newspaper men at this capital.

Single men, grand and socialism is alluring; women's rights are needed, dress reform and simplified spelling, food chewing, prohibition and criminal law are all right in their places; but still, the "one thing needful" is to know how to live.

RAILWAY AND INDUSTRIAL NOISE SUPPRESSION

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

The recent advertisement of one of the western railroads that the noiseless route "indicates the advance made in railway noise suppression. The necessity of all railroad noises is no longer taken for granted. A study is being made of how much can be abolished for the good of the passengers, and the result will worth while.

The road referred to is concentrating its efforts upon reducing the noise of its sleeping cars. Every employee upon these trains is sworn to silence. No shouts or yells of trainmen disturb the passengers. The signals are given, given chiefly by flashing lights. Engine whistles and bell ringing are prohibited. The conductors, with appropriate reference to quiet, and are carefully examined each day to insure their perfect order.

Most sleeping cars go out about midnight and are made up so that the passengers can get to bed at 11 o'clock. The cars stand in the railroad yards where are usually noisy places. Passengers often lie in their berths for hours before the train starts, and the noise that surrounds them. This does not come from the train but from the opening of valves of other waiting engines.

Many of the engine noises are due to the engineers' practice. He is hardened to them. The banging or rattling of the hardest noise is usually unnecessary. The train men look upon the demands of the passengers who want to sleep as a public man, stuporous as was his improvement.

In the great industrial shops, the value of noise suppression is being recognized. The noise of a manufacturing plant can be translated into a loss of power and an unnecessary rapid depreciation of equipment. The noise of a factory is the result of the workers' resultant from the distraction created by the indirect effect of noise upon their physical health.

Certain operations cannot be performed without noise. The hammer must strike a blow, and the saw and planer must revolve through wood. But it is astonishing how much even these noises may be reduced by the use of special machinery. If the belts and gearing are so arranged that they do not add their vibration to the noise of the saw better results are noticeable throughout the shop.

Machinery designers are now giving scientific study to noise prevention. The primary purpose of machine improvement is to reduce the loss of power, and to preserve the health of the operator by the elimination of friction. The greatest noises of most shops are due to friction which actually impairs the value of the machine. Consequently, noise suppression and durability are achieved by the same means. Noise is sometimes considered a nuisance, but it is a nuisance for the adjustment of the gears.

The system of lubrication has much to do with the suppression of noise and friction in many large machine shops. The newer machines no longer require the use of an oil can, but the man in charge of the property owners, who had visions of disturbing sleep during the morning and unpleasant grinding noises throughout the day.

The effect of a continual noise in any locality brings about a speedy deterioration in the value of property. The location of a factory in a residence district is always objectionable to the neighbors. The man in charge of the property owners, who had visions of disturbing sleep during the morning and unpleasant grinding noises throughout the day.

The automobile is one of the greatest noise producers of the present time. The best machines are being sold as silent. Any noise other than the alarm signal indicates a malfunctioning which should have immediate attention. In many towns ordinances have been enforced to govern the smoke production of automobiles and similar restrictions regarding the noise are under consideration.

The automobile alarm or danger signal seems at present to be a necessary noise which the automobile owner is as yet unable to overcome. The danger signal is being used by the pedestrian as a warning to protect. The ideal automobile should still the quietest of automobiles, as well as the most powerful of automobiles.

A considerable amount of mechanical noise has now appeared in the modern business office, and is being recognized as a serious problem. Much noise is caused by the nervous fatigue of the workers. The invention of a noiseless typewriter would be a boon to thousands of men and women.

"I never knew how much noise had to do with making me tired until lately," remarked a girl employed in a factory. "I used to be tired out by the middle of every afternoon. I would be so nervous I wanted to scream and my head would ache so I would go home and sleep. Now I feel almost as fresh after my work as I did in the morning, and I don't feel any more tired in the afternoon as in the morning, and I accomplish just as much work. The creaky noise of the machinery has done it for me."

TROLLEY LINE ASSURED FOR HOWELL MILL ROAD

Arkwright Assures Citizens He Will Recommend Immediate Construction

A number of citizens of the Howell Mill road were assured Tuesday morning by President P. S. Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, that he would recommend to the board of directors of the company at a meeting in the afternoon that work be started at once on a trolley line out to the Howell Mill road.

The refusal of the Southern railway to so change its bridge over the road as to allow the passage of trolley cars was the one point which has been blocking the proposed line, and Mr. Arkwright told the citizens that he would recommend that his company bear the expense of this work, which will cost approximately $1,000.

The Seaboard Air Line has already agreed to construct its new bridge so the trolley can pass, and only the Southern bridge has stood in the way, it is said. Citizens who reside on the road expressed deep appreciation for the attitude of the president of the power company. For if the trolley company is unwilling to bear the expense of arranging the bridge for its trucks, then the citizens to secure the badly needed road, would have been forced to raise the money, and this would have been difficult, as they are not prepared to make large subscriptions to public improvements.

Wednesday afternoon, with interment in West View cemetery.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. EURUGESS.
of the laws through which something yellow showed, Farmer Brown's boy went to several steps and opened a door. Chatterer gave a little gasp. There was a dark room, and the boy had never seen in all his life more corn than he had in the field. Chatterer had spent most of his life in or close to the Green Pasture, and he had a very wholesome opinion of Farmer Brown's boy and his dreaded father. He had always been afraid to keep away from Farmer Brown's doorway, but he was now afraid to go up there. You see, there were Black Pussy's teeth in the doorway, and Farmer Brown's boy; why it was a terribly dangerous place. And yet every day and didn't seem to be in the least afraid. He had a very good reason for that. He had seen a picture of a man and a woman in a room, and he had seen a picture of a man and a woman in a room, and he had seen a picture of a man and a woman in a room...

A Christmas Legend

A soldier in a secret coat. One winter long ago. Went out and met a pretty maid. In the woodlands white with snow. She stood beneath an ancient oak. Her name was Mistletoe. Her cheeks and lips were glowing red. Like roses in the wheat. Her locks were twined with mistletoe. Her eyes were blue and sweet. He looked and loved, and kneeling, laid His sabre at her feet. From icy regions of the Pole. The Mother knew all night. And hung the branches of the pine. With thinking fringes bright. And made beneath the good oak. A frozen mound of white. But when the pines are thick with snow. And nights are bitter chill. And silence in a crystal coat. His sabre at her feet. His sabre at her feet. His sabre at her feet.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says

Evening Wraps so Lovely It is Unfortunate They Are Worn in the Cloak Room. NEW YORK.—It is a decree of fashion, or of comfort, that evening mantles should be left in the cloak room. Naturally, one cannot wear them in the drawing room or to the seats of a theater, and one cannot sit in them, in any comfortable position, during the performance.

One catches glimpses of them as their wearers fill out of the cold into the bright corridors of some place of entertainment, but that is all. It often strikes me that those in-charge of the cloak room sometimes have a better view of the evening costumes that those who sit in the throng. They often see the loveliest part.

The weather is cold enough in New York to wear the voluminous wraps of fur such as the Parisienne wears, but for some unexplained reason, the American declines otherwise. The evident preference is the mantle of velvet or satin trimmed with fur. This may be for economy's sake, although we are not often excused on that charge.

You see, the entire wrap of fur is quite too heavy in our climate except during the three cold months of the winter. Take December, for instance, when there has not been enough cold weather to demand more than a light covering in the evening, which would do with a fur wrap if its purchase would be waste of money.

If we lived in the days when a piece of fur was an heirloom, and was worn season after season without regard to the changing fashions—which did not change in policy—then we would not feel ourselves cheated if the weather was warmer than we had been led to expect it would be. We would wear the wrap as often as we could, and put it in its cupboard, or cold storage to await a more propitious season.

Now the styles change with the moon and the climate changes with the wind, the hesitate before putting money into such garments that might not be worn in the light of the sun—or the stars—more than a dozen times before it would be assigned to the upper shelf of the closet of course. There is always the man waiting round the corner who desires to make over your fur wrap so it will cover his wife's back.

Tinker Elated Over New Job With the Feds

Declares Bonding Company Has Guaranteed His Salary for Three Years, and He Expects to Have at Least Five Major League Players on His Chicago Team

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—The final papers by which Joe Tinker and Mortecol Brown, for many years National League baseball stars, cast their lots with the Federal league, were signed in the local office of the league yesterday. This was confirmed by both players, who said also that their salaries had been guaranteed by a bonding company, which assured them full payment for their three years' contract regardless of what may happen to the league.

Both said, too, that their departure from organized baseball into the new league had not been made without full investigation which convinced them that the Federal had sufficient financial backing to make it a real competitor of the older leagues.

Tinker's contract calls for $36,000 for the three years, according to a statement by Charles Weechman, president of the Chicago club, which was made known to professional baseball affairs here last night by the first time today. Weechman owns a string of lunch rooms and billiard rooms and is reputed to be wealthy.

Tinker appeared jubilant, but was questioned about the plan to sign other players for the club.

"I'm a Federal leaguer from now on," he said. "I'm a stockholder in the club, too."

Tinker intimated he thought there was little likelihood of the forces of organized baseball going to the courts to hold him to Brooklyn on the reserve clause of his Cincinnati contract.

"I won't worry anything about what players I'll have," he said. "I want to wait and do something first and then talk about it."

Tinker, who is to manage the Chicago club, indicated that he would have a comparatively free hand in obtaining players for the club now started in at once to prepare his line-up.

After leaving work at his home that he was going out of the city, he bid himself in the office of Charles Weechman, owner of the Chicago Federal baseball club, and said that he had secured the club would have at least five major league players in the National league last year.

Brown, who is to manage the St. Louis club, said he had made no plans except that he would go to St. Louis tonight to consult the owners of the club.

Weechman said every club in the league had deposited $25,000, and that it would live up to all its agreements. It was also said that the club would go through with their property of the summer to become the property of the league. It also said he would consider the make-up of the club within a few days.

Knabe Denies Signing With Baltimore Feds

SAM FITZPATRICK TELLS OF THE HARDEST BATTLE FOUGHT BY GEORGE LAVIGNE, THE "SAGINAW KID"

Sam Fitzpatrick, one of the grand old pugilists managers of the ring, is just about to sail for England with another man whom he hopes to make a champion. Many years ago he took over there George (Kid) Lavigne and fought him against Dick Burge, England's lightweight champion, and the Kid came back the champion of the world.

But the hardest fight of Kid Lavigne's career was the fifteen-round contest with Joe Walcott at Maspeth, L. I., sixteen years ago this month. Then the lightweight champion entered the ring on the short end of the betting. Walcott, "The Black Demon," "The Giant-Killer," etc., went in a 2-to-1, a 2-to-1 favorite.

"I picked up lots of bets at the ring-side," said Fitzpatrick.

"By many persons who saw the fight it is considered the hardest ever known between British sages under Queensberry rules. Charles Harby, boxing commissioner, who was master of ceremonies and who has acted in that capacity many times since, maintains to this day he has seen nothing like it. The tenacious bout between Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Stanley Katchel in the National Sporting club of New York was a hard fight, but most of the old-timers insist it was not the equal of the lightweight battle sixteen years ago.

"Lavigne" said Sam, "was born of French-Canadian parents, in Saginaw, Mich., in 1871. He was eighteen years of age when he fought his first ring battle, which was against no less a fighter than the great George Siskoon. The bout was fought at Saginaw on March 1, 1889, and went seventy-seven rounds to a draw. Not content with this verdict, they met again on April 12 of the same year at Grand Rapids, Mich., and once again fought without any decisive result. The second battle was declared a draw after fifty-five rounds of bitter fighting.

"George became a little disgusted with the game at this point of his career, and retired for a couple of years. In 1891, he returned to it, leading his motto, Johnny Griffin, Jack Ewardard and others. I was attracted to him when he fought Young O'Brien on an eight-round draw, and took him under my management. I cannot recall the exact date of year, but it was in the early nineties. But about the hardest fight of George Lavigne was the hardest fight. In the history of boxing. It was fought between Lavigne and Joe Walcott at Maspeth, L. I., December 2, 1895.

"Walcott and Lavigne were bitter rivals. The Kid was a good bit heavier than George, but not enough to make it impossible for them to meet on an equal weight basis. So clearly Tom O'Rourke and myself got together and made the match.

"I insisted that Walcott make 132 pounds at 6 o'clock on the night of the battle. At that, I was giving Walcott a weight well under 125 at ringside. We posted weight forfeits of $500 a side.

"Walcott, and difficulty making the weight, several days before the fight O'Rourke wanted to forfeit the money, and have his man come in at catchweights, but I threatened to call off the match. So Walcott made the weight at 6 o'clock, the fight starting about 10.

"O'Rourke had bet me $1,000 to $500 Walcott would stop Lavigne. Inside of fifteen rounds, fight fans had become so used to seeing him topple over outweighing him thirty or forty pounds that they believed that no man near his own weight could stand against him. They had reckoned without Lavigne.

"At the sound of the song for the first round Walcott tore at George in his usual manner, and beat him up and down the ring. The 'Kid's' ears were nearly torn off by the fury of Joe's attack. But he never gave ground, save when forced to by the negro's superior strength, and fought back as only Lavigne could fight.

"The odds at the start were two and three to one on Walcott. Lavigne, to the eye of the crowd, was a better man. But I knew better.

"As the fight continued, and Lavigne refused to fall, Walcott became discouraged. I told George that he had the lion on the run, and he smiled through his battered lips, and nodded an assent. And what a beating he gave Walcott in the closing rounds!

"The 'Kid' beat this 'Giant Killer' all over the ring. At the fifteenth round the man who had agreed to retire in his shorts on the run, and he smiled through his battered lips, and nodded an assent. And what a beating he gave Walcott in the closing rounds!

"Such is the history of Lavigne's hardest battle. In later years and in Fresno he was the English champion, at the National Sporting club of London. The best weight Burge could make was around 140, and he was a five to one favorite over Lavigne. 'Pugsy' Beethoven didn't think it fair to ask the 'Kid' to give away so much weight, and said that the championship could not hinge on the battle, but George insisted that the fight be for the world's title. He stopped Burge in eighteen rounds.

"Soon after this Lavigne and I parted, but were always the best of friends. His brother handled him in his later fights, when he began to slip back. But I knew him, and handled him when he was at his best—in his hardest battles, when George (Kid) Lavigne was the champion of the whole world. There has never been another like him.

"After many ups and downs (mostly down), the Saginaw Kid is doing very well running a cafe in Detroit. Fitzpatrick had a letter from him recently, in which he stated that he was making a very comfortable living. Those of you who remember what a great mixer the 'Kid' was in his ring days might do well to drop in and test his present mental ability.

Reserve Clause Can Stand Test Asserts Author

New York Lawyer Who Wrote Famous Clause in Baseball Contracts Claims to Be Confident It Will Be Sustained by the Courts if a Fight Should Be Made

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The signing of Joe Tinker and Mortecol Brown with the Federal Baseball league has renewed discussion in baseball circles regarding the legality of the reserve clause. Tinker has contracted to manage the Chicago Federal and Brown the St. Louis Federal. Both were the property of the Cincinnati Nationals.

The present form of National League baseball contract containing this reserve clause was drawn up by John Conway Folsch, an attorney here, who has given views are given in a statement published here today. He said:

"The reserve clause, so called in baseball, is a contract which binds the player to the employer on an option on the time for next year, is it anything unusual? Not at all.

"The present contract goes beyond that, however, and specifically provides that a portion of the salary agreed to be paid to the player is to be retained as direct consideration for the privilege granted to the club of reserving the player.

"The contract will stand the test in court or elsewhere, you may be sure.

"The players are as much interested in upholding the reserve clause as are the owners. If at the close of each season the whole situation degenerated into a mad scramble for players, the whole system, which has made the game possible, would go to smash and the good old days of baseball would be a thing of the past. Each season used to fetch seventy games and play thirty more in the outfield each year for $10,000, which has made the game what it is.

Pollok Stops to Arrange Plans

Manager for Freddy Welsh Here for a Short While en Route to New Orleans

Harry Pollok, manager for Freddy Welsh, who is to manage the New Orleans newspaper man, stopped over in Atlanta, Ga., yesterday afternoon to take up details of the fight between Welsh and Frank Whitney, which will be held here on January 6. Welsh is present in New Orleans, training for his match with Johnny Dundee, on that city and Pollok was en route to that city to see Dundee.

Pollok says Welsh will beat Dundee but that it will be a close contest. He was anxious to learn something of Whitney, since Welsh has never met the Cedar Rapids carpenter, and he has no desire to have his man climb into a ring with Whitney, holding him in for the full ten rounds of the match.

Pollok plans to bring the fight here, and will arrive here Friday afternoon, and will be immediately to put on a few finishing touches to his training.

Willard Knocks Out Geo. Rodel

Kansas Heavyweight Finds South African Fighter an Easy Proposition

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 29.—Jess Willard, Kansas knockout out George Rodel, of South Africa, in the fifth round here last night. The best weight Rodel could make was around 160, and he was a five to one favorite over Willard.

Willard weighed in at 215 pounds. After the second round there was no referee warning Willard against using his elbows. In the sixth round Willard landed a punch over the most of the leading. Willard remained on the defensive.

The first two rounds found the men fighting wildly and clinching. In the third and fourth Willard used the ropes later sent Rodel to the floor. Willard opened the fifth with a right to Willard's face. Willard retaliated and a moment later sent Rodel to the floor for the count of nine. In the sixth the referee warned Willard against using his elbows. In the seventh, and Willard knocked Rodel down. In the eighth Willard landed a punch over the count of nine.

Rodel was weak when the ninth round started. After several vicious swings Willard landed the knockout blow, a fight apparent to the law.

Auburn Offers Indians Post-Season Game

Coach Donahue Says That His Schedule Will Not Permit of November Game With Red Men—Would Play Saturday Following Thanksgiving

Auburn wants to play the Carlisle Indians in Atlanta on the Saturday following Thanksgiving of next year. This is the report made by Coach Mike Donahue to Charlie Watson, who is handling negotiations toward bringing the Indians to this city next fall. After the athletic committee at the Alabama situation had considered the matter carefully.

Coach Donahue says it will be practically impossible to give the Red Stars a November date, owing to the fact that these were practically settled by the time the last playing season closed. It would, therefore, be necessary for the Plainsmen take the Indians either in October or else on a post-season date.

Watson has not yet had an opportunity to hear from the Indians as to whether or not the Indians will come down on that date. However, if their schedule, as it is now, is duplicated next fall, it will be practically impossible for the Indians to play here on the Saturday following Thanksgiving.

Plan to Number Football Players Gains in Popularity

Such a Scheme Would Enable Spectators to Follow More Easily Details of Football Game—Many Prominent Eastern Authorities Endorse Proposition

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29.—The plan of numbering football players in order that the spectators may better follow the details of the game received official consideration a few years back, when Parke H. Davis, of Princeton, placed himself on record as favoring the scheme. During the season just closed several college teams gave the plan a trial, and now the suggestion has been made that all college teams number the players next year.

This has provoked considerable discussion, from which it can be seen that the strongest opposition to the plan comes from that class of football men who believe that the game should be played for the enjoyment of the graduates, alumni and friends rather than for the amusement of the general public, but even that class point out no good reason why the players should not be numbered. It is pointed out that it would help the average spectator in following the play, and more than half the spectators who are present at a football game should be so numbered.

THE SPOTLIGHT BY GRANTLAND RICE

THE BROOK OF THE GAME.—'Twas ever thus from childhood's hour—My head is bloodied and I'm vowed; My disposition's growing sour. And here I wince and cry aloud.

Last night I held three luscious aids. And two fat kids upon the side; Then I prepared to run the bases. Not dreaming that I'd have to slide.

I thought I'd nailed a rich oasis—A gold mine that was undisplayed; I drew three kings and two fat aces. And not another sucker stayed!

In the meanwhile no one has thought it necessary to obtain an interview as to what Miller, Wilson, Dolan, Butler and Robinson thought of inhabiting St. Louis this summer. That part of the evidence was taken for granted.

It was Yale spirit and Yale System that woke the intercollegiate world up to the thrill of victory. And having sowed the seed, Yale is now reaping the whirlwind entailed by the awakening. The margin is wide in his favor but one wallop today is worth ten planted year before last.

In the late C. J. Caesar was ambitious, what would you call he is now planning to host them into the first division. More than that he doesn't see any particular reason for not scrambling on around the top if there should be any lull in the firing line.

THE J. AND J. EPIPHANY.—Jack and Jill a famous duo. Went up the hill for a pail of water. They came to a brook by a root-gnarled stump. And without a look Jack leapt to jump.

In rapid descent he left the scene. Leaving behind him a little bit of fun. With her heart a-thumping Jill stood unhurt. For you don't go jumping in a hobble skirt.

Pittsburg carries out of the best pitching possibilities in the National league. They're Hendrix, Adams, McQuillen and O'Toole. Adams and McQuillen carried their share of the burden last year. O'Toole rendered hers during an operation, and Hendrix added fair play to the team.

There is at least one golden 1914 thought ahead. In summing up the white hope outlook there is no possible opening for any slump from 1913 forward. There may be no advance out the law of gravity forbids any descent below the borders of the south pole.

Last spring, when Joe Wood accidentally benched Bobby Byrne, we suggested at the time that the incident carried no good omen for either through the campaign on beyond. The blow undoubtedly set the third baseman back by half a dozen strides, while Wood finished with one of the poorest years he has ever shown.

CARDINAL ROSTER SHOWS MANY NEW PLAYERS FOR 1914

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 29.—Many new faces will be with the Cardinals when Manager Hugie takes his squad to St. Augustine to get into shape for the long season of 1914. When Hugie starts preliminary work for the campaign, which he hopes will bring the club out of eighth place, there will be only eleven athletes in the squad who were here last season.

Many of the ball tossers, though, who will take the trip have been seen here before. But not regulars with the club last year. Five of them, Wilson, Miller, Butler, Dolan and Robinson, starred here in 1913 with the Pirates.

Lee Magee, left field; Oakes, center field; and Chief Wilson, right pitcher, will be with the Cardinals. Magee, with Evans and Whitted on hand, ready to take what place should open for them.

There is some talk for the Cardinals, though, since the trade with the Pirates has put them in a fair third baseman, who has a good deal of speed, Bill Ball. He is being put on the roster as a regular.

One of the uncertainties of the team is in the hitting line. Arny Hunter, who is being kept in the team, is unable to get into any form, but he will be kept in the team, as he is a regular shortstopper, but if he falls behind, he will be replaced by Whitted.

Whitted will take care of the position, but if he falls behind, he will be replaced by Whitted. The little aviator of the local National league, though, may find himself

Make Swimming A College Sport

National Collegiate Association Now in Session Will Formulate Set of Rules

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The eighth annual convention of the National Collegiate association, which convened here today, will discuss amateur athletics in all its phases. Representatives of more than 100 colleges in the United States are present.

A new field of college athletics will be proposed, that of swimming. It is proposed to appoint a special committee to draft rules of competition for swimming and water polo, which will thus become officially recognized.

The association will also discuss college football. At last year's meeting Prof. G. W. Elmer, of Wisconsin, made a report that there was not one fatality in the college games during the 1912 season, but as there have been some fatalities this year, it is not unlikely that the association may make some further changes in the game.
