A Personal Word
From Mr. Bottenfield
to Out-of-Town Readers
and Investors

Ten Southern States from Virginia to Texas have participated liberally by cash subscriptions in the founding of Oglethorpe University in Atlanta.

The campus of Oglethorpe University is a part of Silver Lake Estates; the perpetual use of Silver Lake has been given to the University along with the donation of land.

Silver Lake Estates has been designed and will be established in connection with Oglethorpe, as a residence community of highest merit.

That these ten Southern States will take an interest in the surroundings of their University cannot be questioned.

We unhesitatingly invite Georgia and Southern investors to participate with us in this development of one of the most attractive and desirable residence communities in the South, assuring them with full confidence of splendid profits from their investment.

We ask you to write us and let us mail you a SILVER LAKE ESTATES booklet. If there is anything we have not made clear, ask us about it; let us give you any information you may wish about this investment, the best, in our opinion and that of many others, that Atlanta has yet offered.

Respectfully,

L. P. BOTTENFIELD.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 23, 1913.

An environment of culture and refinement is assured at Silver Lake Estates. It is sure to do new Oglethorpe University at Silver Lake Estates assures all of this. It also assures other residence properties in the entire South. With these exclusive and highly desirable an investment worthy of more than passing attention. Realize that you can, if you act on all this property. Read this entire ad and know the whole story for yourself.

With today's announcement of more than $300,000 already subscribed, and the plan placed before the people of Atlanta for their

 not, let it go. The fund will be given and ground will be broken for the first uni-buildings in the early spring. OGLETHORPE UNIVERSITY will be a part-great big, important part--of SILVER LAKE ESTATES; for its 137-acre campus in-the use of Silver Lake, upon which will front some of Atlanta's most attractive

Ask Whom You Please--The Answer Is Always the Same: "Silver Lake Estates Offers Wonderful and Safe Opportunities for Investment." Read These Facts!

Silver Lake Estates must strongly appeal to the careful and conservative investor, and to the young man to whom safety as well as substantial return is an important factor.

Let us take, for sake of illustration, the purchase of ten shares of stock, though, of course, you are at liberty to purchase as much more than ten shares as you wish. For ten shares, amounting to $1,000, which we take as the unit basis, you pay $200 cash and $200 each year thereafter for four years, in monthly, quarterly, or semi-annual payments.

Conservatively estimated, the returns from your $1,000 investment will be
 (1) a land dividend, consisting of a lot of your selection in Silver Lake Estates worth $1,000; (2) $3,000 in cash profits from the sale of the remainder of the property, and (3) the return of your original investment, making a total of $5,000 for your $1,000 interest.

How can this be done, you ask? Here is the way:

There are in Silver Lake Estates, by actual survey, 113,500 feet of frontage, from which must be deducted for parks and playgrounds 22,000 feet, leaving net residence frontage of 91,500 feet.

Purchased and developed at a total cost to the company of $500,000, Silver Lake Estates, ready for home building, will bring on the market at present prices a total of more than $2,500,000, or $5 for every dollar put into it. That it will do this cannot be questioned; we know it from experience.

That is the plan in a nutshell. Can you conceive of a more satisfactory, a more substantial investment? Recall, if you will, these excerpts from Governor Slaton's letter:

"There is no tract I know of anywhere which, with the improvements proposed, will combine more desirable qualities for residence purposes than does Silver Lake.

"Silver Lake Estates has in it all the possibilities of an ideal home section, and there is no doubt many Atlantians will want to live there."

This from Hon. Hoke Smith:

"There is no more beautiful place for suburban residences than the land surrounding Silver Lake.

"The location there of the Oglethorpe University should prove an additional reason for making a society of culture and refinement."

And if you have any doubts about this concern, read this from President
 Frank Hawkins, of the Third National Bank of Atlanta:

"Mr. L. P. Bottenfield has had a very satisfactory account with this bank for years, and has our full confidence. We regard him as a man of integrity, and of exceptional ability in his line, having been very successful in the real estate business."

To take advantage of this extraordinary opportunity for investment, you should act now--at once. This is no long-time, stock-selling proposition, nor are there any big salaries or bonuses attached to it. It is a plain business or partnership investment proposal, in which every dollar will be put to a dollar's worth of use.

Many investors have already joined us; many others are preparing to come with us immediately, realizing that but few days remain in which to close up this big transaction and plan for the early development of this property.

If you want to be with us, see us at once.

Special Peachtree Street Display

We direct your special attention to our SILVER LAKE ESTATES and OGLETHORPE UNIVERSITY display at 57 Peachtree street,

 Come in and get a Silver Lake Estates booklet.

Inquiries are coming in--
 Conservative investors are becoming members of this concern.
 Everyone is talking of how wonderful an opportunity is offered in Silver Lake Estates.

But---

If you wish to be among those who will share in the profits, we suggest that you look into this proposition and act without further delay. The time of closing is short and this means money to you.

You Must

WHAT WILL ATLANTA GIVE TO BUILD BIG UNIVERSITY?

Seventy Citizens Have Subscribed $1,000 Each and Many Have Given Liberally, but Home Folks, Are Called Upon to Take Example From Others and Donate Freely—Establishment of College in Atlanta Now Certain

NEW Oglethorpe university, which is to rise from the ashes of old Oglethorpe after 12 years, comes to Atlanta with assets of more than $300,000 in cash subscriptions and land.

Oglethorpe asks of Atlanta $250,000 to complete its fund and to make possible its immediate establishment upon the beautiful Peachtree road site which has been given it by public spirited citizens.

More than seventy prominent men of Atlanta and vicinity, who will form part of Oglethorpe's board of trustees of 200 members, have given each $1,000; and a number of these have expressed a purpose to add to their donations.

There are 106 men throughout the south, from North Carolina to Texas, each of whom has given $1,000. In all of these states there is not a church which has been appealed to but has subscribed liberally for the refunding of Oglethorpe, and practically every one of them will place at least one man on the board of trustees.

S. M. Inman, of Atlanta, has subscribed $5,000 upon the following terms: $1,000 unconditionally; $4,000 more upon the raising of $150,000, making $5,000; an additional $10,000 when $200,000 has been raised, and another $20,000 when the fund raised reaches $500,000.

Other subscriptions from these states are still to come but now that they have made their substantial offerings, they are naturally awaiting the reply to their question:

What is Atlanta going to do? The response they expect to be speedy and generous. If it be not, other southern cities are waiting for Oglethorpe.

Not only Atlanta, but all Georgia is interested in it, and from cities all over Georgia have come substantial subscriptions for the establishment of the university here.

Georgia has given more than $110,000 of the fund already subscribed for the founding of this institution in Atlanta. Georgians outside of Atlanta have given more than $40,000 to this fund. They want it in Atlanta as well as do Atlantians, and they mean to have it.

Woodrow Wilson Played on Campus as Boy of Ten; Joseph M. Brown and Sidney Lanier Were Students—Several Governors Were Graduates Before Civil War Destroyed Institution

OLD Oglethorpe University has as distinguished a place in history as any educational institution in the land. Woodrow Wilson, whose uncle was a professor there for ten years, played as a boy beneath the big trees on the campus at Milledgeville. William G. McAdoo was also reared on the campus. Joseph M. Brown, former governor of Georgia, was a graduate of the last class in 1872. Theodore Roosevelt and United States Senator Bacon are both descended directly from its founders.

The whole history of the south, and to some extent that of the nation from 1816 until long after the war, was intimately interwoven with that of this first great southern university.

It is just such another southern and national institution as this that Atlanta is now planning to rebuild from old Oglethorpe's ashes.

While most histories of Oglethorpe begin with the year 1825, as a matter of fact, the idea began as far back as 1822, when leading Georgians and southerners began to dream and talk of its founding.

The historian Charles Edgeworth Jones, gives the following circumstantial description of how the university had its origin and was chartered by the general assembly of Georgia in 1835:

"This university had its origin in a division of the interests of the Educational Society of Georgia, at its dissolution, between the two annual labor schools, the Midway seminary and the Oglethorpe institute. The trustees of the Midway seminary, in the spring of 1835, tendered to the trustees of the Oglethorpe institute, believing that the latter would give weight and permanency to the object, and secure the moral and religious influences over it which, with a strict and reasonable discipline, would render it more worthy of support and confidence. The trustees accepted the offer, and appointed a committee to report on the expediency of elevating it to the rank of a college.

That committee reported at the fall meeting of the Presbytery in 1835, through their chairman, the Hon. W. A. Nibbet, the following resolutions which were adopted: 'Resolved, That it is expedient that the Oglethorpe institute be endowed, organized and maintained a college, to be under the exclusive government and control of the Presbytery of Georgia; it was further desired unanimously that this institution shall be located at Midway, Baldwin county, a suburb of Milledgeville, in pursuance of the determination, the Presbytery appointed a board of trustees, consisting of twenty-four members, to take charge of Oglethorpe university as the new college was called. The first meeting of this board was held at Milledgeville, Ga., October 21, 1835; and just two months from that date the desired charter was procured from the general assembly.

BEGAN IN 1836.
On November 24, 1836, the university faculty was organized with the election of Rev. C. P. Bonner as president. The construction of the university was laid with appropriate ceremonies and an address was delivered by Chief Justice Joseph Henry Lumpkin, March 31, 1837. The main college building, a magnificent structure of the Greek order, was completed in July, 1840. Its facade consisted of a row of splendid Ionic pillars with a broad staircase, which was the finest of any college in the United States. On each side of the main building were dormitories and other structures.

The college commenced operation in 1838, and the first class was graduated in 1839. In the fall of 1839, the Presbytery, at the request of the board of trustees, elected as president of the college, Dr. J. M. Smith, a graduate of Princeton, who was succeeded by Dr. J. DeWitt Falmagne, who remained in office until his death, which occurred September 2, 1855.

The exercises of Oglethorpe university were suspended during the close of the war, through a lack of necessary funds, and from 1867 to 1875 the college was suspended with financial difficulties.

Finally, on October 6, 1869, Rev. W. M. Cunningham was chosen president. He died, however, in 1870, and Dr. J. DeWitt Falmagne, on March 31, 1870, Dr. David Willis was appointed his successor. About the same time it was decided to remove the university to Atlanta, where by exercises were resumed in October, 1870, with Dr. Willis as president. After continuing its operations for a year or two, in 1872 the institution closed, and has not since been reopened.

HAD FAMOUS STUDENTS.

In the days of its glory Oglethorpe accomplished an unparalleled work in the intellectual development of southern mankind. Its alumni list includes hundreds of distinguished and useful men. Among them were numerous governors of Georgia, and the immortal poet-Sidney Lanier. On its faculty were numbered some of the greatest literary men and scientists of its age. The famous LeCombes both taught at Oglethorpe. From the institution were graduated some of the ablest men steadily in assets and reputation. Only the war and the terrible incidents attending the reconstruction period have prevented the institution from attaining the position which it has now reached.

In 1837, Oglethorpe was such an institution as Princeton, Yale and Harvard had not been for the faithful days which followed, it would have had the reputation of the best of the south.

But another day has dawned in the south, an era of unprecedented material prosperity and a great intellectual awakening. The men who have held the reins of the great institutions of the north, such as Princeton, Yale, and Harvard. They have determined to make the future nobler than the past.

this and other movements, it is the sort for the benefit of Atlanta, and concluded the committee to make a preliminary report to the Atlanta press for what it has done and proposes to do for the building of this institution. The motion was carried and the meeting adjourned.

My Dear Sir: At a recent meeting of the synod of Georgia, which was largely attended from all over the state, an opportunity was given to the Rev. Thornwell Jacobs to present the claims of Oglethorpe university.

I need not state that it was presented in Dr. Jacobs' inimitable way. His address of thirty minutes touched the deepest chords of the hearts of his hearers, and made a profound impression. The synod by a unanimous and ringing vote expressed its confidence in and sympathy for the movement. It commended the cause to the churches of the state as one worthy of their liberality. It furthermore requested the moderator, Rev. A. A. Little, to lead it in prayer to Almighty God for His blessing upon the enterprise; and at a subsequent time to express in a letter to the directors of the university, his profound interest in this work, and to convey to the citizens of Atlanta their sincere hope for the successful location of the institution in their city.

An moderator of the synod I take pleasure in conveying to you the desire of the synod that you may be divinely guided in this work, and that your efforts may be crowned with success to the glory of God.

Georgia Synod Indorses Work for Great College

Dr. Little Conveys Message to Directors Commending Efforts and Praying for Success

At a recent meeting of the synod of Georgia, the body which represents the thousands of Presbyterians throughout the state, the synod by a unanimous and ringing vote not only indorsed the proposition of the institution in Atlanta, but authorized the moderator of the synod, a distinguished Atlanta minister, Dr. A. A. Little, to convey to the people of this city their enthusiastic and prayerful interest in the effort that will be made here to raise a quarter million dollars to serve as the Atlanta bonus for the location of Oglethorpe university.

The moderator of the synod, Dr. Little, the pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, and an ardent supporter of the plan by pen and word. He was also authorized to address a letter to the board of directors of Oglethorpe expressing to them the sympathy of the synod with the board and the city of Atlanta in this movement, which means so much to the educational interests of the south. The letter follows:

ATLANTA WILL DO HER DUTY SAYS THORNWELL JACOBS

Future Home of Oglethorpe University Will Put Up Her Share of Fund—What Towns Like Anderson and Clinton Have Done Metropolis is Ready to Do—Grant Institution Will Be an Atlanta Enterprise

BY THORNWELL JACOBS.

Atlanta faces the educational crisis of her career. I believe she will solve it, as she has all her other great crises. In the Atlanta way, she is asked to do a great thing, a thing, the doing of which means more to her than any other matter that has ever held her attention. I say this deliberately. I know it is so.

I have been saying now for two years, proclaiming it by word and pen, that Atlanta would meet this crisis as she always does. I have said this from half a hundred platforms and to literally tens of thousands of people. Not one of them has doubted it. From Texas to Virginia not one of them has doubted it. They have put up their thousands upon thousands of dollars—all over the south—believing that Atlanta would do her part to re-establish Oglethorpe university, when the time came.

The time has come.

WHAT SMALL TOWNS DID.
Over in South Carolina the other year, in a little city of less than 10,000 people, the citizens got tired of sending their daughters away to school and raised over one hundred thousand dollars to build a college in their own midst. That was Anderson, S. C. If Atlanta were to do as well in proportion to her population she would give two million dollars to Oglethorpe. She is asked to put up only a quarter million.

Clinton College in their midst at a time when Clinton College had practically nothing but bright expectations. Counting her whole population, if Atlanta does as well for Oglethorpe, she will give over three and a half million dollars.

There then is Nashville, Tenn., a city where the people prize education so that it is worth as much as anything else they were already invested in Vanderbilt and Ward's and Belmont and the University of Nashville when the proposition to build a great Teachers' College was broached to her people. They responded with something like a half million dollars. As a consequence they will have the finest Teachers' College on earth.

The whole south is watching Atlanta. They remember the Atlanta spirit. Nashville and Anderson and Laurens and Clinton and scores of other towns and cities whereunto the fame of her success has gone are all sustaining Atlanta to see what she will do.

They will see her do it. This time she will be a great University. They will see her win it. A half-dozen towns want it and are ready with their bonuses. But Atlanta's motto is: ATLANTA ALWAYS ANSWERS.

CLINTON SETS EXAMPLE.
Nine miles from this city of Laurens is a little town called Clinton. There are about two thousand white people

WE HAVE in the above subdivision twenty-seven large, shady lots; each lot carries sewer, water and sidewalks. Prices and terms below:
LOT 1—63x202 feet, $1,800.

YOU CAN pay one-fourth cash, balance 1, 2 and 3 years, 7 per cent; before you pay your first note you will have water, sewer, tile walks and the car line. This is your home site. You will want to live there. It's beautiful property and in the right street.

THE SIDE WALKS are already down on Cheshire road and the road is 80 feet wide and cherted. Just over the hill from Piedmont Driving Club.

OUR GRADERS will finish up next week and on Monday our shrubbery man will be on the ground with several hundred of the choicest trees, to be placed along this 80-foot boulevard. He will also cover the property with the very best shrubbery that grows. We simply want to make it a little home paradise. We have cut the lots of good size. All the fronts on Cheshire road are 60 to 66 feet fronts and on Oakland Circle from 60 to 75 feet wide. Most of them 60 to 70 feet. Some of the lots are 148 feet in the rear.

We have six lots on one side of Oakland Circle that are 60 to 75 feet wide; two of them 70 feet each, 220 feet deep. That six friends ought to own. They are simply beautiful, and if Nature left anything undone I will finish the job and make them perfect. East front and shady.

New York Stock Market Narrow And Dull All the Short Session

The Apparent Indifference of the Market to Adverse Factors Was Ascribed to the Stability It Derived From the Short Interest

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The stock market of today brought to a close a week of dullness which for this season of the year almost unparalleled. Today's trading was as colorless as the preceding session and price changes among the active stocks were trivial. The account of business was only about $5,000 shares.

The market appeared to be impervious to the influence of adverse factors. The Mexican situation remains day after day without significant change. Attention is being paid to its bearing on the course of prices. London's influence in this market is being ascribed to the irregular course of American stocks and absence of foreign trading here.

The weekly review of trade told of inclinations of continuation in various lines. Another disturbing feature was the acute weakness of various industrial stocks of which the general level was most conspicuous. Within five minutes after the opening this stock broke 2 1/2 within a fraction of its low record. Subsequently it rallied.

The apparent indifference of the market to these influences was ascribed to the stability which it derived from the short interest. It is believed that although there was little evidence of efforts to force up quotations, stock movements fractionally throughout the active list. Late selling of Reading and Union Pacific brought about a reverse movement, however, so that the close showed no definite tendency.

The bank statement was disappointing. Although a substantial cash gain had been indicated by known movements of currency, there was an actual loss of $1,237,000. The increase of $1,741,000, which presumably reflected the financing of the week and the net result was to cut down the surplus by over $5,000,000.

There has been an appreciable decline in the call money rate. This did not come about immediately, but has been gradually increasing since the return of funds is now setting in. The decline in the call money rate is a sign of the present money market with that of a year ago. It will be remembered, however, that the regular weekly offering of the United States Treasury notes has no bidding from the New York market.

There has been a slight improvement in the cotton market. Higher values in cotton mill has been made by Fall River. The situation in the cotton market is still unsettled. A strong feature of the cotton market is the restriction of consumption in predicted for the winter. The cotton market is still unsettled.

Prices show little change for the week. The cotton market is still unsettled. The situation in the cotton market is still unsettled. The cotton market is still unsettled.

LIVERPOOL CABLES WERE LITTLE LOWER THAN DUE. Futures Closed 1 Point Up to 2 Off—Spots 2 Points Lower. Sales 6,000 Bales.

The opening was attended by a reversal of the trade buying which had been considered almost responsible for the rise. Support from the previous day, however, and the market was 8 to 10 points lower. An unusual feature was not only in Fall River but also in other lines.

The following were the ruling prices in the New York market: Sales 6,000; American and October, 1.00; November, 1.00; December, 1.00.

WOMEN CAN'T GET VOTE NOW, LLOYD-GEORGE SAYS

Chancellor Declares People Are Out of Sympathy With Suffragettes

By Associated Press. OXFORD, England, Nov. 22.—Chancellor Lloyd-George thinks it impossible for women suffragettes to obtain passage of a bill granting the parliamentary franchise to women in the British Isles as they have not a majority of the people behind them and have not captured any political machine. He gave this reply to three deputations which waited on him here this morning and broached the question of woman suffrage.

Speakers for the deputation from the section of the political union and George frankly that he, being in favor of votes for women, should request the government if it did not grant them the parliamentary franchise.

Lloyd-George replied that he was ready to do anything within the limits of party loyalty to advance the cause of woman suffrage, but for the present he did not feel called on to go beyond those limitations.

"The influence of some of the women," said Mr. Lloyd-George, "has set public opinion in the British Isles against them and there is no use to pass a woman's suffrage bill against the wishes of the public."

"As to the forcible hounding of the hunger strikers, the second alternative is to allow them to starve and that is counselled by nobody."

12 PER CENT CHILDREN "QUEER," SAYS GESELL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—With the statement that twelve children in every hundred in the public schools are "mentally unusual," Dr. Gesell, in a conclusion published today by the United States bureau of education, reports the adoption of a special classification for students in the schools of the country.

The necessity for such classification and the creation of special classes and forms of education for "mentally unusual" pupils is made necessary by the remarkable diversity in the character, antecedents, religion and home influences of the children receiving education.

"Last of the Shoguns" Survivor of Old Japan, Passes Away in Tokio

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The death of Prince Keiki Tokugawa, announced in brief cablegram from Tokio today, severs a connecting link between the old and new Japan. None of the contemporaries of the pre-Meiji era or the days of the Shogunate enjoyed such distinction as he. In these latter days of the era of enlightenment in Japan it is doubtful if the average foreign visitor or even resident was aware of the substantive existence of a man who barely fifty years ago was the de facto ruler of Japan.

Belgium Stays Out of 'Frisco Exposition

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22.—It is announced that the Belgian government has decided not to participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915 for reasons similar to those which governed Germany and Great Britain and for the additional reason that the United States did not participate officially in the exposition held at Brussels and Ghent.

Machine Elliott as "Futurist's Wife"

Paris says that women who wish to preserve the note of harmony in their gowns must show bare feet with sandals or at any rate the modified sandal or corset which has the slipper foot but has narrow ribbon lacing across the instep and continuing half way up the leg. This slipper has, of course, already made its appearance wherever the tango is danced or the "trot" is trotted, but heretofore it has been worn over silk stockings.

While the production of the Oriental play "Le Mitrain" has set Paris crazy on the subject of "tampade costume" London has taken kindly to the idea of bare feet for another reason. That is the extraordinarily effective appearance of Madame Elliott as "Futurist's wife" in the English production of the Biblical play, "Jesus and His Brethren." Miss Elliott wears sandals and—rings—but nothing else on her feet.

Fashionable women in London are all striving to imitate her and there is joy in the hearts of the chiropodists and money in their pockets as well.

Already several New York women of the more reckless section of society have made their appearance with bare feet and the modern sandal or corset. The fashion does not seem very appealing in blizzared weather, but when has fashion paid any attention to the thermometer?

Paris says bare feet. So you might as well prepare to shiver!

Will V. Zimmer, Fulton county game warden, has requested The Journal to warn the sportsmen against hunting without a license. He says that since the third season opened on Thursday morning he and his deputy wardens have made cases against eleven hunters who failed to provide themselves with the required license.

"The law requires," says Mr. Zimmer, "that a hunter must take out a license before he can hunt, and also that he must not hunt upon another's land without first obtaining the owner's permission."

"I find that some hunters have the impression that if they take out a license they are entitled to hunt wherever they please. This is not the case, and I advise that other hunters believe they are not required to obtain a license to hunt if they have the permission of the land owner. This is likewise true of the land owner's permission must be secured."

Mr. Zimmer says that he has been informed that some pothunters—men who make hunting a habit—are killing more than the allot number of twenty-five birds a day and are offering the game for sale. These pothunters, he says, have no regard for the law, and they will be prosecuted to the fullest extent whenever caught.

Postmasters Prophets, Thinks Bureau Heads

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Assuming the forecast that the coming holiday season will witness the heaviest postal business that the service ever experienced, the postoffice department today called on postmasters throughout the country to see to it that they did not run out of postage stamps.

At the same time while postmasters were warned not to let their stocks run out, the department has cautioned its officers to order too many. Therefore the department has ordered the postmasters with powers of divination and prophesying.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Care Cure by One Who Had It. In the spring of 1903 I was attacked by rheumatism and inflammatory rheumatism, which was very severe. I was unable to walk and was in great pain. I tried many remedies, but none gave me any relief. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I found a remedy that cured my rheumatism, and I have since been able to do my usual work. I have since been able to do my usual work. I have since been able to do my usual work.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

THE announcement of the engagement of Miss Lucy Hoke Smith to Ensign Alton Simpson is of special interest not only in Georgia but throughout the south and the country at large.

THE approach of Thanksgiving is being heralded by a number of plans originated by debutantes and matrons to make the bright season one of comfort and good cheer among the less fortunate ones of the big city.

A beautiful idea was evolved some time past in the Free Kindergartens, which took root and grew until it has assumed mammoth proportions.

One of the Kindergartens has extended an invitation to the inmates of the Home for Old Women to be their guests, and early Thursday morning will witness the touching sight of old ladies and babies making their Thanksgiving together.

The China Department in Our Downstairs Section Is Worth Seeing

The knowledge of things is gained either through study or investigation. You cannot imagine the beauties of a grove by looking at it from the outside. You cannot enjoy the real trade advantage of a store, or one of its departments by merely wondering what it looks like, or what sort of wares it sells. That is the reason you should personally investigate our China Department. Know what it looks like. Know what it sells. Know the superlative quality of its wares. This advertisement is the open door to our beautiful department, an invitation to call on a guest for knowledge—not fasting the obligation to buy—but to inform yourself of what to buy when you're ready. Thousands of artistic housekeepers have been amazed to learn what magnificent collections of beautiful wares were assembled in our China Department. Whether you wish to select China or Crystal for your own cabinet, or whether you want gifts for wedding, anniversaries, or the holidays, now is the best time for selecting from the most beautiful as well as the most practical wares.

LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Bring Back its Color and Lustre with Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol well boiled, will turn gray and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant—removes every bit of dandruff, keeps scalp clean and falling hair. Making the Sage Tea: Put sulphur (red) at home, enough to touch the water. Boil way to get the ready-to-use tonic. Continue about to cook a few hours at dark hours, known as "Wet's" Sage and Sulphur Hair Tonic. This tonic is a lot of mass. While gray, faded hair is not dead, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By restoring your hair with Grandma's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell because it does it so naturally. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by repeating all over hair become beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—(LAVY.)

The Hermit Thrush

Into the woods at eve I went Alone, and softly trod, To seek if happily I might hear The carol of God.

A russet carpet for my feet, The fall, gray pine trees shed, And ghostlike in the balmy dusk My silent footsteps sped.

When soft and sweet from fragrant sighs Hang out the clear refrain As if an angel touched the strings Again and yet again.

'Twas brimmed with all immortal things, That poignant, liquid strain, Life, death, and love, and fairyland, And triumph over pain.

All earthly thoughts slipped from my soul, Light mounting to the skies; He little rocks of care or woe, Who dreams in Paradise And that is why at eve I fit Through pathways seldom trod, Where happily I may chance to hear 'The violins of God.'—The Cavalier.

Thanksgiving Candies

EVERY festive occasion calls for candy in some form. It may be dainty mint-flavored bonbons as a complement to an elaborate dinner, or a box of fine Chocolates as an appropriate gift to the hostess.

Nunnally's Candies have been the standard of quality for more than a century. They have helped to make successful many formal affairs; have kept enjoyment at its height where friends have met informally, and have proved Cupid's swiftest arrow when words seemed to lose their meaning.

For Thanksgiving—for Christmas giving—for giving on every occasion where sentiment and good cheer mingle, Nunnally's Candies are most appropriate.

ONLY TWO MORE WEEKS
IN WHICH TO COUNT THE CIRCLES. THE ATLANTA JOURNAL'S GREAT PUZZLE CONTEST
CLOSES DECEMBER 6TH
100 Cash Prizes . . . . . $2,200 in Gold

THE PROBLEM
The problem is to count the circles. Every circle is complete and intersects or touches one or more other circles. There are no parts of circles or shams or deceptions of any sort in the puzzle. In the event that no one counts the exact number the prizes will be awarded for the nearest correct solutions. Accuracy and patience are the main requisites for arriving at the correct or nearest correct count. Those who display these qualifications to the best advantage will solve the puzzle best.

HOW TO ENTER
This contest is restricted to people residing in the states of Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi. A payment on subscription to The Atlanta Journal of from $1.10 to $4.00 for the Daily and Sunday edition, or from $1.50 to $4.00 for the Semi-Weekly edition of The Journal, entitles a contestant to submit a solution of the puzzle. The amount of money paid will cover the subscription price for the paper, according to the regular rate, whether for city delivery or by mail.

AS MANY DIFFERENT SOLUTIONS MAY BE SUBMITTED AS THE CONTESTANTS DESIRE, WITH STRAIGHTENED AS ADDITIONAL PAYMENTS WISE MAKE ONE, TWO, THREE, FOUR, FIVE, SIX, SEVEN, EIGHT, NINE, TEN, ELEVEN, TWELVE, THIRTEEN, FOURTEEN, FIFTEEN, SIXTEEN, SEVENTEEN, EIGHTEEN, NINETEEN, TWENTY, TWENTY-ONE, TWENTY-TWO, TWENTY-THREE, TWENTY-FOUR, TWENTY-FIVE, TWENTY-SIX, TWENTY-SEVEN, TWENTY-EIGHT, TWENTY-NINE, THIRTY, THIRTY-ONE, THIRTY-TWO, THIRTY-THREE, THIRTY-FOUR, THIRTY-FIVE, THIRTY-SIX, THIRTY-SEVEN, THIRTY-EIGHT, THIRTY-NINE, FORTY, FORTY-ONE, FORTY-TWO, FORTY-THREE, FORTY-FOUR, FORTY-FIVE, FORTY-SIX, FORTY-SEVEN, FORTY-EIGHT, FORTY-NINE, FIFTY, FIFTY-ONE, FIFTY-TWO, FIFTY-THREE, FIFTY-FOUR, FIFTY-FIVE, FIFTY-SIX, FIFTY-SEVEN, FIFTY-EIGHT, FIFTY-NINE, SIXTY, SIXTY-ONE, SIXTY-TWO, SIXTY-THREE, SIXTY-FOUR, SIXTY-FIVE, SIXTY-SIX, SIXTY-SEVEN, SIXTY-EIGHT, SIXTY-NINE, SEVENTY, SEVENTY-ONE, SEVENTY-TWO, SEVENTY-THREE, SEVENTY-FOUR, SEVENTY-FIVE, SEVENTY-SIX, SEVENTY-SEVEN, SEVENTY-EIGHT, SEVENTY-NINE, EIGHTY, EIGHTY-ONE, EIGHTY-TWO, EIGHTY-THREE, EIGHTY-FOUR, EIGHTY-FIVE, EIGHTY-SIX, EIGHTY-SEVEN, EIGHTY-EIGHT, EIGHTY-NINE, NINETY, NINETY-ONE, NINETY-TWO, NINETY-THREE, NINETY-FOUR, NINETY-FIVE, NINETY-SIX, NINETY-SEVEN, NINETY-EIGHT, NINETY-NINE, ONE HUNDRED.

It is not necessary to pay the same amount with each solution if more than one be submitted. As the main prizes have an added value according to what is paid in an subscription with the winning solution, contestants should familiarize themselves with the dividend schedule before sending in their subscription and solution.

Sent by check, money order, registered letter or in one or two stamps. Solutions unaccompanied by cash subscriptions will not be registered. The contest is open to both old and new subscribers within the territory designated.

Whatever is paid, whether on one or a number of solutions, will apply on a continuous subscription to The Atlanta Journal. No one associated with The Journal in any way will be allowed to enter this contest.

FIFTY-FIVE PRIZES—$2.00 in Gold, plus the amount paid with the winning solutions. These prizes may be worth $5.00 each.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS

Should there be any ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded to those sending less correct solutions. That is, if two people tied on the absolutely correct answer, they would have to count the second prize to determine which was entitled to the first prize and which to the second. This rule will be applied generally.

While the winning of a prize does not depend upon the time solution was registered, the puzzle is more or less elusive and the best thing to do is to begin counting at once. Send in your solution and if you find later you have made a mistake send in another. There is no limit to the number of different solutions that may be registered.

SCENES FROM GREAT GEORGIA-AUBURN GRIDIRON BATTLE YESTERDAY

Field Goals by Brickley Defeat The Blue '11'

Miraculous Educated Toe of Harvard's Great Fullback, Aided by a Team That Worked Like a Machine Throughout the Game, Wins Eastern Title for Crimson After Straight Football Failed to Score - Yale's Scoring Was on Field Goal and Accidental Safety

(By Associated Press) CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 22.—The Harvard football team of 1913 will pull back Charles E. Brickley playing in the stellar role, established a new epoch in Crimson gridiron history today by defeating Yale for the first time in the stadium by the score of 15 to 0.

Although twenty points were scored by the two eleven, neither succeeded in carrying the ball across the other's goal line, and all the points were the direct or indirect result of kicking. Seven times Brickley drove the ball splashing and turning over the heads of the Yale players and so deadly was his accuracy with the eye and toe that five times the ball crossed the goal line for Crimson points. Four times (Guerrier, Yale's field goal kicker, missed the same feat but only once did the leather spread cross Harvard's goal. To the Blue earned three points there was added an unearned two due to an accidental safety by Left End O'Brien, of Harvard.

Thus, thanks to Brickley's splendid kicking ability, did Harvard defeat Yale for the second time in two years and with undoubted right to the eastern intercollegiate football championship of the year. Excellent and spectacular as was Brickley's play both in running and kicking, the fact remains that the splendid backline that Coach Haugen developed this autumn earned equal glory with the famous drop-kicker, for it was the concerted play and efforts of the eleven men as a whole that paved the way for the situations from which Brickley scored the 15 points that stand tonight as Harvard's record against the Blue.

That Guernsey, on the other hand, failed to approach Brickley's feat was due almost entirely to the fact that the team he coached was unable to hold or drive the ball to a point where he could kick. The eleven passed from the improbable to the impossible.

Which should be the case was not determined for by any great physical superiority of the Harvard men as athletes, but rather by the coaching skill and system of attack and defense.

While the Harvard eleven played a well-balanced game in both offense and defense, they had the best and most conservative line of the east and full backs were superbly combined. Opposed to this was a Yale team that would undoubtedly have won under the "five yards in three downs" rule, but it was absolutely unskilled to win under the Harvard eleven of 1913.

That it was a Harvard victory in every sense devoid of flukes or questionable features, is eloquently proved by figures and statistics of the game won by Harvard against the Crimson supporters of the Blue and there was ample reason for the unbridled enthusiasm and cheering in Boston and Cambridge tonight. Harvard in all gained 222 yards and

Georgia Eleven Overwhelmed By Powerful Auburn Attack And Title Goes to Alabama

Georgia Started Like a Whirlwind and Scored With Perfectly Executed Forward Pass in First Five Minutes of Play, but From That Moment Until the Referee's Final Whistle the Athenians Were Outclassed - Auburn Promptly Got Busy After Georgia Scored and Slowly but Surely the Georgia Defense Crumbled Before the Fierce Line Bucks of Harris and Christopher, and the Dazzling End Runs of Captain Kirk Newell

BY DUDLEY GLASS

TEN THOUSAND shouting, raving, weeping fans saw the Red and Black banner of old Georgia hang at half mast last night while the Orange and Blue of Auburn ran to the top of the pennant pole.

Auburn had won her way straight through to the southern championship, without a defeat, scored against only by the once invincible Vanderbilt. The result was, Auburn 21; Georgia, 7. But the triple score did not tell the story of that wonderful game. Old Georgia fought every inch of the way, fought gamely, heroically, desperately.

It was at once a triumph and a tragedy. Even the thousand lunatics in the Auburn stands were softened as they saw the Orange and Blue triple the score in the final quarter, and there was more sympathy than derision in the bule call of "Taps" sounded by Auburn's battalion bugler as the end approached. The rival eleven had staked their all on the Atlanta game. Each had won a southern championship in days gone by, each had come to the field unbeaten, undaunted. Somebody had to lose. And Georgia was the victim.

It was the story of Waterloo told once more. When Harris had pushed the line until he had spent himself, another took his place, fresh and hearty, ready to do or die. Thus, the tremendous smashing of the Auburn backs, and always the spectacular, fiery runs of Captain Newell, gave the Alabamians the victory.

To Kirk Newell fell the honors of the day. To his greatest rival, Bob McWhorter, the star of Georgia, came small opportunity. His thousands of idolaters had hoped to see McWhorter celebrate his exit from the gridiron in a blaze of glory. They saw him given a chance for the limelight, once they saw him make a dazzling run in a broken field, carrying the ball far to the left in one of his famous circles, stop, dodge a half dozen antagonists, and swing back far to the right, only to be pulled down by the Alabama pack like a fox caught by the harrides. Again they saw him break past the interference, gain headway through the mesh and pull down Kirk Newell just in time to prevent the Auburn star from scoring on a brilliant run. Perhaps Georgia was afraid to confer her hopes on a dark man, target for eleven opponents; certainly no coach or captain could have doubted the most brilliant player of recent years. But McWhorter closed his career without fair opportunity to hold the center of the stage.

It was Kirk Newell, like, derry half back of the Auburn team, who stood out in a constellation of stars in the great game of the year. The old-timers in the stands with the knots of blue and orange on their hearts watched this slender Galahad of the gridiron tuck the oval under his arm, lower his homestead head and plunge into the line, and thought of another Auburn hero of twenty years ago, another featherweight half back who feared not, heated not, struggled on until sheer weight dragged him to the sod—"Dutch" Horsey, captain courageous, who won for old Auburn when yesterday's heroes were in kindergarten. And "Dutch" was there, too, watching from the stands, with

In the top picture Bob McWhorter is trying for a run around left end, with "Punk" Malone leading his interference. Lockwood, the giant Auburn guard, is seen in the center foreground of the picture, charging after McWhorter's interference like a rhinoceros. McWhorter's end runs, which have been the brilliant feature of many games during his four-year career, were stopped by Auburn yesterday because they had the great Georgia captain spotted from the first. The two center pictures are serenade scenes and very graphically illustrate the fierce, driving way the two lines came together every time the ball was put in play. But if he was bottled in offense, McWhorter at least made up for these failures by starting on the secondary defense. More than once Kirk Newell got by the last man on the Georgia team and had a clear road ahead of him for the Red and Black goal. If McWhorter hadn't been in the way, and the way McWhorter lacked the terrific Auburn halfback was almost sufficient to place the Georgia rooters for the way the Auburn forwards smothered McWhorter's attempted end runs. The third panel picture is a view of the automobiles backed along the north end of the gridiron. It was taken from the press box, which is on the roof of the grandstand. Last, but not least by no means, is Governor John M. Slaton, caught in the act of rooting for Georgia. He sat in a box immediately back of the west side line where he could see every play to good advantage. As the photographer snapped the governor and turned away, a humorist in the box behind called out: "Say, did you get his name?"

Chicago Stars Beat Badgers And Win Title

Stagg's Eleven Outclassed Wisconsin in Every Department of the Game and Won an Easy Victory by the Score of 19 to 0, Which Makes Them the Undisputed Champions of the West—Game Was Played Before 25,000 People on Stagg Field—Scalpers Are Bunt

(By Associated Press) TAGO FIELD, CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Outclassing, outgaming and out-kicking their opponents, University of Chicago football stars defeated the University of Wisconsin men 19 to 0 today and captured the undisputed title of eastern champions. The rout of the Badgers was a fitting climax to the Maroon's remarkable autumn work, for they have met and beaten all rivals, closing the season by beating last year's champions.

The Maroons played a steady machine-like game. Norgren's long punts were an important factor, dives into the line by Pierce and Gray clinched scores, and a great run of 82 yards for a touchdown by Gray, who had intercepted a forward pass, was the spectacular event of the game.

Gray's run turned a possible Wisconsin touchdown into one for the Maroons. The Badgers had the ball on Chicago's 20-yard line and with four yards to make in one attack, Quarterback Bellows tried a pass.

Gray leaped in the air and pulled down the oval. Only Bellows stood between him and the Badger goal and by a long sweeping run he eluded the cardinal quarter, ousted Orate and planted the ball behind the posts. Rain kept the crowd down to about 25,000, and many ticket scalpers suffered losses. The field was slippery, but not soft, and the rain ceased before the game started.

The first quarter was less than five minutes old when the Maroons pushed Norgren over for the first touchdown. The kickoff was missed.

A 30-yard run by Bellows started a Wisconsin rally late in the first quarter that nearly put the Badgers over. Buck bored big holes in the Chicago right wing and through it the Wisconsin backs carried the ball to the Maroon 10-yard line. Here holding in the line resulted in the ball's being awarded to Chicago and Norgren drove it 60 yards over the field and out of danger.

A series of forward passes, most of which went wrong, were tried without result by the Maroon nest. Gray's spectacular run was about the most disastrous termination of a forward pass that Wisconsin had. The ball was on Chicago's 20-yard line, near the close of the second quarter and Bellows took the chance for a touchdown and Bellows took the impossible from the angle. He hurled the oval where he thought Orate would be, but it was Gray who grabbed the ball, easily out-broke Bellows and Orate and planted the ball back of the posts. The goal kick was easy.

Touchdown number three came in the third quarter. Again a Wisconsin rally was stopped after the Badgers had made first down three times and the Maroons started Norgren, Russell, Gray and Pierce driving like a team back in a brief series of "straight football" plays. Harris missed the goal from a difficult angle after Pierce had crossed the line. The Chicago players were numbers.

McWhorter's 'Center Divide' Formation Tuned the Trick

BY BOB McWHORTER

Hate off to Auburn, 1913 southern football champions. Planning clearly, fairly, with superior defense yesterday afternoon at Ponce de Leon, they wanted that honor away from Georgia in one of the fiercest and most cleanly fought games ever seen in the south.

Now both the game was won and lost in another proposition. "To my mind," I was thinking that Auburn shift or "center divide" as some call it, did not know where to meet it. To that I stop it with my defense. I knew nothing and had not formed a defensive formation to combat them. There is no doubt in my mind that Georgia was off her feet.

For Purchasers of Motor Cars Here is a Plain Statement of Certain Economic Facts of Vital Interest and Importance

It is quite generally known that the Paige Car is a car of extra value for the money. Many men—thousands of them, doubtless—who realize this, do not understand how it can be so. Many who admit it the Paige seems to be the greatest car in the world at its price are skeptical because they don't see how the Paige Company can possibly have such advantages over competing manufacturers as to permit the production of so much better cars.

So here we propose to tell just how we can do build the greatest automobiles ever produced at their prices, or anywhere near their prices. What Our Small Capitalization Means

If our capitalization was five million or ten million or thirty million we would naturally and logically, as business men, have to try to earn dividends on such capitalization. That's perfectly simple. And where would such dividends, or profits, necessarily come from? The car, of course. Out of the price of the car.

The dividends on over-capitalization would be added to the natural price of the car, and you buyers would have to pay the dividends. Now what are the facts about Paige capitalization? Only $250,000. This low capitalization means much toward extra value in the Paige car.

PAIGE

Mechanically a Marvelous Motor Car

Lowest "Overhead" and How We Do It

Financial Strength an Important Factor

We spoke of credit. The financial strength of the Paige company permits it to command the work of the highest grade parts and material manufacturers at lowest prices, because the "credit risk" is minimized.

These then are incontrovertible reasons WHY the Paige Company CAN and DOES build—in the Paige car—the greatest automobile value ever produced.

Tear out this advertisement, and save it, to remind you to make comparisons of the conditions back of any automobile you may have in mind.

You Can See the Extra Value

Let it remind you, too, to go see the Paige at your dealer's. For yourself just how much extra value is in the Paige. You'll find the extra value, all right, and you'll know why and how it comes to be there.

We build two models, completely equipped with electric starting and lighting systems, the famous Paige 26" touring car and roadster, $1275, also three closed body types, the Paige "25" touring car and roadster $975.

Paige Cars $300 to $400 Underpriced

Such favorable manufacturing conditions as ours, coupled with the small capitalization and freedom from bonded or other indebtedness, reduce the price of the Paige car three or four hundred dollars.

That is provable, too. You can prove it, if you will compare the Paige with cars that sell for three or four hundred more.

Oglethorpe University.

ATLANTA faces the richest and ripest opportunity of her fortunate career, an opportunity to make herself the seat of a great institution of learning and to become the educational as well as the commercial center of the South.

Who can doubt that this community, whose face is always forward set, will measure up promptly and splendidly to the golden chance that awaits?

Oglethorpe University presents itself to Atlanta with assured assets of three hundred thousand dollars, consisting in part of land on Peachtree road already donated as a site and, in part, of money contributed in ten Southern States from Texas to Virginia.

Atlanta should not be less alert to her own interests and her own duty. The time has come when she must act. Let this city subscribe the two hundred and fifty thousand dollars asked and within a short time a fund for a million-dollar university will be assured.

What is Atlanta going to do? The question carries its own answer. Atlanta must and will raise among her own citizens the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars which has been fixed as the minimum of her own contribution.

Let us note briefly the plan for reviving Oglethorpe University and its far-reaching significance to this city. Nearly a hundred years ago there was organized by the Presbytery of Hopewell what was known as the Georgia Educational Society, the purpose of which was to promote in this State the cause of Christian education.

The Oglethorpe of those days was famous throughout the Union. Its faculty included scholars of national note, among them an uncle of Woodrow Wilson, and many of its students went forth to high leadership in the country's affairs; it was the alma mater of Sidney Lanier.

deavor. The darkness and misery in which the old Oglethorpe sank forty years ago are today transformed into wondrous floods of sunlight and prosperity. The air of the South is quick with hope and the hearts of her people are filled with unquenchable cheer. This is, indeed, an age of reconstruction. We have the means as well as the will for great things in every field of activity and we are determined that our progress shall not cease with material achievement but shall crown and glorify itself in the higher sphere of education.

This is the spirit in which the new Oglethorpe University is to be reared. How fortunate is Atlanta to be chosen as the seat and the chief instrument of this high purpose! Surely, the people of this city will respond to the call for leadership that rings up to them from the voice of all the South! It is now for them to say whether their community shall secure a university that will stand among the greatest of the nation. Their answer is foregone. They will meet this opportunity as they have met all others and, without delay, raise the quarter of a million dollars which is required.

This is an enterprise in which all Atlantans, regardless of church or creed, should join. It is pitched upon the same generous plane as that on which all the denominations of Georgia united in the State's early days when Oglethorpe and Emory and Mercer came forth as the common fruitage of a great movement for Christian education. As the Presbyterians of the last century joined liberally with other churches in establishing Mercer and Emory, so today all friends of education should join with Presbyterians in restoring to life and usefulness the eldest of the three brothers, the one that never came back from the war.

Atlanta cannot afford to lose the opportunity which, if realized, will advance beyond all reckoning her material interests and her prestige. The city's greatest need today is an institution of classical learning for men. We are proud of Agnes Scott, which ranks in the forefront of colleges for women, and of the Georgia Tech that young giant among institutions of its kind. But Atlanta's lack of a college for men is a grievous limitation to her growth and pride. It must be overcome and it can be, if our people will measure up to the opportunity before them.

The Presbyterians of Georgia and of the South are eager to establish a university that will be worthy of their educational ideals. They have fully awakened to their need and their duty in this regard. Atlanta should not be less alert to her own interests and her own duty. The time has come when she must act. Let this city subscribe the two hundred and fifty thousand dollars asked and within a short time a fund for a million-dollar university will be assured.

This is Atlanta's opportunity. It is an opportunity for all her interests and all her people. Let them seize it without delay.

The South's Great Need Of Vital Statistics.

In an address at the recent convention of the Southern Medical Association, Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, chief statistician of the United States census bureau, declared that the most urgent public need of the South is accurate vital statistics.

The South has been distinctly negligent in this important duty. The welfare of its business, its homes and its people should impel every State to establish a competent bureau for the registration of vital statistics. North Carolina and Kentucky have met their responsibility in this regard, but the majority of Southern States are without the protection so essential to their progress and safety in matters of public health.

The Government's Duty To Farming Interests.

The United States Government spent four hundred and fifty million dollars last year on the war, the navy and the pension department; it spent only twenty millions in the interest of agriculture. Such a policy is shortsighted and unjust, neglecting as it does the nation's greatest material asset and the ultimate source of business vigor and public welfare.

This idea was urged with peculiar forcefulness by Senator Hoke Smith in an address last week to the National Conservation Congress. The very backbone of our economic existence, he said, is farm production. Yet, the Government has given but a comparative pittance to the important task of quickening and increasing this field of production.

"Consider two of our crops alone," said the Senator. "The great staple of food both for men and animals, is corn. We produce a crop worth one billion, six hundred millions annually. The people of the world are to be clothed by the use of lint cotton. We produce a crop of this worth eight hundred and fifty million dollars annually. And yet the variations in the quantity produced per acre, even though the seeds are naturally of the same character, demonstrate the fact that when the highest degree of skill is applied, our corn crop could easily be doubled and bring to the country over a billion and a half of foreign gold annually.

The improvement of agricultural methods and the advancement of rural interests in general concern not the farmer alone but every sphere of enterprise. No problem is of greater moment to the rank and file of the American people. No subject has a broader or deeper ground of appeal to Congress. Some method must be applied that will bring the country's food supply up to the needs of a steadily and rapidly increasing population. The national government is the only agency strong enough to deal with this condition.

The government has done a vast deal in the way of agricultural research and experiment through its wonderfully rich fund of knowledge has been developed; but it has done comparatively little to place this knowledge directly at the disposal of the farmers themselves. The great need of the day is to translate this science into art, to make what is known count definitely in things done. To this end, Senator Hoke Smith urged the importance of cooperative demonstration work conducted by the State colleges of agriculture and experiment stations together with the national department of agriculture, furnishing trained demonstrators in every county of every State to put into practice, in cooperation with the farmer, all the scientific truths that have been or can be discovered.

"There is a widespread and insistent demand," says a recent writer, on economic problems, "for something to help the present farmer—the man beset by the plough. He has paid the larger share of the tens of millions of dollars that have been expended during the last fifty years in gathering agricultural knowledge. This work was undertaken for him primarily and through him for the benefit of everybody. He has the right to expect and demand that the results be delivered to him in a way and in a form that he can utilize. He cannot go to college for them; they must be taken to him." That is the aim of the agricultural extension bill now before the Senate. It provides a direct and businesslike method of utilizing the fund of agricultural knowledge. Its principles if put into effect in the United States, as they have already been in Belgium and Germany and other countries of Europe, will add incalculably to the productive power of our soil, will increase the volume and variety of our harvests, will lighten the burden which the present high cost of living imposes on American workers and homes, will quicken every channel of industry and trade and make this nation in every sense more prosperous and secure.

The married man who habitates is bonded. A word to the wife is sufficient—to start something. A rich young widow and her woods are soon parted. The more friends a woman has the more she has to talk about. Your umbrella will last longer if you don't roll it or lend it. The young man who marries a pretty girl regardless of her other qualities is headed the wrong way.

The Twilight of the White Gods

Last week there came into the New York auction room a number of marble statues by American sculptors who were famous fifty years ago. Hiram Powers' Greek Slave was the most noteworthy. With her one touched an almost prehistoric phase of American aesthetics. In her day she was a veritable declaration of independence of clothes and artists' rights. About her several years ago and won the battle for the sculptor's liberty in our free republic. Some sense the Greek Slave is still a celebrity, if an obsolete one, carried the bidding somewhat above $100,000, perhaps a half of what it would cost to copy her regularly in fair Carrera. If the Greek Slave, speaking recently, was on the bargain counter, her famous white contemporaries were nowhere at all. We decline to set down the pitiful prices that were paid for characteristic works of Thomas Crawford, W. W. Story and Harriet Hosmer. It is enough to say that in no case would the auction price have bought the rough block of marble.

When one recalls that these were the great names of fifty years ago, that Powers may have been said to have established American sculpture in the eyes of Europe, that Harriet Hosmer had the friendship and admiration of Emerson and Hawthorne, and that Story enjoyed a fairly consecrated celebrity through Hawthorne's eulogy of his Chloë in "The Marble Faun"—when one is driven to sincerely to reflect that all passes and naught is perdurable, fifty years ago no reputations could have seemed more sacred. They were vicissitudes. And now one hardly knows whether to blame a public so forgetful of the poverty of white marble, or to blame an artist who ventured to pay anything at all for an art so completely passed from fashion. Perhaps our grandchild-children, as they gaze at the "Greek Slave" in a bronze by Saint Gaudens or Rodin at something less than the value of the metal—New York Evening Post.

The Day of Dostoevsky

Fedor Dostoevsky's novels have been read in America than they deserve, partly because Tolstoy had, to most readers, seemed an all but complete interpreter of Russia, from whom Dostoevsky was not sufficiently different in appeal to be accepted as supplying details not in the pictures of the living writer. Recently, however, new translations have begun to appear; three volumes by him are already in the conventional edition of the Russian's library—"Crime and Punishment," "The House of the Dead," and the last issued "Letters from the Underworld" which includes also "The Landlady" and "The Idiot," as announced next issue in January.

It is in his work that one perceives the miracle which the younger men of his race have been unable to repeat. They were so intensely human, but they are not human. Through they depicted wretched, ugly poverty of white marble, and now one hardly knows whether to blame a public so forgetful of the poverty of white marble, or to blame an artist who ventured to pay anything at all for an art so completely passed from fashion.

White Magic

Now, full of waffles and of sweet content, I kindled coffee warms up his heart. His step toward the distant city bent. Strolls the magician of the winter art. With love of all mankind his bosom glows, And every friend he meets with smiles and cheer. And frantically beneath his ample nose, It increases his a good 100-cent cheer.

Now to a shivering beggar on the pave, He gives a quarter and a kindly smile, And every friend he meets with smiles and cheer. And presently you find your life worth while.

"That is a magic quarter—priceless gift! I got it once when, like yourself, The more you need was a friendlier life. A word of cheer and just a little pity."

"The giver told me, as I now tell you: 'Just pass it on, and you will never lack; The more you give it—yes, the more are true. The oftener it comes, redoubled, back!'"

And it was so! That magic coin may now, In your own pocket have its mystic seal, And make to compass, that you may not fail, Try one on the next hungry man you meet!

The First Frost

With the coming of the first frost, when a wind of rain has been seen, the true realization of what "home" means. With a sudden, an intermittent clatter of knives and dishes comes from the hidden regions of the kitchen, where the wife is making a tea tray with all the vigor of her eleven years in the hope of earning the "early nice present" which Brother Bob, writing from Chicago, has promised her at Christmas for leading another hand. Fedor pulls out an old, blackened winter, and neither Nora's growling at the rattle of a distant wagon nor the continued mutterings of the kettle which steams and sputters on the stove, can disturb his meditation.

THE POSTAL SERVICE III.—THE FUTURE PARCEL POST.

As was pointed out in yesterday's article, when Congress created the parcel post service it intended to create a parcel post service limited in its nature rather than in the extent of the territory covered, and to create a service making the system nationwide but of limited scope, vesting in the postmaster general the power to extend the character of the service as might see fit, with the approval of the interstate commerce commission. It gave him practically unlimited control over it, as to rates, routes and nature of the service rendered, subject only to the veto power of the interstate commerce commission—this making practically legislator and administrator all in one.

When Albert S. Burleson became postmaster general he already had the idea that he ought to make the most of the power vested in him with respect to the parcel post, and interpreted the law as intended that he should develop it just as far as was consistent with the public interest, and just as rapidly as the situation would permit. It did not seem to him to be his duty to limit its scope, but to have him done so for his sanction in the direction of extending the service.

With that view of the law, the postmaster general is proceeding to do so. Assuming that Congress wants him to limit his activities only by the needs of the people and the stipulation that the parcel post system be extended, he intends to take his way forward step by step in his efforts to make the service as extensive as the situation will permit. And in that he is certain to have the co-operation of the interstate commerce commission. That body would not object to his extending the service, if Congress intended to impose any other restrictions on the service, it would not object if it would have laid down the limit in terms of what would have reserved the right of providing these extensions.

It is likely that the interests of any other transportation agency will be considered in the matter. If it develops that a parcel post of a limited character can be worked in a way that will make it self-supporting, it would not be wise to put the express companies out of business. It is not likely to keep the interstate commerce commission from giving its assent to the proposition. In general, the conditions are ripe for such an extension of the service. As a matter of fact, some of the higher officials of that body themselves are of the opinion that it is coming in due time, and one of them unofficially expressed the opinion that it would probably be forthcoming in the near future. The interstate commerce commission would not object to the parcel post service, if it would have laid down the limit in terms of what would have reserved the right of providing these extensions.

And that there is such a world for them was his opinion. He felt that this new field would be the field of city delivery. Here in Washington, for example, we have an interminable duplication of delivery service. The mail is twice or three times delivered, the drycleaner, every class of business people have their own transportation facilities. Now, if you were to eliminate the mail, the express and the messenger, you would save a great deal of money. Individual concern could not afford to perform his own delivery service and yet even at these low rates the express companies would not be able to compete with the service already in Boston, where the local express delivery system has been developed.

It is a safe prediction that the postmaster general is not likely to give any consideration for the express companies stand in the way of extending the parcel post system. He feels that the two transportation agencies are not competitors, and that the issue is to be the survival of the fittest. If the express companies are to be eliminated, it will be for more than one reason. The parcel post service is being developed as an express monopoly. It will be able to do so more cheaply or more expeditiously than the parcel post. Postmaster General Burleson will be glad to have them do so, if it would not be to the detriment of the parcel post service in the line of handling the package delivery business of the people, but rather to the benefit of the parcel post service as an express monopoly, and as efficiently as that service can be rendered. He would not object to the issue of a government monopoly of the parcel post service, except as that monopoly can be saved by providing the people with a more efficient service than any other agency can. Postmaster General Burleson says: "We simply extend it just as far as they will support it. Just as far as their needs call for its extension. We are going to move step by step, never overreaching ourselves. We are going to do so to fall in with the service and extend it just as rapidly as conditions will allow."

"The next step we will take," he continued, "will be that of reforming the rates beyond the second zone just as we have for the first and second zones, increasing the rates to twenty pounds when we do so, so that the limit may be uniform for all the zones of the country. We are going to do so when that improvement has taken firm hold and provided itself in practice, we will take the next step. The increase in the rates will be decreasing the rate, if conditions warrant. And we will take this step by step, until the end to which we are aiming—a hundred-pound limit on the parcel post—has been reached. We are right at every step before we take it, but this desire for a hundred-pound limit is going to prevent our attaining the ultimate limit just as going to a condition warrant."

With this plan, as the ultimate object of the present postal administration, the urban consumer could feel that he is getting the best of it. When he can write his declaration of independence from the exactions of the series of middlemen who stand between him and the rural producer. Then he can have his big hamper with its several compartments for the accommodation of all the commodities of his market basket—here one for a ham, here another for some fresh meat, here one for several dozen eggs, and others for a pack of string beans, a dozen ears of corn, some peas, milk and preserves, and everything else necessary for a week's ration.

And what the housewife would have: she could allow the farmer 10 per cent more than market price for his commodities than the country producer could pay him, and yet she would reduce her grocery bill by at least 25 per cent. Here are a few illustrations from a page of experience of a Washington man who lives in an apartment and who is part owner of a farm 100 miles away: "When he was selling his apples at 15 cents a barrel on the farm his grocer was charging 60 cents a week for some so good; when the farm price of young hens was 15 cents, his grocer was charging 35; when the farm price of eggs was 30 cents, the city price was 55; a young boy butchered and cured at the farm cost him 10 cents, while the correct price was charging 15 cents a pound for sausage. 15 cents for chops, 15 cents for lard, and other things proportionately. It is a fact that quality simply were not on sale at all in the city markets."

The inevitable result of perfected parcel post will be that there will have to be a rearrangement of the affairs of our cities. It is a fact that the parcel post will undoubtedly bring down upon the cities a great deal of business that will be commensured by the farmer as a result, and with the opening up of the market for commodities that can be produced on a farm remote from the present markets, the farmer will be able to make a better living and many presiding middlemen will cease to produce. The farmer will be able to escape the home. Others will be content with the smaller profit than the farmer makes. The farmer will be able to escape the home. Others will be content with the smaller profit than the farmer makes. The farmer will be able to escape the home. Others will be content with the smaller profit than the farmer makes.

WOMEN WORKING TO COLLECT FUND FOR NEW HOSPITAL

Auxiliary of Wesley Memorial Must Raise $26,000 to Obtain $75,000 Gift From Asa G. Candler

With steady progress the Wesley Memorial auxiliary of the Wesley Memorial hospital is forging ahead toward the goal of a new building for that institution. The goal will be attained when they raise $26,000 for Asa G. Candler's gift. To complete the agreement with the association that was the first reason that flared before the public in the gift of $75,000—$50,000 of which the total $100,000—will be used in constructing the new building.

Two thousand dollars has been collected in subscriptions since the movement was undertaken by the Wesley Memorial auxiliary. They have until November 1, 1913, to get a year's collection. The goal will be attained when they raise $26,000 for Asa G. Candler's gift. To complete the agreement with the association that was the first reason that flared before the public in the gift of $75,000—$50,000 of which the total $100,000—will be used in constructing the new building.

Another instance is that of a physician in Atlanta who has offered to give one of twenty-five to contribute $1,000 toward the building. The present building at the corner of North street and Adams street is a wretched structure, but has been renovated in order that it may be used for the purpose of an infirmary. The great need is for more room and for a building adapted exactly to the use of a hospital. Though the hospital is under a Methodist board of trustees, it is not an inter-denominational institution and no aid is recognized there among other denominations. Nor is the hospital limited to local territory. Five and six hundred charity patients there, for instance, come from out of town.

A report on the hospital from the day of the opening, August 1, 1906, to the day of the closing, August 1, 1912, showed that in those seven years there had been treated 10,000 patients, of whom more than half were charity patients. The value of charity services rendered was $10,510.40 during that period. The Christian hospital for the same period amounted to $12,658.86, or 104.4 per cent more than that of the Wesley Memorial hospital. A comparison of these figures shows the amount the Wesley Memorial hospital has contributed to the city.

2,000 Delegates Expected to Attend National Rivers and Harbors Congress

Sen. W. L. Dill, President Woodrow Wilson, and other delegates at the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

There are two theories of education. One of them is that religious education is one department of education at large and more or less supplementary to secular education. The other theory is that there is no such thing as religious education, but that the religious side of it is not a separate system, but a part of a man's capacity to be able to find his way in the world. If an educational system makes no attempt to examine the religious side of it, it is not a religious system. We have our young teachers in the colleges who are constantly asserting their convictions in respect of matters to which they have not given sufficient thought. It is a matter of fact that the religious side of education is not a separate system, but a part of a man's capacity to be able to find his way in the world.

THE CONSPICUOUS FAILURE OF SECULARIZED EDUCATION

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

SOME men are beginning to see that secularized education is a failure. A little while ago Hon. Bird S. Coler published a book in which well attested facts and irrefragable arguments, he showed that education separated from religion had worked vast evils in New York State and throughout the United States. The overthrow of Salzer by Tammany and of Tammany by Salzer shows that all New York's immense appropriations to schools have availed little for the promotion of political purity in that commonwealth. The half-educated Dutch settlers of New York in Colonial times showed more virtue than the Goddamners of the present day with all their claims to intelligence and integrity.

President Wilson and Many Governors and Mayors on List of Speakers at Meeting to Be Held in Washington December 3-5

So many and so important are the problems relating to rivers and harbors, and so persistently is their improvement being urged by the commercial interests of the country, that the forthcoming convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which meets in Washington, December 3, 4 and 5, is exciting the liveliest possible interest throughout the nation.

Senator Joseph E. Brandell, of Louisiana, president of the congress and president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, will make his first public appearance at the opening session of the congress. THE MOVIES AND THE TRUTH

Editor The Journal: The moving picture, which ought to instruct as well as amuse, seldom ever represents the truth, when they claim to illustrate the war between the states. The only one of an historical nature possessing real merit, that I remember to have seen, was Pickett's charge at Gettysburg.

One day I went in to see a picture entitled "The Battle, 1861." The picture was the work of a southern artist, and the southerners were represented as invaders, as making the attack and as being repulsed. It could not represent any battle that occurred in 1861.

The makers of the moving picture take special pleasure in making some southern youth take sides against his state and always representing him as the superior to other southern boys, who showed up as a rough customer in comparison with his rival.

It would be so refreshing to see the real truth, the reality of the war between the states, women, youths and maidens in behalf of the Union, in which a southern youth or man went with his master to the field and served no loyalty to the Union.

Only a few days ago I saw no loyalty to the Union. Only a few days ago I saw no loyalty to the Union. Only a few days ago I saw no loyalty to the Union.

Kaiser Owms Restaurant

BECKY—The fact that the Kaiser has recently become the proprietor of a restaurant at Potsdam will not surprise us as Germans, who are well versed in their history, possess a remarkable sense of business. He already makes a profit out of his pottery works at Coblenz, and he is already making a profit out of his glass works at Mainz. In Germany, and last year added to his list of enterprises the Kaiser's new factory in Germany. In German Southwest Africa he is having these farms stocked with cattle.

WEIGHING ORDINANCE IS DISCUSSED BY M'GINNIS

No Demand on Part of Farmers for Cartersville Ordinance, He Declares

Cartersville, Nov. 22.—The ordinance which the Journal appears as an editorial "Cartersville Weighing Ordinance is Attacked." The exact title of the case is that of M. McGinnis and C. M. Goding vs. City of Cartersville.

The city of Cartersville is the plaintiff in the case of M. McGinnis and C. M. Goding vs. City of Cartersville.

It was further shown that the city had distributed circulars among the farmers, urging them to sign the ordinance.

Under the order of Judge Pitts, as the case now stands, farmers are permitted to weigh at the city scales or elsewhere as they choose.

In commenting on the principle involved in this case, our supreme court, in speaking through Justice Blanton in 74 Ga. Reports, says: "From the first our people were always anxious to have legislation looking to interference with private affairs of men, and it has only been in our modern times that they have been since the war, that such legislation has been enacted by the general assembly of this state."

HELP US HELP ORPHANS, URGES HAWKINS, OF HOME

Head of Hapeville Baptist Institution Shows What Good Work Is Being Done

An urgent plea for the Baptist orphans home at Hapeville, near Atlanta, has been circulated by R. D. Hawkins, general manager of the home, who styles it "Our final appeal for 1913."

Mr. Hawkins makes the point that though the home is under Baptist control, orphans of all denominations and of no denomination are provided for.

Two hundred and fifty children on the rolls is the year's average for the home, he says. Their maintenance costs at the rate of $12 per month each, or $14 a year. That makes a total of $3,500 an annum.

BISHOP NELSON CORRECTS DISTORTION OF REPORTS

Rome Episcopal Conference Did Not Go Into Details of Dress or Amusements

Editor The Journal: You will probably admit that I seldom worry your readers with my troubles.

The conference in Rome did not go into intimate detail of abuses in connection with the dress of the young people.

I do not doubt that after reading my exact language reported from a trustworthy source to one of the papers of the public which will appreciate that our action was taken along sane and reasonable lines.

The address emphasized the unchanging need of men for Christ, the importance of religious education, the demands of social service and personal conduct, the increasing importance of world-wide missions and other subjects.

It is in the glad paths of life no less than in the sad, and reverence and devotion of our religion, which we are constrained to say, the passions of the day above most regard. Even good taste and what used to be called common decency seem to make little appeal to many purveyors of popular entertainments and in the social life of young people.

But, let us beware lest we forget that the body is, among other things, a measure and index, as well as an instrument for the support and development of moral life and character.

President D. Woodward of the Woodward Lumber Company, writes: "We have drawn many by you that have been on the streets hauling lumber continuously for the last twenty-five years. We think this is a record that cannot be equaled by any other manufacturer. The title of them has been intended so long, we have forgotten who we made the last purchase." And these same wagons are still hauling lumber on the streets of Atlanta.

MAKING MADE-TO-ORDER SHOES TO BE REVIVED

A movement is on to revive the demand for made-to-order shoes. Fifteen years ago so many made-to-order shoes were made that the shoe business was almost entirely a business of making shoes to order. The National Leather and Shoe Distributors' association in New York, in its annual report, says that the shoe business is now a business of making shoes to order. It is a business of making shoes to order. It is a business of making shoes to order.

HOW BUSINESS AND POLITICS ARE RELATED

C. W. McClure Discussed This Subject at Meeting of National Ten-Cent Merchants
At the recent meeting of the National Association of Five and Ten-Cent Merchants, C. W. McClure, president of the McClure Ten-Cent company of Atlanta, among other things discussed interestingly the relations of business and politics. He remarks on this subject follows:
"win the mercantile business today it is necessary to be broad and look at business affairs from all angles. Some people think that a business man should not take any interest in politics. Of course, on this point I am not in a position to argue. What I do know though is this, however, that politics and business are being closely interwoven today; that it is almost impossible to succeed on a large scale without association in politics. Those of you who have kept up with the tariff situation so far no doubt know that this is closely allied to our business dealings. The tariff has just gone into effect since our last meeting, and which will come up for an extension shortly, also affects our business relations more so than any other factor. It is a very large and important part in our business of business. It will extend to the cities' water works, electric companies, etc., all of which will be taken over and operated by the state.

AT MILLION-DOLLAR PACE, RED SEAL RECORD FRIDAY

The record sheets of the daily production of the Red Seal Shoe factory of Atlanta, showed their highest figures yet on Friday, Nov. 21. For that day, the output reached a figure that was kept up through a week would total up to an even one million dollars worth of shoes. For that reason it marks an important milestone in the progress of Atlanta-made shoes.

TRAVELERS REJOICE OVER MILEAGE DECISION

The decision, coming at just one week's notice, is a great victory for the travelers," said C. J. Hollingsworth, who was one of the leaders in the mileage fight on behalf of the Georgia Travelers. "I think that the ruling was a reasonable adjustment of the mileage book situation and since its supreme court has affirmed the commission's ruling I believe the roads will cheerfully abide by it."
"I am highly delighted over the decision," said J. H. Andrews, secretary of the Georgia division of the U. C. T. "The decision of course could not give us all we wanted. For the rest we will have to look to congress. But it was a great victory and I am thoroughly rejoiced."

COMMITTEES CONFER ON TRAVELERS' ROOM

Travelers' committees representing the two United Commercial Travelers' Protective associations, and the City Business association, met yesterday at 1 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms with the traveling merchants' committee, of which W. S. Lounsbury is chairman, and worked out the details of plan for having a travelers' room in the new chamber of commerce building which will be opened January 1.

SUPPLY OF NUTS LOW; HIGHER PRICES PREVAIL

Dealers Would Do Well to Place Orders for Season's Supply Early
"The supply of nuts and raisins this year is low and the price is consequently high," said H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, "dealers, therefore, would do well to place their orders early for their season's supply, else they are likely to find themselves disappointed."
"Especially does the rise in price affect California walnuts, Brazil nuts, almonds and raisins. Walnuts are 2 to 5 cents higher than last season. Brazil nuts 4 to 5 cents higher; almonds, 2 to 3 cents higher; raisins, 30 to 40 cents a box more."

Atlanta Jobbers Say Stock Numbers and Full Description Should Be Given
Atlanta wholesalers have a slight complaint they would like to register against the way "worders" are sent them by some of their customers.
"Perhaps it would be better to introduce the matter by saying it is a suggestion to the merchants that will facilitate business for both them and the jobbers. Briefly the jobbers want their customers to be careful always to give stock number and full description when ordering a second lot of anything. Frequent orders come in merely specifying the article wanted as "like those I had before."

BROWNLEE WRITES CRITIQUE ON CAREER OF SALESMAN RIVIERE

Tells of the Ways and By-ways of the Brave Seaman and Professor of Dietetics

By G. W. BROWNEE, (City Salesman of McCord-Stewart Co.)

Mr. Riviere, of city sales force of the McCord-Stewart company, is a familiar name to Pring Lane fame. Incidentally, there is a name. For instance, that little "R" is merely an abbreviation for "Riviere Always Laughing" and of course Riviere stands for "The Brave Seaman."

Now, if you have any doubts about Riviere being true to his name, you should see him sailing around on Commercial Lake in his merchantman, "The Pink Lady," trying the colors of the Queen and when he rings the Farm Bell for the milk can at Fort McCook this ship is usually found to be heavily laden.

He's not at all sensitive about his age, either, for to admit without hesitation that he is brother of Paul Riviere of this brave seaman, for if you are not the brother, he'll run the gamut on you. He's not a pirate, but his early trading on the college football has taught him to get what he goes after, and he usually doesn't fool around.

He is a distinguished authority on dietetics. He can tell you how many ounces of food you should eat to replenish your strength, accurately describe the materia medica properties of raw foods, or satisfactorily explain the nutrimental qualities of his wares, and their beneficial effects on your diaphragm in general. Therein, perhaps.

He is also known for his ability to get into a game as well as setting the orders in large numbers.

P. H. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, is planning to visit his old home in the establishment of a 5 and 10 cent store there by J. H. Kinchberg who came south from Nebraska to write the 5 and 10 cent store.

P. H. Jeter, who was recently transferred from north Georgia to the Georgia road territory, is beginning to feel at home in his new field and is reported to like it immensely.

R. E. Sloan, Jr., of the M. C. Kiser company, spent last week in part of his Georgia territory after an absence of several weeks working Florida.

E. E. Harrison, of the B. P. Richards company sales force, who underwent an operation for appendicitis recently, is reported to be recovering at a good pace, but knows to his intimates as yet for the last two months but he hopes to be able to go to his merchant friends soon.

J. A. Woodruff has just finished an order good week's sales in his area line-dry goods. He kept his territory lively on the whole and is shipping it can handle the swatches as well.

The Atlanta friends will not see much of Frank O'Neil, who popularly is known as "the man who makes his headquarters at Albany and working in south Georgia for the Silver & Co.

J. M. McKittrick flew into the Douglas-Little-Rodrigue company Friday with a bunch of orders that kept the shipping department busy yesterday.

Needless to say, Mr. Cook is placing bounteous orders where his children may be supplied.

H. E. Wilson, sales representative of the American Ammonia company, makes his White Team appearance, was working the trade last week for the H. L. Singer company. His sales resulted in orders for approximately a carload of his product. Harry Brown, of this company, says that if all this ammonia were made in Atlanta it would be a big volume of orders.

Mr. McWhorter, sales representative of the Schulz's pure grades, was with a corps of workers, was visiting the Atlanta office last week. He is the sales force of the H. L. Singer company. He and his partners pulled up a big volume of orders.

ENGRAVING OF JEWELRY NEEDS MORE VARIETY

Mfg. Jewelers Think Retailers Should Help Toward Wider Selection

A plea for more interest in artistic engraving of other patterns than the plain script is made to the retail jewelers by the Vollmer Manufacturing company, manufacturing jewelers, who receive orders for engraving work from the retail stores throughout the south.

The plain script, though always in good taste, is often not what the customer would prefer if he were shown some of the other types of monograms. It is claimed, "There are many designs from which to select and it is believed the retailers would please their customers by giving them as wide a range of selection as possible."

Many persons who give much care to selecting some bit of jewelry will order the engraving for it without thought of the style, it not occurring to them that there are many other styles than the ordinary script.

The Vollmer company makes this suggestion to the retailers as one that should wear to the mutual good of all concerned—themselves, the retailers and the public.

ASPARAGUS TRADE DOUBLES EVERY YEAR

The growth of the canned fruit and vegetable trade is well illustrated by the increased consumption of canned asparagus, said Donald McKim, of the H. L. Singer company, who has made a special study of this line of his company's goods.

"It was only a few years ago that little asparagus was sold in Atlanta. The demand has grown, however, until now the Atlanta market consumes from eight to ten cars. Our firm itself handles two cars a season."

"When canned asparagus was put on the market it was very high, worth about $2 a case. Now it sells for $4.50 to $5 a case. It was once the rich man's luxury, but improved canning processes and improved methods of raising the vegetable have placed it in the reach of every man's table. Whole farms in California are devoted exclusively to its culture."

"From our sales records it is noted that the demand for canned asparagus is doubling every year, and I am confident this is the experience of other firms."

The Cost of Your Thanksgiving Dinner

YOUR Thanksgiving dinner should cost less this year than a year ago. Fresh vegetables are cheap, turkey is less in price. You should dine with the comforting thought that your Thanksgiving tribute to the rooster and the butcher has declined a few cents within twelve months.

A turkey of ten pounds weight sells at from $2.50 to $3.00. Cranberries are 12 1/2 to 15 cents a quart. Celery is 25 cents for three bunches. A whole pumpkin, enough of it along with Little Tim and his mates to make two or four pies, brings 25 cents. Plum pudding, if you care to buy it by the can, is 50 cents for a pound. But the pudding has its place in a dinner sufficient for six. Oysters are 20 cents a quart. Bacon city of St. Louis has slung all the way to 10 cents a pound. Sweet potatoes are 25 cents a peck. Irish potatoes are 40 cents a peck. Eggs are 45 cents a dozen. Spinach is 40 cents a peck. The best American dinner will cost three times as much as a year ago. There this year as it did, twenty years ago. There you have one retailer's estimate of prices for the accepted Thanksgiving fare. Perhaps, another grocer might find fault with the price of this or that item, but what advancement of prices? Of course, you mortals ever agreed on figures? You must pay more this year for cheaper. Celery there has doubled in price and cranberries have quadrupled. But a grocer who is in the business says that both, as they are sold in Atlanta, have declined in price.

The following comparison of prices of a Thanksgiving dinner for four people was printed in St. Louis, and averages much discussion.

Turkey (10 pounds)	$2.50	$1.20	$0.70

ATLANTA AND ST. LOUIS. There, for instance, they find that vegetables as well as meat have been equally unforgiving to the cause costlier in the West twenty years, but here they have grown cheaper. Celery there has doubled in price and cranberries have quadrupled. But a grocer who is in the business says that both, as they are sold in Atlanta, have declined in price.

Commenting upon this table, the St. Louis Republic says: "Vegetables are being sold at here as they once did. They don't spend $2.50 or $3 just for one part of their Thanksgiving dinner. Of course, people live better here than they did ten years ago. But they are not so extravagant in buying turkey. It may be true in St. Louis that a Thanksgiving dinner costs three times as much now as it did twenty years ago, but that estimate is not true of Atlanta. Of course, meat prices here has increased greatly in price, and their increase in price has about doubled. But vegetables are even cheaper, and we now cost this year's Thanksgiving dinner have such a variety of foodstuffs from which to choose that, with a once earned $100 a month and wise selection, your Thanksgiving prices, and will help toward less-dinner today need not cost much more than it did years ago." But one grocer here said last week: "People are not eating turkey as they once did. They don't spend $2.50 or $3 just for one part of their Thanksgiving dinner. Of course, people live better here than they did ten years ago. But they are not so extravagant in buying turkey. It may be true in St. Louis that a Thanksgiving dinner costs three times as much now as it did twenty years ago, but that estimate is not true of Atlanta. Of course, meat prices here has increased greatly in price, and their increase in price has about doubled. But vegetables are even cheaper, and we now cost this year's Thanksgiving dinner have such a variety of foodstuffs from which to choose that, with a once earned $100 a month and wise selection, your Thanksgiving prices, and will help toward lessing the cost of Atlanta's Thanksgiving day cheer. If you wish to make a vegetarian of yourself upon Thanksgiving day, you may dine at little less expense than you might have twenty years ago. And, even with a varied menu, dinner may be had at actually less cost than last year.

Following are menus suggested by the Southern Woman's Magazine for Thanksgiving:

- Oysters on Half Shell
- Celery
- Cassoume
- Lobster Cutlets
- Roast Turkey
- Chestnut Dressing
- Cranberry Jelly
- Green Peas
- Candied Sweet Potatoes
- Sweet Bread and Mushroom Timbale
- Fruit Punch
- Cucumber and Tomato Aspic on Lettuce
- French Dressing
- Pumpkin Pie
- Nesselrode Pudding
- Small Cakes
- Nuts
- Bonbons
- Raisins
- Crackers
- Cheese
- Coffee

It seems that Thanksgiving would be incomplete without these last we, but the truth is they no longer are necessary to the day. Grocers ten years ago, sold plum puddings in the cans to four times the number they do now, and turkey was as essential as dinner itself.

This is not saying that the day's observance no longer takes account of turkey baked brown. But it does point a tendency upon the world's part to declare itself independent of the Thanksgiving day deposit.

As for plum pudding, you now don't with it chiefly in old-fashioned

Bread Rich and Celery
- Roast Capon
- Oyster Stuffing
- Plum Jelly
- Boiled Rice
- Lima Beans
- Stuffed Peas on Lettuce
- Creamed Mayonnaise
- Pumpkin Pie
- Vanilla Ice Cream
- Stuffed Dates, Mints and Coffee

THE RAG WALTZ A "Rest-Up" Dance.

"The Idea of Putting Steps That You Do to Ragtime and in a One-step to Waltz Time Sounds Quite Impossible, but You Will Be Surprised at How Practically and at the Same Time Gracefully It Can Be Done." by Elsie Janis.

POSITION NUMBER ONE OF THE FIRST VARIATION. SWAY THE BODY FIRST TO THE RIGHT AND THEN TO THE LEFT WITHOUT TAKING A STEP.

into the Boston; in fact, between all the variations go back to the Boston.

Live Old Fashioned Minuet.

I learned a new one the other night, and I shall now try to wish it on you. Walk one, two, three, man starting with left, girl with right, on count three the man holding the girl's left hand in his right, as if they were going to do a minuet. On three the man draws his legs together and bows in a stiff military way, still holding the girl's hand. This bow is slight and is done from the waist. The girl does the old fashioned curtsy, placing her left foot well over behind the right and bending the right knee slightly, then change hands, the man taking the girl's right in his left, as if to help her arise from her curtsy. Some girls will really need help, I'm thinking. Then right back the other way, man right, left, right, and bow; girl left, right, left, and bow. Have you got that? Well, that is not all. After this low his arm goes around her waist (just for a change) and they both do a step derived from the old fashioned curtsy that she has done, to a count of one, two. Man steps to the side on right and throws his left leg behind the right, bending the right knee as he does so, and the girl steps to the side on her left and throws her right behind it, bending left knee.

This step is done twice each way and then again into the dear old Boston or the waltz rag, which is done just like the first I gave in this article; just a slow walk, the same movement as we use in the one-step, but done to waltz time, and counted one, two, one, two—just a plain common or garden walk to waltz time. O, very useful indeed!

Couple Must Be Well Matched.

There is another rather pretty step that is not quite so useful, as it requires a lot of knee action. The partners Boston, holding hands instead of with the arm about the waist. Arms held straight out at the side, and if the girl's arms are too short to reach the partner's hands—but there, they must not be. People, to do these fancy steps, should be well matched; otherwise they look ridiculous. What is funnier than a tall man with a little whinny of a girl tucked under his arm, dashing about a ballroom? Nothing, unless it is a tall woman with a little man trying to get his arm high enough to guide his lady far through a mass of one-steppers.

The partners Boston until they are ready to do this step. Then the man takes his arm from around the girl's waist and, retaining her other hand, takes her left in his right, and then, facing each other, they pivot four times; then he drops her right from his left and they fall back side by side. Restoring as the while and still with her left hand in his right. Now they make a slight pause to get ready for the next step, and off they go. Man steps forward on right and girl on left. Walk one, two, three, kicking their feet as they walk and pointing the toe while kicking, and counting four they slide forward, nearly touching their knees to the floor. His left and her right, with their other legs out behind them—in the regular old fashioned dips we used to do. Resume erect position, facing each other, and do the same step the other way, man holding girl's right hand in his left, and walk just the same, one, two, three, and dip; the resume the hand holding position and Boston again. This step is rather showy, but I feel that people like these seem theatrical steps, and if they do I say let them have them. They are surely much easier to do than the more quiet and at the same time more intricate steps. That will be about all for today. If you could see me doing these steps, each one as I write about it, it would amuse you. I grab any one that happens to be about at the time and makes them dance with me, so I can write down the correct hands and feet to use. In fact, my life is becoming one long nightmare of right and left feet, to say nothing of hands; but if I accomplish anything I don't mind. Next Sunday we will try some one-step variations, and, believe me, there are some and these some more to try.

THEN WE PUT IN A WHIRL JUST TO MAKE IT MORE DIFFICULT, COUNTING ONE TWO ONE TWO THREE FOUR AND ON FOUR COMES THE WHIRL.

THIS IS THE POSITION FOR THE STEP-OVER - SAL' STEP SHOWING THE TURNING OF THE HEADS WITH THE BODY FIRST ONE-WAY AND THEN THE OTHER.

MISS ELSIE JANIS

THIS dance opens up a new field for inspection. The idea of putting steps that you do to ragtime and in a one-step to waltz time sounds quite impossible, but you will be surprised at how practically and at the same time gracefully it can be done. I will venture to say there is hardly a step that, if you take time to count it out, cannot be done to waltz time some way. The foundation of the rag waltz is this: The music is naturally playing one, two, three in waltz time, and to rag it you must count either a long one, two, while the music counts one, two, three, one, two, three, or you must count one, two, rather short, and then quickly one, two, three, four, as you do in the hesitation waltz.

Lots of people do not like to waltz now that they have learned the more snappy dances and I must admit that until I learned the hesitation waltz I was one of the crowd who groan audibly when the orchestra, from sheer fatigue, changes from one-step to a waltz—now the rag waltz. All those people who did not want to step dancing and at the same time did not want to waltz, need to stand about still trying to one-step to the waltz, and finally found it could be done. Hope revived and here is the first one to try.

On Small Floor Space.

I set no dread of saying "same position," but anyway grab your lady where the waist line used to be and hold her in the same clutch you have always used, then start like this: Keep both feet on the ground and just sway your body first to the right and then to the left without taking a step, counting one, two, and then running four little steps—when I say run I don't mean fallow, but just a little center—counting one, two, three, four, and then again stand still and sway the body first right and then left and then center one, two, three, four. You can make good time around room like this if you want to, but you don't, so need only cover about two feet (of the floor, not your partner's feet).

Now, having mastered that terpsichorean enterprise, we put a whirl in just to make it more difficult; I don't suppose I need to say that the lady starts with her left foot and sways to her left. Here we go: One, two, right, left, one, two, three, four, right, left, right, left—and here we have it.

When the man gets that left foot on the floor he turns on it directly about, so that now he is ready to go backwards. The girl's course comes down on her right and does the same thing, swivels about until she is in front of the man and ready to go ahead, so we start from the beginning we have one, two, one, two, three, four, and on four we turn a complete half moon circle. The couple must make a slight effort or they will not get all the way around, and while if they don't they can keep right on, we might just as well get it right. So now we have made the turn and without breathing we start off again—to the right this time—the man going backwards, the same step exactly: one, two, one, two, three, four, and the turn again. On these turns the limbs must be thrown well out at the side to make the turn not only more graceful but easier.

Goes with a Rag Song.

This step is very practical; in fact, one might almost dream through it—of course, I don't advise it, as sleeping in the ballroom is to be a 1915 fashion, and we don't want to be too much ahead of the times.

That is the step you have heard called the lame duck. Why not the sick pleasure? That's just as much to the point. Then we have a step known as "Step over, Sal" (expressive if not grand). This step you have seen everybody who ever sings a rag song do. They give a little jump to one side with one foot, pull their other foot over to it, and at the same time throw their heads from side to side. Sometimes they do it with their heads alone—keep time to the music, I mean—by pulling their heads from side to side and sometimes two jerks of the head each way.

It is a very amusing little bit of business and can always be depended upon to make a song "go over," as we say in our set. In this way it has been introduced into the ballroom. I just had a good chuckle all to myself over the thought of how little there is left that has not been introduced into the ballroom in the last two years. However:

We will now proceed to step over Sal, or Sally, when you know her better. Same step, man gives a little jump on left foot, lifting right foot if ground and pivoting it about a foot over to the right side (girl, of course, the same thing, starting with her right and placing her left foot over to her left side), then drag the left over to it, very much like the first step in the hesitation waltz that I described Sunday before last, only instead of going down the room you just go from side to side.

Drag Head and Foot.

This foolish step is much more effective if the dancers turn their heads with each step. For instance, when stepping over, Sal (or, if you must be dignified, Sarah), look toward the foot you jump on and as you drag the foot over drag the head the same way. This step might well be called the drag-out, I think, but it is quite amusing in its way.

After this we have a step derived from the old aeroplane glide. The man takes three backward, starting on his right foot, the girl, as usual, going backward (poor, long suffering females!). On the third step he kicks out in front of him and the girl kicks out back, which amounts to right, left, right, and kick out with the left for the man, and left, right, left, kicking out with the right for the girl. Then repeat the step, going the other way, the man starting back with the foot he has kicked out with, which is the left, and the girl starting forward on her kicking foot, which is the right, and this reverse amounts to left, right, left, and kick right foot out behind for the man; right, left, right, and kick out in front with the left for the girl.

You see they go backward and forward, and it's a very fair step, because they both get a chance to "kick out" with both feet, showing no favoritism. From this also we go

STEP WHERE THE DANCERS STAND SIDE BY SIDE. STEP FORWARD ONE TWO THREE AND ON FOUR SLIDE FORWARD WITH THEIR KNEES NEARLY TOUCHING THE GROUND.

ANOTHER PRETTY STEP WHERE THE PARTNERS BOSTON HOLDING HANDS INSTEAD OF WITH THE ARM ABOUT THE WAIST.

A STEP DERIVED FROM THE OLD AEROPLANE GLIDE; MAN ONE TWO THREE AND KICK OUT IN FRONT; GIRL ONE TWO THREE AND KICK OUT BEHIND.

THEM COME BACK THE SAME WAY GIRL THIS TIME KICKING FOOT OUT IN FRONT AND MAN KICKING OUT BEHIND.

MOTORING IS THE SPORT OF TODAY LIKE RIDING TO HOUNDS OF OLD

Both gasoline cars and electrics are driven by Atlanta women. They are among the most skillful and the most daring drivers in the city. Both horseback riding and motoring are among the sports afield in which Atlanta take part. Mrs. T. E. Weatherholt, is shown in the accompanying pictures, at the door of her electric, Miss Wonona Sullivan is opposite her, at the wheel of a gasoline car, Miss Mary Rice is the third figure, photographed as she was going for a spin over Atlanta's 'automobile paths.'

Romance That Began Here In the Old Wartime Days

Portrait of Phoebe Johnson, Born Here in 1845, Leads to the Marriage of Her Grandson, and to a Story Like That of the "Brushwood Boy"

HISTORY OF THE MINIATURE. Phoebe Johnson, the first "Lady of the Miniature," born in Atlanta in 1845. Had her miniature painted by Clement Dumont in 1860. Gave miniature to Bertha Harmon and left Atlanta when it was taken by Sherman in 1861. Married to Philip Stuart in Tennessee in 1866. Bertha Harmon, who has received the miniature, marries Alstead Rogers in 1865. Grandson in 1898. Frank John Rogers falls in love with the miniature and marries Phoebe Johnson Evans, the second "Lady of the Miniature," in 1913.

July, just two months before this city was taken by Sherman. Forty-nine years later it was the cause of a wedding. In 1864 Phoebe Johnson, of Atlanta, was nineteen years old. Pretty, popular, full of life, with a disposition that even war could not make sad, she viewed the events of the period with great calm. Clement Dumont was one of the soldiers stationed here. He had studied art abroad and was far more interested in the painting of miniatures than in war. He met Miss Phoebe at a factory where she made shirts for the soldiers being made. They smiled. It was only a step for the soldier before being made. They smiled. It was only a step for the soldier before being made. They smiled. It was only a step for the soldier before being made.

"Lady of the Miniature," as he leapt, a southern boy, was spending called her, was old and wrinkled half an hour in his room, together and no longer the smiling girl, pie with a group of other boys. The tured in the miniature. But Frank visiting boy saw the miniature, refused to believe. He talked at "That's a splendid likeness of her." Phoebe as if she were a real girl, he said, and smiled. "I don't know. As he grew older other women you knew any southern girl." slowly he compared them to the "Yes, that is Phoebe," but he was face in the miniature. Some girls too started to continue. The vis were too frivolous, and he knew the for misunderstood, entered into "Lady of the miniature" could be conversation with another boy, and serious at times. Other girls were left soon afterward. But from then to solemn, and he knew the "Lady on, although he would not inquire, up a correspondence in those days. The Harmon moved west, too, but he is the real hero of this story. His name was Frank John Rogers, and he was not careless with his possessions. He tied a tiny ribbon to the miniature and placed it on his dresser. The most favored of his boy friends were allowed to look at it. "That lady is the one I'm going to marry when I'm a growing man," he told them. OTHER WOMEN FAILED TO AT- tain. Mrs. Bertha Rogers, who had Grandmother Rogers tried to im- press upon Frank that the original been working hard and needed recreation, so he accepted it. He arrived late. Masks had already been removed. He knew only his host and several other men. Music was playing softly. A dance had just been finished. Girls and men with gray collared waists were passing to and fro. Suddenly his heart almost stopped beating. A girl was coming toward him. She held her head high, the girl who was approaching, she looked at him with a half smile. Her hair waved softly about her face. Her quaint "before the war" dress showed her slender neck and shoulders. In her hair was a single rose. It was his miniature come to life! Frank Rogers nearly stopped breathing. He saw now that he believed that his senses had left him. He stepped forward and held out his hands. "Phoebe! You!" he said. The girl in the quaint costume looked at him closer and smiled, again. "Yes," she said, quite calmly and quite as if she were a real person. "Yes, I'm Phoebe, but—but who are you?" And just then, before he had finished stammering explanation which explained nothing, one of the only men in New Orleans approached. "Hello, Rogers," he said. "I didn't know you knew my cousin, Miss Evans. Phoebe, this is the man from the west I've been telling you about." ROMANCE SEEMED EXPECTED THING. Frank Rogers doesn't know how he lived through the events. Even now, he says, the events following the introduction are a blank to him. But he received an invitation to call at the home of Miss Evans. And, of course, he accepted. He told the story of the miniature. Miss Evans added her story to it. Here it is briefly: "My grandmother was named Phoebe Johnson. She moved to Tennessee in 1864, I believe, and was married two years later. Her husband was Philip Stuart. My mother was born in 1867 and married dad in 1890. I was born in 1892, two years later. Grandmother died the year I was born, so I was named Phoebe in memory of her. Phoebe Johnson Evans is my full name."

The rest of the romance you can guess. It consisted of an ardent courtship, followed by a pretty home wedding. The honeymoon so far has consisted of a business trip on the part of the groom, but he has been accompanied all of the way by his bride, who says it is nicer than any other honeymoon could possibly be. Frank Rogers, vowing at his real "Lady of the Miniature," agrees with her. He says, though, that after this year there will be a permanent home and a bungalow instead of a lot of traveling, but the real miniature, a bit faded, but still perfect in his eyes, will rank next to the real "Lady of the Miniature," and, placed against a background of velvet, will be placed in the new home, where all may see it and hear its story.

Sorting the Twins - PANIC—Two brothers in a Panfa regiment are so alike it is impossible to distinguish between them. The other one of the pair was confined to barracks, but by changing his cap with his brother's and by using the uniform of the brother the defaulter was able to pass the guard with impunity wherever he wished to get out. The colonel of the regiment issued the following order: "I will wear his hair as long as the regulations, construed with the utmost leniency, will allow, and will shave his head and mustache to grow full and blonde (odd number) will allow his hair to grow regularly cut as closely as possible." Two Rivals for Throne - BELLIN—Of the twenty-four candidates for the throne of Albania only two need be considered seriously. The Kaiser's nominee is the Prince of Wild, and he also has the support of Austria, though Italy does not approve the selection. The Prince of Wild's formidable rival is the Duc de Montenegro, who is backed by the triple entente.

ATLANTA ARTISTS HOMESICK FOR PARIS

to paint again. I thought that if anything would interest Atlantians it would be some scenes in and around the city. And many unexpected visitors did go to see my exhibit. That was when I found out about all these young girls who have homes of one day accomplishing something in art. They came to see my pictures and told me about their studios."

Miss Haina, who is sharing Miss Woolley's studio, gives Miss Woolley credit for reintroducing some of the young workers. "Everybody was disheartened with the situation here," said Miss Haina, "when Miss Woolley began to have her classes. But she got us started again, and now everybody is working."

Miss Haina's "come-out-work" as she calls it, is really very clever and artistic, despite her business-like adjective. She designs interiors of homes and sets up sketches for interior decorators. She paints these in water colors, and in all the sketches the coloring is exquisite. She also models and does craftsman's work. She is from Cincinnati, but has been living in Atlanta for about six years.

Like Miss Woolley, she studied in Chicago and other schools, and she too, feels the loss of the free and easy camaraderie and inspiring atmosphere.

BUILDING FOR ARTISTS.
"We do wish there were in Atlanta some central buildings, where the artists could rent studios at a reasonable rate, and where they could hold their exhibitions," said both girls.

Miss Woolley is well known in Atlanta. She is the daughter of Mrs. A. C. Woolley and has scores of friends in the city who greatly admire her work. She first began to study in Atlanta under Mr. Volney Richardson, a northern artist, who came south for his health. "He only stayed here a year," she said. "He became dis- gusted with the same lack of artistic appreciation that we've been talking about, and went back to New York. But he did do me a great deal of good, and if it had not been for him I probably never would have gone away to study. He taught me the most important thing of all; that is, to paint from nature and still life, and never, never to do copy work."

Later Miss Woolley went to Chicago to study, and to Paris, where she spent three years. There she was tutored by Jacques Blanche, a noted artist, and by a Scotchman named John Ferguson. Ferguson helped me more than anyone else," she said. "He seemed to give more of himself, his own experience in his criticism of my work, and he was generous in telling us our faults, and our good points. Unfortunately, I only had a short while to study under him, for which I am sorry."

BY MARY KATHER WINTER.

AFTER several years of study in art schools of Chicago, after three years under noted teachers in Paris, and after serious attempts at work in Atlanta, Miss Virginia Woolley, a talented Atlanta girl, whose paintings have attracted attention recently on exhibit in one of the book stores, has come to the conclusion that this city is poor soil for the nurture of ambition.

"There is absolutely nothing here to encourage an artist," she said. "There is little interest in art, and nothing to encourage whatever talent may exist in the city. Why, if you go out to make a few sketches of a landscape, people look at you as though they thought you were crazy. They whisper and point at you until you are ready to sink into the ground from embarrassment. If this were not my home, I'd fly feet of until I found this room; pack up my brushes and palette and go to some other city where the atmosphere is more stimulating to artistic growth."

"I can't see what is the matter. Minutely, Atlanta has proved that it can encourage big events, that it can lend sympathetic help to foster ing an atmosphere conducive to the highest art, and in nearly every thing except the art of the painter encouragement even, much less substantial aid. There are at least Miss Woolley says one is homesick for Paris; that she misses the camaraderie, the helpfulness, the ambitious striving of the students who gather in the Latin quarter to pay homage to Art—sprayed with capital letter.

"Atlanta's lack of artistic perception, her coldness toward artistic development and its lack of understanding even of what a young artist may be trying to accomplish is disheartening," said Miss Woolley; and in this Miss Marie Haina, another pretty, ambitious girl, who shares Miss Woolley's studio in the Wesley Memorial building, heartily agreed.

"I've been horribly discouraged," she admitted Miss Haina, "and I never hope to accomplish anything really in Atlanta. If I can earn enough by my commercial art work to enable me to go somewhere else to work and study I shall be satisfied."

"Why, you cannot even find a studio in town in which to work," continued Miss Woolley. "I walked all over the city until I found this room; pack up my brushes and palette and go to some other city where the atmosphere is more stimulating to artistic growth."

"And I am not the only one. You would be surprised to know the number of girls in Atlanta who have a serious ambition in art, who are working hard under the most unfavorable circumstances, without any hope of success."

"But I tell you for a while it seemed hopeless to try to work in Atlanta," said Miss Woolley, "and I've been thinking about just giving up. That's the reason I selected Atlanta scenes when I finally decided to shift studio. There is no place down town where they can rent a studio, and in the ones they have arranged they cannot hope to accomplish much. They are too far out from the center of the city; nobody will go to see their exhibits, and there is no place in the city where pictures can be shown for more than a few days at a time."

Miss Woolley's indictment of Atlanta for its lack of artistic atmosphere was by no means bitter; rather, it was of a wondering nature. She herself has done better than others in the city. Her work is really good and has attracted attention and purchasers.

Her recent exhibit, made up of vivid picturesque sketches of well-known Atlanta scenes, illustrated her lack of giving an artistic touch to commonplace street scenes and to everyday surroundings.

She has picked out a few points that are seen every day by busy Atlantians and has invested them with an artist's light and color—street scenes on Peachtree and Whitehall, views of the skyline softened to picturesque vagueness, impressions of the tennis court at Piedmont park, and the latticed arbor at Bryant park, and stretches of lovely landscape.

"But I tell you for a while it seemed hopeless to try to work in Atlanta," said Miss Woolley, "and I've been thinking about just giving up. That's the reason I selected Atlanta scenes when I finally decided

Miss Virginia Woolley is Shown at Her Easel. The other Photographs Are Reproductions of Paintings She Has Made of Scenes in Atlanta. Piedmont Driving Club, Peachtree St., Ponce de Leon Ave Baptist Church

There everybody is alive and interested. Everybody is helpful and sympathetic, and everybody feels free to do as he pleases artistically. That is why the cubists and all other new forms of art originate in Paris, and why to study in Paris becomes the goal of all young artists.

"Why, here, if I go out to make a little sketch, everybody acts as though I were a crazy woman. I feel sure that I just narrowly escaped being arrested for a lunatic while I was making some of these sketches of Atlanta. The day I painted the scene showing the Georgian Terrace and the new apartment house as seen from Ponce de Leon avenue I unfortunately and unknowingly chose an afternoon on which there was a baseball game. And when those hordes of people began to return from the game one would think that they had lost all memory of where they had been in their excitement at watching me and pointing me out."

These walking galleries around me until I could scarcely paint for embarrassment. Of course one cannot do good work when one-half the mind is on the picture and the other half is busy wondering what people will say or think next about you. It was the same way when I painted the Driving Club."

Despite the "half-minded" success of the long-suffering artist, she succeeded in covering her impressions to canvas; but she has not yet succeeded in producing the impressions left by the curious passers-by on her sentiments.

"Why, in Augusta and other cities," she complained, laughing, "a girl can go out to sketch, and she is not made to feel as though people regard her as a lunatic and are wondering at just what moment she may become dangerous."

Now, if I were a cubist I might understand the wild look in their eyes when they viewed me at my sketching; but I am not. I was in Paris when the cubist movement first began to attract attention, but during all the time I was there I was not converted to that school. They do say that it became intensely fascinating to those who took it up, and certainly it is fascinating to the outsider, who is invited to figure out the art of the cubists."

Miss Woolley, however, does not point blank declare that the cubists' serious idea in it, she says, "which (Continued on page 11.)"

DANCE FROCKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

With facilities that are associated in our minds with the holiday season claim a special consideration from the home dressmaker, for a new dance frock is in order, the one of the first part of the year being ready to give place to a fresh creation of the clever woman. There always looks with approving eyes on the evening dress and exerts herself in the robing of fair femininity after 8 o'clock. In the group before you there are representatives of the leading houses in the city of fashion. They come to you with practical suggestions that most American women can apply to the credit of their hand.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, Nov. 12. — This theater is the chief medium for launching new styles, and the couturiers have recently created models which have caused a furore even here, where the most bizarre of modes are received with approval. These gowns are fashioned of brocade and broche, exquisite in color and simple in texture, and immediately recall the robes of state belonging to some medieval duchess. Wide threads and jewels are lavishly used to adorn these costumes, which are the result of inspirations drawn from antique prints, paintings or miniatures. There are a number of deep, rich tones, a gorgeous Madonna blue, taken from the palette of an Italian master; byrrle green and imperial red. The materials are swathed and above the waist are carried, tulle, lace or chiffon, with tulle sleeves cut in one with the bodice. The décolletage is extremely low, and frequently black tulle is used to enhance the whiteness of the throat and shoulders. An example of barbaric splendor, worn at the Theatre des Capucines, is an evening costume of metal brocade gaudy swathed about the figure in graceful lines. The corsage is composed of fresh-colored tulle, held over the shoulders with strands of helianthus. The front is adorned with a huge gold plaque studded with jewels and flashing forth in thousand lights. Large gold tassels ornament the bodice and skirt. A profusion of color, new tones are represented by brown, bronze, grey, forest green and mahogany, covered by sequin when designed velvet street costume. Callot Spoons sponsor the souzou conner skirt, Conzack coats, wrapped turbans and oriental shawls, and the majority of their models are decidedly original in their design, especially the Egyptian, Turkish and Indian fashions. A costume which has been duplicated for several members of royalty has borrowed its lines and coloring from the robes of ceremony worn by an ancient prince of Baxand. The upper portion of the gown is composed of richly brocaded gauze in tones of Persian rose, pale green and gold. The undergarment is of pale-green panne velvet, slashed and draped to simulate toupas. Tucked in at the corsage is a single flower of Persian rose-colored tulle, each petal outlined with brilliant. Headpieces are decidedly oriental and consist of close-fitting jeweled caps or tiaras or jewels, which are simple strands of brilliants or pearls worn low over the forehead. These are invariably adorned with sprays of plumage arranged in compact, fan-like bunches or collapsed to form a narrow flexible silver band inset with brilliants in a decorative fan-shaped ornament of white gauze. Waistcoats of extra lace, bordered with narrow bands of fur, are worn over blouses of chiffon or mousseline de soie. Head embroideries appear in every conceivable form. Tulle of white, black and most solidly embroidered, are favored for evening gowns. Beaded headpieces are used for girdles and borders, while beaded medallions, trim, fringes, and embroidered, with jet, in red, over the shoulders. There has been a revival of the use of ostrich-feather trimming, and a handsome evening wrap of black and dull silver brocade is finished about the neck and sleeves with blue ostrich plumes. Dancers are wearing smart little bouffant hats of velvet or fur trimmed with flowers—tulips, garlands of color. A Jeanne Lanvin model is of black tulle, skirted about the edge of the hem to form a narrow rill. Details in all cases of red, purple, and brown shades of black velvet, clasped with the tulle, complete the charming hat. The exquisite afternoon gowns created by Detet, Descoll, Bescher, have favorite trimmings of the lowest material, frequently bordered with fur, are a favorite trimmings of the lowest clever with your embroidery needle, a border of hand-worked roses would add distinction. Over the skirt is a crossed-grille of chiffon velvet in a contrasting shade. The ends are tied at the back in a loop and two straight tabs. Three ruffles are added to the skirt, each one finished with a row of beads. These are worn and do not affect the placing line of the silhouette. Any odd-shaped tunic of pleated tulle in the fashionable note of black is really the dress of the third evening dress. An undergarment of sky-blue silk is short and slanted, and a sleeve of pale yellow velvet would a note of color that gives character to the entire dress. This model is being shown in gray satin, with an overcollar of multi-colored tulle and a mazarin velvet grille. Dark blue mousseline de soie or tulle is placed over white satin in the following dress, that will take its owner to any dance in a charming expression of a favorite Paris designer. It has a draped bodice with a pointed décolletage. This is headed with a ruffle, and the short sleeves are finished with slashed rills. Over the skirt is a pleated tulle cut in a point and edged with a deep ruffle of the same material. This is a dress of god tulle over white satin, the bodice being rubber plain. In any material of an ornate character, make the dress on simple lines and let the fabric do the work. All of the tulle and one band of fur that trims the front in a diagonal line. On the edge of the sleeves are bands of fur, and the upper tulle ruffles in this finish. The double tulle is the finishing touch. This is edged with a quilting of tulle. Around the waist line is a contrasting grille of satin.

One very practical note in all the above is presented in the fact that they can be worn by women of all ages. That is the test of good line and elegant simplicity. The uses of remnants are full of hints that will help to solve the dance-dress problem with ease.

The latest novelties in footwear are stockings of silk elaborately beaded in lizard, serpent or dragon designs. Other varieties are inset with lace and richly embroidered, while a third design is a coarse fabric of silk beaded or set with brilliants. Neckties of diamond black velvet ribbon have large sapphires, emeralds, amethysts or diamonds suspended from each end. Smart Parisiennes are wearing blouses of chiffon or mousseline de soie with black skirts, but both must correspond in color. Broad grilles of velvet are sometimes used to soften the costume if the color is somber, and narrow bands of fur trim the blouse. The latest novelty in suits is of coral-blue velours de laine and has a trimmings of black silk. The collar and cuffs are of black silk. The collar and cuffs are of black silk. The collar and cuffs are of black silk.

Of Elegant Simplicity
I WOULD be impossible to imagine a more beautiful garment than a white panne velvet evening wrap, shown at a recent opening. The wrap was in two pieces having a seam down the center back. It fell in a graceful fulness from the neck, the neck consisting of several rows of shirring. The sleeves were wide and the shoulders were decidedly long. The sleeves were gathered into a fulness at the wrists by several rows of shirring. The front had the Japanese upward draping, and the wrap was caught together by seven white headed buttons about one and a half inches apart. A collar of tulle rime finished off the neck. The distinctive feature, however, was the unexpected circle of shirring, about the size of a luncheon plate, at the center back a trifle below the shoulders. Now upon row of shirring was used, one inside the other, until the center was reached. A large tassel of tridacant white beads to match the buttons hung from the circle of the shirring by twisted rope of the beads about six inches long. The rows of shirring, wherever used, were about a half inch apart. It was quite evident that the shirring circle had no effect whatever on the draping and was placed on the back of the dress solely for the purpose of surprising to learn that the shirring circle had been made in the back of the wrap after the wrap was completed. There isn't any doubt about it—that wrap was a creation!

structured that it becomes a task to choose the most attractive. Each possesses an individuality, and many are so simple in line and trimming that a casual glance would give the impression of severe plainness. A model of this type is fashioned of black chiffon velvet cut over medieval lines. The sleeveless corsage extends almost to the knees, and the neck line, armholes and hem are bordered with slanting fur. About the waist, slightly confining the fulness, is drawn a sash of dull gold braid, finished at the ends with gold tassels. A simple rose of coral-colored velvet is used to adorn the corsage or a simple rose of coral-colored velvet is used to adorn the corsage or a simple rose of coral-colored velvet is used to adorn the corsage.

THE VIRTUES OF OLIVE OIL

Nearly every one knows what an important part olive oil plays in the making of palatable salads, but many are unaware of the value of olive oil for a health and beauty point of view. The oil can be taken internally for many ills. Some most distressing cases of indigestion have been cured by it. A tablespoonful should be taken after each meal. If the taste is unpleasant, orange juice or grape juice will dispense it to some extent. Pour the oil between two portions of the juice. It must be understood, however, that, like all other remedies, this one is not helpful to all patients suffering with indigestion. In many cases a glass of warm water sipped an hour before eating will prevent the pains of indigestion. It may be well to mention right here the various causes of indigestion, so that the wise woman can be more cautious than her suffering sisters. Imperfect mastication, bad teeth, food taken in such a position that it would not be able to resist any putrefaction, frequent intervals, alcohol, tea and coffee and nervous trouble may cause all the trouble with the digestive organs. One should never delay the search for a remedy for indigestion. What the trouble becomes chronic it is a serious matter. Attend to the trouble as soon as you feel the first symptoms if you wish to be saved future misery.

Olive oil mixed with quinine is a valuable remedy in the case of a cold, the mixture should be rubbed around the neck and chest until the pores have absorbed the greater part of it. In applying the remedy, place a piece of oiled silk over the skin so that the clothing will not be soiled. A poultice combined with olive oil and rubbed on the throat with the fingers of the hand will be of great benefit. I can affirm that a great many persons treat colds and sore throats too lightly. No one is to be associated with the person who exaggerates his condition, but yet it is a risk for one to consider a cold a slight ailment and allow it to get on in the open way, thus weakening the tissues and putting the system in such a position that it would not be able to resist any putrefaction of the nose and throat. It is very important that the nose and throat be kept in a healthy condition, for they are the gates to the bronchial tubes and lungs. If the mucous membranes of these are diseased, the germs cannot help but continue their way to the lungs.

One should avoid exposure to wet and cold. A very bad habit, when it varies results in a cold, is the sitting out in damp air and showers. When ever it is necessary to go out in the rain, do try to remove the damp clothing as soon as possible after you enter the house. Persons in the business world should make it a point to have an extra pair of shoes and stockings in the shop, office or store, where they are engaged, so that when they arrive, the damp ones as soon as they arrive. The individual suffering from spots should make it his or her duty to have the system toned up by taking a good

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

New Social Seasons
The winter season is upon us, and with it comes a new social season. It is a time when we are reminded of the old saying, "What have I to be thankful for?" It is not unusual to hear reminiscences to join in the thanks of the nation because they have found nothing in the year to be thankful for. A whole year of thanksgiving is a wide and unbroken field. There is no one who is not thankful for the things that have been done for him. There is no one who is not thankful for the things that have been done for him.

to you when things go wrong? Take a look at the blue sky or the green trees; let the white snow or the brown swallows prove to you that there is a grand scheme in the world and that there is a halcyon, a compensation that is comforting. And that reminds me that if you are very rebellious the sunny compensation by Emerson will bring you a state of mind that will make you happy. The power to think, to act, to take part in the everyday affairs, is a great gift. Be thankful that you are not living in a time when a woman was burned for daring to think or to act except along prescribed lines, no concession that woman are human and worthy of respect and respect is worth our thanks. Be glad that you can laugh and cry; that your opinion and work, no matter how inconsequential, is heeded by some one, and that you are a little more experienced and a little more worth while than you were this time last year. Be thankful that you can express your gratitude. Look at the things that are done for you and these things are good to you and these things are good to the man, if with the matter that is being worn each day by countless women all around you.

PARADEMNS the ECCENTRIC TAILORED COSTUME

A Severe Plainness Is the Distinctive Note Now Being Struck in the Tailor Suit. Almost as Plain as Last Winter, the Tailored Suit Has a Single Skirt with a Little Fullness at the Waist Band and Narrow About the Hem. Skirts Are Longer in the Back Than in the Front, with Gathers at the Waist Which Give Width to the Hips and Produce the Fashionable Silhouette. Openings at the Hem Are No Longer Modish. Coats Are of Every Variety, but Those of Unconventional Style Are Reserved for the Dressy Costume.

PARIS—(Special Correspondence)—A week of gloomish autumn weather and two smart race days have put the seal on all sorts of fashion, especially those intended for the street. These include tailored suits more dressy costumes that may be worn at teas and receptions, hats, shoes, gloves, and other little details such as veils, neckerchiefs, bags, and all. Women have commenced to wear what is really going to be smart for the next three or four months, and it is only when one sees things worn that one may be sure of styles.

which was quite short. On the hips, however, were long tabs and in front again it was cut short, three or four inches above the waist line. Coming from beneath the coat in the back and extending down as far as the hip tabs, was a band of striped velvet. In the darkest colors, the stripes go lengthwise. In front, this same

Tailored costumes have lost the eccentricities that were displayed early in the season, and this is very certain knowledge is what invariably happens. The first tailored skirts were draped, provided with overskirts furnished with masses, and were otherwise trimmed and decorated. Those that are seen on the street now, and also at the races, are almost as severely plain as they were last winter, and it is only those that smart women are wearing. The majority of them are made with a slight skirt, which has gathers at the waist band, but is narrow about the hem. This fullness is a little differently introduced than it was last season, for the skirts are not much longer in the back than the front, three or four inches and sometimes more, and they are less drawn up into the band, this mounting beginning at the sides and continuing across the back. This brings some gathers into the waist line, and also gives a good deal of width across the back of a skirt just at the hips, which is the fashionable silhouette of the moment.

As most of the tailored costumes are being made of woolen velvets, and of a perfectly lovely soft material, and of ratine, the non-draped skirt is the only one that is attractive. Any others are clumsy and take away from the trim close lines, which is still the one to be desired.

There is another skirt model which has gathers on each hip, of course not many, and the back of this is a little longer and is a little divided with one side seam, usually on the left side, that even when walking this opening remains hidden. They are, however, wearing those that have been fashionable that is not becoming to every one, and when this is the case they are rounded up either at the two sides or in the center of the front, the rounding being shallow, but sufficient to allow for comfort.

Coats Suit Individual Taste.

Coats may be what one likes, for really every sort is to be seen. A few that are pronounced have a long waist line and a good effect about the hips, but every style that is not rather conventional is left to the dressy costume. A number of short jackets have raised and outlined seams, these all showing curved lines at the waist, which give an extremely neat appearance. Others have hip basques, these following the line these skirts, they are extremely becoming to slim women. Still others have an extra basque put on in the back, this being without fastenings, the seam generally being concealed by a belt. But the conventional coat for the severe and the one that is put on across the back, that either extends all round or is put on across the long, and fastens in the center of the front. The belt may be of the material, or of patent leather, one being considered no smarter than the other, but it must be adjusted low on the garment, really below the hips, or else, if it is to give a short waisted effect.

Sometimes three huge buttons are used for the fastening, sometimes two clusters of four in a cluster of small ones are employed, and the same idea prevails on the sleeves. These hats, by the way, almost always come from beneath the armholes and are not put in with a seam, a general fashion seen on most outside garments, and all bodies this season.

Heavy street costumes display great variety, and a great deal of bright coloring. The same materials, such as duvety, woolen velvet, and ratine, are used, but in addition there is velveteen, dark blue and velveteen, both somewhat like velvets, but quite so silky. Also these dressy costumes are combined with other materials, which give the required touch. At the race last Sunday, the first really big day of the autumn, I saw two smart frocks, three, in fact, which illustrate some of the attractive combinations.

Black Satin and Woolen Velvet.

The use of black satin and dark blue woolen velvet, the former being used for the skirt, which was absolutely plain except for some gathering about the belt. The coat of woolen velvet was long enough in the back to come to within four inches of the bottom of the skirt, and it was cut in a long point. It sloped up sharply on the sides, and did not quite close at the waist line in front. The lower edge of the garment was held in by stitching, so that it drew in to the figure instead of standing away, a somewhat different note from the general style. The garment at the back of the neck had the regulation Medici collar of black satin, and this continued down the fronts, which were opened enough to show white rills on a chambray. The small sleeves also had cuffs of satin, mounted a trifle from the wrists and narrow.

A novel and smart touch was given the costume by the girdle, of black satin and enormously wide. It must have been fifteen inches at least, and it was perfectly plain, without folds or seams. The satin was on the bias, and it must have been mounted onto a fitted lining, for there was not a wrinkle nor crease to be seen, and it fastened invariably on the left side of the front. Here at the top of the skirt there were two rows of shaggy satin, with ends of black satin provided with smaller thrush-throats, which fell down over the skirt. A similar ornament was put at the right side of the top of the girdle in the back. A black hat was worn with the gown, and these two ornaments were the only bit of odd coloring about the toilet, and they were most effective.

Long wool satin wrap, trimmed with a new fur called "bobette." The wrap is the old fashioned woman shape, with loose overhanging sleeves, which are put in at the side seam in the back and are caught up underneath in front. The collar is made of stripes of schette, a fur that is of two shades of yellow, one very pale, the other quite dark. It is open shaped and wide in the back. The wrap fastens with two huge seal buttons. The large muff is also of schette. Both this and the wrap are lined with oak red brocade satin. Model from Brunswick.

Shining Afternoon Frocks.

In the table costume the material was of black ratine de soie, this having a plain skirt full slightly all about the belt. On the hips were flounces made of black chiffon, which reached half way down to the knees and were gathered quite full. Trimming such flounces were three bands of ermine, of a narrow width, and gathered on about three inches apart. The coat was a short bolero, which fell over a folded skirt of black satin, and this had a Medici collar of ermine with some jabots of lace falling from below it. Although so plain, it was one of the noticeable costumes, and one which could be carried out in any color and with darker fur and be equally attractive.

For afternoon teas there are some stunning frocks being worn, made of imitation bristowatch, which is the latest as well as the smartest material being shown. Even at the dinner, these frocks cannot be told from the real fur, so beautifully it is being made this season, and given made of it are certain to become the rage, so becoming as they. They make any figure look wonderfully slender, and the fabric so thin and supple that it can be draped, boned, and used in the most dressy possible manner, and still keep the slim silhouette.

One charming model I have seen had a skirt that was fitted into the belt in the back, and then fell straight to the hem. In front it was plain, but there was an overskirt, which fell nearly to the knees, that was much ruffled, and was slightly boned about its lower edge. The coat was a darling, a sort of Louis XVI affair, which fitted into the waist line and had a basque skirt that it can be draped, boned, and used in the most dressy possible manner, and still keep the slim silhouette.

There has been every kind of an effort made to revive the large hat, but so far without success. Lewis, Georgia, Carter, the devotee of the tiny hat, Lottine, and a half a dozen other of the great milliners have shown large picture hats, and a number of these have been worn at the races by some of the Mammochins, but so far the women of fashion have not been tempted quite small, or at the most of medium size.

One of the newest Lewis models is a little round affair made of velvet, with a brim that is low and rolling and a crown all softly crumpled. In this little rolling hat, however, only extends from the center of the crown round on to the right side. The other side seems to have yards of velvet that has been left over from the crown, and this is taken up over a frame on the left side, and mounts up in large folds to a great height.

This form is uninteresting, even the crown having nothing to mark it, but an extra fold, but the closeness of the hat line in the manner of adjusting the velvet, and the way it is placed on the head. Both are different, would certainly speedily make such a shape, for it is nothing more, to properly possess one of these, for if they are a bit too far back or equally too much over the face the style is gone and all the smartness is lost. The right method is to put the hat on perfectly straight and just far enough back to allow of a little fringe of hair showing. Then it is fitted over a little to the right side, smoothing all the hair well down over the ear. Equally on the left side, where a great deal of hair shows, it is all pulled out to make it look loose and fluffy, and then drawn back so that it makes an "broken" line directly to the center of the back.

Another new Lewis model is of the same shape, but much modified. That is, the hat has the same small rolling brim on the right side, with some soft, jutting folds on the left, but these last are not tall, but only seem to be a continuation of the soft cover. The hat is trimmed with two stiff quills, which are placed on the right side, but these, instead of pointing backward, come directly over the front, which are pointed out perhaps seven or eight inches beyond the brim. The effect is odd, but smart and unusual.

Carter is making a dear little round hat that has a brim that curls up all round delightfully, and a crown that is soft and unlined. Coming from either side from under the brim is a stiffened roll of velvet, black, or whatever may be the shade of the hat. This roll encircles the back hair, which, of course, must be drawn low, and on one side of this hair-like arrangement is placed some large flower, with its cluster of foliage. It is a pretty, picturesque little affair and charming for wearing at teas and receptions with the present low cut gowns.

Dinner gown of liberty satin in dark black. The draping is elaborate and is made by drawing the front back and catching the material on the sides. The front has several large plaques, which fall from the mounted belt. In the back there is one point which is soft, that is not caught in any one place and simply falls away into the train.

The girdle is of black velveteen embroidered in some design. The chemise is of white crepe, finished across the top with a narrow row of brilliant net. This same trimming edges the black chiffon sleeves. Model from Brunswick.

Another of these bristowatch frocks had the skirt trimmed with two flounces of an open lace work of tulle, these being bordered with skunk. It was nearly if not quite straight, and had a black satin girdle to match the belt. The bodice was a combination of tulle openwork and the material, the former being used for a portion of the sleeves and for a funny little ruff that fell over the girdle. Both were trimmed with fur.

There has been every kind of an effort made to revive the large hat, but so far without success. Lewis, Georgia, Carter, the devotee of the tiny hat, Lottine, and a half a dozen other of the great milliners have shown large picture hats, and a number of these have been worn at the races by some of the Mammochins, but so far the women of fashion have not been tempted quite small, or at the most of medium size.

SOCIETY COPIES THE HEADDRESS OF MANY FAMOUS PAINTINGS

When Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Peters entertained last Wednesday at the Piedmont Driving Club, the headdress of each guest was in imitation of paintings by Rembrandt, Gainsborough, or others of the masters; or were copies of the headdress worn by famous individuals or by types, such as the Viennese beauties of long ago. The accompanying photographs are reproductions of three paintings, the headdress of each of which was copied. On the left is the "Duchess of Devonshire," by Gainsborough; next to that is "Miss Robinson," by Romney; and at the bottom is "The Morning Walk," by Gainsborough.

Old Man Retribution Is Making His Levy Upon the J. P.'s Themselves

These Judges of an Ancient and Honorable Court, Where You Could Sue Your Neighbor Be Held Up by the Plumber, or Marry, Are Soon to Pass Into Private Life.

By DUDLEY GLASS
In Webster's Worcester's and the new one with limp backs at 60 cents down and a dollar a month for your natural life, the initials J. P. are crest, brand and earmark, setting forth that the bearer thereof is Justice of the Peace, lord of the High Justice and the Middle Low, Jack and the Game. The Code of Georgia, in the statute made and provided, asseverates the same. But those citizens who have answered their deathly summons to find Opportunity waiting on the mat with a legacy from a long lost uncle, only to be greeted by an unshaven bearded man with a paper tucked in the sweatband of his greasy hat, have added an amendment to the statute and entered a demurrer to the definition.

"J. P." stands for "Judgment for the Plaintiff." They solemnly affirm to put it succinctly, neatly and get down to brass tacks, "Just Pay." That's why there will be few mourners in the funeral cortices of the Atlanta Justices on December 31 next. True, there will be heartfelt regret by the central figures in the obsequies and by their retainers. Also there must be a readjustment of business methods by loan sharks, certain back street chromolithograph houses and the several agencies of vultures who prey upon the misfortune of the poor. The danger of the private inquisition hitherto licensed by the state may have to go to work for a living. But there's no successful funeral without an AMICUS INSTANTIS.

to overturn the court house. But these had their objectionable points—you couldn't drag a victim before them and take his money without showing at least an apology for a reason.

losing the case, and besides you have a date to play golf on December 3 the system that to lose valuable time. That's the way it works.

FAMILY BODIES ARE AHEAD. It is the justice court, where family rows are aired, where Mrs. Jenks recites the perjury of Mrs. Jinks, where Mrs. Wimp narrates her troubles with the Wumps, who live next door, and throw dead cats into the Wimp's parlor bed. It is here that Mr. Dicks, who raises chickens, hates Mr. Greigs, who raises chickens, and won't avoid his fence. It is here that Mr. Greigs complains that Mr. Greigs enticed away his cousin dog, alienated the affections of the invaluable animal and taught him to run rabbits, thereby destroying his usefulness.

MRS. WIGGINS, ALL. It is at the justice courts that wags unloaded their cargoes of battered bedsteads and rusty stoves and enlarged crayon portraits in dining gilt frames. These "household goods" look ridiculous enough piled there on the sidewalk, with the broken pitcher on the loose-legged table and a rattle straw hat adorning the 'ten-cent plaster figure of George Washington with one ear missing. But they were all Mrs. Wiggins' own, and she sat on the front steps with her apron at her eyes and wept when the halffill piled them in the wagon, with all the neighbors looking on. Of course, Mrs. Wiggins ought not to have bought things if she couldn't keep up the payments. It wasn't the seller's fault she took sick and lost her job in the cotton mill.

At the justice courts gather the not-yes, never-wills and has-beens of the bar, hoping to pick up a case and a fee. There are youngsters, a year out of college, office rent three months overdue, pockets empty, their client yet to appear. There are old ones, waxy of eye, shabby, timorous, sometimes finding a defendant and a fee, but hardly daring to make too vigorous a defense lest the justice list them in his black books and shut them out of all hope of future victories. The justice court is the first rung of the ladder of the peace! On such occasions the magistrates have appeared almost by an impromptu visit to the justice of the peace! On such occasions the local newspaper offices that once a bailiff slipped out and purchased a clean collar for the wedding. But this was never officially corroborated. But the last days of the J. P.'s are approaching. The signs will disappear, their offices be turned to other uses, and in a few years Atlanta will wonder why such antiquated, obsolete relics of colonial days ever hung on so long. And there will be no flags at half-mast.

Now we come to think of it, what was their use. We had high courts and low; recorder's, judge Andy Oakland's and enough superior branches substituting a general municipal court of five judges who will receive salaries instead of fees and who will administer actual justice according to their honest belief.

Georgia's Part in the White House Wedding on Tuesday

FRANCIS B. AYRE.

LATEST AND BEST PORTRAIT OF MISS JESSIE WILSON.

Georgia and Atlanta have a very important part and a very personal interest in the wedding on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of President Woodrow Wilson, to Francis Bowse Sayre.

The wedding will take place in the East Room at the White House in Washington, and will be conducted by the Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton.

Atlanta's and Georgia's part in the wedding will be the attendance of Miss Marjorie Brown, of Atlanta, as one of the four bridesmaids. Their very personal interest arises from President Wilson's residence here when he was beginning upon his career, and his recognition of Atlanta as partly his home.

Of the three bridesmaids, in addition to Miss Marjorie Brown, one is Miss Eleanor R. Wilson, sister of the bride; the other two are Miss Mary G. White, of Baltimore, and Miss Adeline Mitchell Scott, of Princeton.

The maid of honor will be Miss Margaret Wilson, sister of the bride. The best man will be Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, of Labrador.

The ushers will be: Benjamin B. Burton, of New York City; Dr. Scoville Clark, of Salem, Mass.; Mr. Gilbert Horax, of Montclair, N. J.; Charles E. Hughes, Jr., of Washington and New York City.

IDEAL AMERICAN HUSBAND
Dr. Grenfell, best man, says that Miss Wilson has chosen the ideal American for a husband.

"He is the man among men. Dr. Francis Sayre is the ideal type. He lives for life."

"This is how Dr. Grenfell—Dr. Luke of Labrador—the famous Arctic explorer—expresses his estimate of the White House bridegroom. He and Mr. Sayre once spent long months, working together among the poor fisher-folk of the frozen lands near the top of the world.

"Yes, I'm to act as the bridegroom's best man," smiled Dr. Grenfell. "Well, I've seen the man at his best!"

"Francis Sayre is known too well as a studious youth, interested in law and engaged in a governmental department.

"He is too little known in the way that I best know him, as a fearless fighter for humanity up in the bitter cold of the Labrador snows and the perilous gales of the Labrador coast.

There the mere polish of about nets and traps and anchorage education and cultural veneer is shivered off, and the elemental successful arbitrations. The force of qualities of man stand out by which the hat was resorted to frequently alone, in primitive conditions as and Sayre sometimes stood up bravely and justifies his being—in-ly to enforce the law—which he and qualities of faith, fearlessness and I had laid down—against these will; the courage to do and to endure! It is under those conditions that I have seen Sayre the man!"

"Sayre is not the kind to shun himself up always in the library with nothing but books and abstract thought. He has thrown himself into life, to see it and so live it as it must be lived.

"Why, even when he was in school he used to do such things as organize parties to go down to New York and study the conditions of prisoners in the Tombs!"

"Then he came up to the Arctic to toll with me in the work of bringing health and happiness to the poverty-stricken 'Liveyeres' of Labrador. There he learned what it means to meet the primitive emergencies of life unflinchingly. He had hardly come ashore when the people called upon him to cure a fisherman who had fallen down a companion-way and fractured his thigh. To him every man who comes from the north is a doctor. And poor young Sayre, whose legal training was useless to him here, had to stand by and do his best to care for the helpless sufferer."

MY RIGHT HAND MAN.

"He became my right hand man. I was the doctor and missionary for the entire community, but he was the lawyer, teacher, judge, social worker and policeman."

RECORD ON FILMS OF HISTORIC BATTLE

BY GERTHILDE N. PRICE.
PINE RIDGE, N. D.—Another great historic American battle has just been recorded on the film of a modern moving picture camera for all generations to come to see.

The Battle of the Mission, the antithesis of the Battle of Wounded Knee, has been staged, play by play, shot by shot, death by death, as it was on that other bitter cold day, December 30, 1890.

"This time the scene was laid over the Ridge nearly five miles from the 'agency'—and within sight of the little mission which still stands there—just as it was laid before."

But this time the war-painted Indians rehearsed their firing; the gallant troops repeated their charge, and the "dead and wounded" fell half a dozen times before the camera. Machine finally turned and ground out the action.

Here's the way it was all conducted: First the blue-coated troops rode out from camp in the early morning, and lined up on a nearby hill ready to be called upon at any moment.

Then the Indians, jogging along in their dust-covered wagons, with their squaws behind them or aloft on galloping ponies, passed up the road toward the scene of battle.

And all the time the hills resounded with the wail of the squaws—the squaws of warriors who fought in the real battle years ago.

Close behind the participants in the mimic warfare came Director Wharton and his staff of camera men.

"Keep back of the camera!" was the first order at this battleground. "Keep back of the camera or you'll get shot!"

Quickly the plan of action was explained to the Indians who seemed more than anxious to begin. And when some one asked why change of footing among the rednet actors since a few days ago at the battle of Wounded Knee they were reminded of the difference in circumstances between these two memorable events.

At the Battle of Wounded Knee the Indians were massacred. At the Battle of the Mission the Indians do the attack and the whites were forced to defend themselves!

The story of the Battle of the Mission, they were told, was the story of a regiment's attempt to reach Pine Ridge after a forced march of many miles.

The Indians were really in their element in this battle scene and played their parts in "imitat' perfect" fashion. They dressed, they attacked, they fought back and they fell with all the realism that the most exciting stage manager could have desired.

And when the battle was over, the last bit of smoke had wound its way into the sky and the oldest Indian had picked himself from the field and betaken himself to his wagon or pony, the chief of the Sioux and the white man shook hands and smiled on one another!

It was a battle with real smoke and real action and real falls. But it was a battle without hatred, without hurts and without sorrow.

The end of the act and the end of the day marked another great step forward in the progress of the twentieth century method of preserving history and the progress of the moving picture industry.

The famous fight of the Mission is recorded now on a film—accurately, clearly, definitely, correctly!

They will be today and the children of tomorrow may see it with all its color and atmosphere and picturesqueness as truly as if they had lived in the days when the redman was hostile and the white man was hostile!
