BOLLING H. JONES

Postmaster McKee Announces That He Expects Mr. Jones on That Day and Is Prepared to Turn Over the Office to Him

It is understood on reliable authority that Bolling H. Jones, Atlanta's new postmaster, will take charge of the office this week, probably on Tuesday morning. The Journal's information was confirmed by Mr. McKee, who is retiring postmaster. He said he expected that Mr. Jones would be ready to assume his duties on Tuesday morning. "I am prepared to turn over the office to him whenever he calls upon Mr. McKee," and I expect him Tuesday morning.

JOHN D.'S PASTOR IS CHARGED WITH BEATING FATHER

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 13.—Four members of the Hanley family late today were subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury here Monday morning to be tried on charges of assault upon Calvin Hanley, of Middletown, by his son, President E. A. Hanley, of Franklin college. Those summoned were President E. A. Hanley, his sister, a brother, Oakley Hanley, and the latter's wife.

President Hanley tonight arrived here from Indianapolis, where today he issued a statement admitting that he had switched and spanked his father-in-law, a resident of Terre Haute, a member of the executive board of Franklin college. The Rev. Mr. Parker, in a brief statement, said the executive board had full confidence in Dr. Hanley and that no hasty action would be taken on the case.

Calvin Hanley was resting easy tonight and his physician said he did not consider his condition serious.

Dr. Hanley is one of the leading educators of Indiana and a former Baptist minister. At one time he was pastor of the John D. Rockefeller church in Cleveland.

President Hanley and his father were reconciled tonight when the son motorized to his father's home. In the presence of all the members of the family, the two embraced and asked mutual forgiveness.

According to a friend who witnessed the meeting, the father declared that he had been spoiled by being allowed to dictate to other members of his family. Dr. Hanley later returned to Terre Haute and departed on a late train for Franklin.

The Franklin president made the trip to Middletown after he had received word that his father wished to see him. He was accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Parker.

What effect the reconciliation will have upon the grand jury investigation officials would not predict tonight, although friends of the Hanley family declared the action probably marked the close of the incident.

It is understood on reliable authority that Bolling H. Jones, Atlanta's new postmaster, will take charge of the office this week, probably on Tuesday morning.

The Journal's information was confirmed by Mr. McKee, who is retiring postmaster. He said he expected that Mr. Jones would be ready to assume his duties on Tuesday morning.

"I am prepared to turn over the office to him whenever he calls upon Mr. McKee," and I expect him Tuesday morning.

Mr. Jones could not be reached over the telephone here tonight.

The appointment of Mr. Jones was confirmed by Mr. McKee, who is retiring postmaster. He said he expected that Mr. Jones would be ready to assume his duties on Tuesday morning.

The information following Mr. Jones' confirmation was that he would assume his duties early in October, but presumably the department at Washington decided for him to take charge sooner, as he recently returned from a trip to that city.

THE EYE OF THE NEEDLE

HABEAS CORPUS DENIED

A. D. OLIVER IN ALBANY

Alleged Bank Wrecker and Bigamist Rushed Out of Georgia by Officers

ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 13.—Judge Clayton Jones, of the city court of Albany, this afternoon decided that A. B. Oliver, alleged Georgia bank wrecker and bigamist, and L. C. Harding, escaped convict from Mississippi, were one and the same and accordingly he denied the writ of habeas corpus sued out by Oliver's lawyers in an effort to prevent him being taken back to Mississippi.

Hardly had the judge finished announcing his decision before the Mississippi officers had bundled Oliver into a waiting automobile and started off at a rapid rate for the Alabama line. With Oliver legally in their possession it was apparent that the Mississippi officials were determined to lose no time in taking their prisoner out of Georgia's jurisdiction.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS ARE EXPECTED IN MEXICO

State Department Thinks Something Will "Break" This Week

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—In anticipation of important developments in connection with the Mexican problem next week, state department officials have been giving much attention to the execution of plans for the withdrawal in safety of those Americans in Mexico, who can be induced to leave that country.

The immediate result of the state department's warning was to gather a number of such refusals in the seaports, and most of them now have been brought to the United States and American consuls in Mexico report a notable diminution in the number of Americans now homeward bound.

It is believed those now in the country have decided to remain and take the chance of protection at the hands of the Huerta government. It has not been possible to obtain an estimate of their number, but it is known that a large number of the Americans already have left the country.

American consuls in Mexico have been keeping lists of all American property, which the owners have withdrawn in order to establish a basis for the settlement of claims which may arise after the revolutionary movement has ended. In each case the proper consular official has been notified of the withdrawal in order that he might take steps to prevent robbery or looting of the property.

The president has expressly stated that his suggestion for the withdrawal of these Americans is not to be regarded as a sign of his purpose to intervene in Mexico and that it was based solely upon the belief set out in the preceding paragraph.

Many years afterwards he heard of this man's death. When Hall's wife died five years ago he received a letter of sympathy from Mrs. Carr and subsequent correspondence led to a meeting here.

Unconstitutionality Basis Of Motion for New Trial

Defense of Mrs. Godbee Claims That Jenkins County Court Is Unconstitutional, That Solicitor Was Not Right Solicitor, and That There Was "No Grand Jury"

MILLEN, Ga., Sept. 13.—In his motion for a new trial Judge Frank H. Stafford declares that the Jenkins county court is unconstitutional, that Solicitor General R. L. Moore, who prosecuted the case, was not the rightful solicitor of this circuit, and that there was "no grand jury" because it was bound by an oath administered by Solicitor Moore, who he contends, was without the lawful power to perform this necessary formality. The same contentions were embodied in a demurrer filed when the defense was fighting for a delay Thursday morning.

MEETING FOR STATE-WIDE CHAMBER ON 16TH

Large Attendance Expected at Macon From Many City Chambers of Commerce

Charles J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee, and Charles D. McKinnon, temporary secretary of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, both report most encouraging reports as to the growing interest in the Macon meeting on September 15th, from every part of the state.

The following towns and cities of the state have indicated their intention of sending delegations to the meeting: Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Dalton, Marietta, Milledgeville, Newnan, Spalding County, Columbus, Dublin, Douglas, Dawsonville, Eatonton, Grapeland, Griffin, Kennesaw, LaGrange, Lawrenceville, McDonough, Macon, Madison, Newnan, Newton, Ocala, Springdale, Swainsboro, Toxco, Union City, Vienna, Waynesboro, Waynesville, Statesboro and Mount Pleasant.

As the time draws near for the meeting, reports from other towns falling in line are received by almost every mail and it is now expected that at least twenty-five counties will be represented by more than three hundred delegates.

The Atlanta chamber of commerce will be in a hand with fifty representative delegates. Albany, LaGrange, Griffin and Waynesville will each have large delegations. From Waycross, Albany and Atlanta "specials" will be run for the accommodation of the delegates. DeKalb county will be represented by delegates from the commercial organizations of Kennesaw, Lithia Springs, Clarkston and Decatur. Secretary Hanspach of the Decatur board of trade made reports that the prospects now are that there will be seventy-five to the DeKalb delegates.

The convention will be called to order at 10:30 a. m. by Charles J. Haden, chairman of the executive committee. A luncheon will be served by the Macon chamber of commerce in the Hotel Danmore at 1:30 o'clock. The afternoon session will be called to order at 2:30 o'clock. The convention will adjourn at 4 p. m.

Both sessions will be devoted almost entirely to business, but several distinguished speakers have been invited to make an address on various phases of the industrial development of the state.

Speakers to be invited include: C. Richard H. Edmunds, editor of the "Business" Record, of Baltimore; and Melaine Tilton, secretary-treasurer of the Alabama State Bankers' association of Pell City, Ala. A number of well known Georgia leaders have been invited to make five and ten minute speeches on various subjects including the following: Messrs. John D. Hatcher, Columbus; William B. Moore, Fitzgerald; E. Y. Clark, LaGrange; W. H. Kuykendall, Griffin; L. P. Hilder, W. T. Anderson and E. H. Hester, Macon; G. S. Haines, of Decatur; J. G. Weatherly, of Brunswick; W. H. Moore, of Atlanta; E. B. Adams of Albany; and R. W. Parker and C. Dudley of Marietta.

The executive committee has been studying carefully the various types of state organizations throughout the United States and they have learned that there are nearly seventy such organizations in the United States.

After a careful study of the work of all these organizations, the executive committee will report at the Macon meeting a permanent plan of organization, based largely upon the model of the Trade organization.

TELLS HOW TO CONQUER RED COTTON SPIDER

E. Lee Worsham Sounds Warning Against Spider and Destructive Boll Worm

"By many instances serious damage to the cotton crop seems to be threatened by the red cotton spider and the cotton boll worm," states E. Lee Worsham, Georgia entomologist, declaring that numerous complaints against the ravages of both pests have reached his board recently.

Prevention is the best remedy against both insects, he says, but when the pests already are on cotton plants approaching maturity, the only course is to kill them with some effective poison. The red cotton spider, says Mr. Worsham, is exceedingly small. It feeds on the inside of the plant. It can be found in the most rapidly during the dry weather of August. Often the spider survives the winter. If it can find green food, the infested fields should be sprayed with a 2 per cent pyrethrum solution or a 2 per cent malathion solution. Care should be taken to prevent the recurrence of the spider later in the season. Woods and underbrush, especially pokeweed and goldenrod growing near the field, should be grubbed out and burned. Cultivated violets should either be sprayed or destroyed.

As to the boll worm, says Mr. Worsham, there usually are four or five generations each season. The eggs are laid on cotton. The third brood is the one which injures the cotton most severely, alone in August, when corn begins to mature. Late corn near the field, in prime silking condition August 1, will attract the pest away from the cotton. A sprayed preventive is winter plowing of the ground. It exposes the pupae and kills it. When the worm is on the cotton plant, however, poison must be used to kill it. DDT is the best poison. It has been found to be most effective. Wherever the cotton boll worm is found in abundance, this method should be applied at once.

A PLENNIE MINOR BARBECUE IS SOMETHING ELSE AGAIN

If there's anything better than a barbecue, it's two barbecues; and a Plennie Minor barbecue, such as the popular chief deputy sheriff of one county tendered yesterday at Germania Park to invited friends, is in a class by itself.

OVERLAND CARS TO BE GIVEN AS PRIZES

Six jobs of men's furnishings in various parts of the United States are to experience a pleasant variation from everyday business returns within the next few weeks. Each of the six who have yet to be chosen, is to be presented with an Overland touring car by the C. A. Edgerton Manufacturing company of Shirley, Mass., makers of president suspenders.

The Edgerton company purchased the six Overland cars last week from the C. T. Silver Motor company, metropolitan distributor of the largest number of the Massachusetts concern's suspenders during a given period.

In order that all jobs may have an equal chance to win they have divided into six classes and an Overland touring car will be the first prize in each class.

Deferred Payments On Diamonds

Under our deferred payment plan, you can purchase a diamond without feeling the outlay. You can pay only one-fifth of the price and settle the balance in as many as ten equal monthly payments. Only six per cent simple interest is charged on the amount left after deducting the cash payment.

This six per cent is the difference between time and cash prices—being just enough to pay for the extra bookkeeping involved.

It would not be fair to the cash customer to sell on time at the same price as for cash. Diamonds will be materially higher before November. It will mean quite a saving in purchase now so you can get the benefit of the old price.

Selection packages sent prepaid anywhere for examination. Call or write for booklet, "Facts About Diamonds," and buy before we follow the advance.

TRAVELING WITH FEDERAL COURTS, SAYS JEROME

Man Who's Chasing Thaw Takes Grim View of Habeas Corpus Writ

(By Associated Press.) COLLEGEVILLE, N. H., Sept. 13.—The perpetually recurring writ of habeas corpus which has so often dented the career of Harry K. Thaw since his incarceration in Mattewan as the insane slayer of Stanford White cropping up again this afternoon in his fight to resist extradition from New Hampshire. This time, and for the first time in the history of Thaw's efforts to regain his liberty, the writ was issued by a federal court.

Chief Justice Aldrich, of the district of New Hampshire, granted the application of three of the Thaw lawyers, Martin Shurtleff and Olmstead, and made it returnable at Littleton on Tuesday next. William Travers Jerome, especially designated to take Thaw back to the asylum, heard the news with ill grace and characterized the writ as a bad feat. There had been a gentleman's agreement, he said, that neither side was to make a court move pending the extradition hearing before Governor Parker in Concord next week. The Thaw leaders, led by Moses H. Cassano, said the writ was one of expediency and had been obtained to meet an emergency should the governor refuse a full hearing on the extradition matter and then the request was made by turning Thaw over to officers of the state of New York. They had reason to believe now, they added, that a full hearing would be accorded the fugitive, and in view of this it was probable they would request on Tuesday that the habeas corpus hearing be continued.

SINGING THE OLD-TIME SONGS

Negro Turned Loose Because He Helped To Quiet Prisoner

Because he exercised the very unusual common sense to assist an officer in subduing a fellow prisoner who was trying to escape from a patrol wagon Saturday night, Horace Tanner, aged twenty-two, in spending his Sunday where he lies instead of within the smelly confines of the city jail. He was served with a copy of charges, and for that will be distinguished. Gladly in the annals of darkness, rare in a negro so favored by the police. Ernest Thomas, negro, aged thirty, and Horace were mixing things up in lively fashion somewhere along Mitchell street Saturday night. A witness who was the cause of their fight, stood by and watched. Then the police appeared and bagged the three. They were riding to headquarters in the modern automobile "Black Maria," with the officer inside the wagon with them, when Ernest revolved, knocking the bully from the hands of Wagon Officer J. H. Hodson and overpowering the officer for a moment.

Some of the leaders of the Singing Society Musical association, which has been holding its 1913 meeting since Friday in the Atlanta auditorium. The gathering will adjourn this afternoon, after an interesting program of old-fashioned songs which the public is invited to hear. In the lower picture are the two oldest song leaders, A. S. Smith, who is 81, and J. T. Reese, who is 86.

REFINEMENTS IN THE PIERCE-ARROW CLUTCH

Oil Bath and Springs Under Facing Insure Smooth Start. A feature of the later Pierce-Arrow models that is causing a good deal of notice among owners and drivers is the refinement of the clutch. An experienced driver familiar with his car is able in most cases, no matter how brutal his clutch, to start his machine without jerking. With the refined Pierce-Arrow clutch any operator can get a smooth start. To all outward appearances the clutch is with the exception of the oil retaining ring unchanged, but upon closer investigation there will be found six small steel springs placed underneath the leather facing, forcing the surface of the clutch out at these points. When first engaged the six small springs take the initial strain but the total amount of surface engaged is not sufficient to cause the car to jump as is the case where the full surface engages at once. As the clutch is gradually forced into engagement the springs flatten out until when the clutch is all the way in the entire surface has become even.

New members have been added to the faculty and are being fitted for their term with a most brilliant outlook.

EVERY GIRL SHOULD BE TAUGHT ART NEEDLE WORK

Hints for Embroiderers. An embroidered piece should be washed by itself in carbon bisulphide to avoid the possibilities of rust or other stain. Take fairly hot water and make a light soap suds. Wash quickly. If the piece is soiled, but not particularly soiled, wash in lukewarm water. If the piece is between two dry towels or thick linen, press it with a hot iron. Roll up in these so that no part of the embroidery can touch any other part of the same linen, and wring or twist so that the dry linen will absorb the moisture. Leave in this condition until the material is absolutely dry. Lay the piece face down upon a well-padded ironing board, spread clean, white cloth over the embroidery and iron quickly and lightly with a hot iron, being careful not to press too heavily upon the embroidery portion. A hot iron placed upon embroideries in which the silk will produce a steam, which will ruin the embroidery. To remove scorch from linen, put two ounces of Fuller's earth in a sauceman, add a half ounce of white soap, the juice of two large onions and one cupful of vinegar. Boil together for a few minutes, strain into a jar and keep covered for future use. Spread on the scorched parts with a knife and allow it to dry on. Simpler way would be to run the scorched article with dry starch.

ROBERT F. MOBLEY OPENS TAILOR SHOP

Georgia Boy Appointed Manager of Atlanta Branch of J. J. Bauer Company. The J. J. Bauer company, of Cincinnati, announces the opening of a branch in Atlanta, with Robert F. Mobley to direct it as manager. The branch will be open for business from tomorrow on, occupying space on the ground floor of the Grand theater building.

It is in line with the approved ideas for putting life and vigor into city police departments. As Chief Beavers' comment upon the plan, "I believe that the men and the city will be benefited. He is well experienced in moderate price tailoring having been connected during 1910 and 1911 with the Atlanta branch of the Scotch Woolen Mills and having been manager of the Atlanta branch of the National Woolen Mills for the past two years. "We will open with a fine display of tailoring goods good enough to please the taste of anyone and moderate enough to meet the purse of any man who loves well-fitting clothes," said Mr. Mobley yesterday.

SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION FOR CITY POLICEMEN

Chief Beavers Thinks It Will Put "Life and Ginger" Into Department. A school of instruction for the city policemen of Atlanta was announced yesterday, the plan of it being similar to that which several larger cities of the land have found very successful, and its direct purpose being the improvement of the entire force of the town along the line of full detail work, will combine to produce a more efficient force of men.

Chief Beavers has ordered the inauguration of the plan, and its operation will begin during the coming week. The members of the force are divided into three sections, each of which, under charge of its own captain, will go to school separately. The school will be held at times designated by the captain, once each week at police headquarters. The studies of the Atlanta police school will be practical entirely, in subjects which relate closely to the work of a policeman. The equipment, conduct and duties of officers, methods of handling prisoners, methods of disarming prisoners, methods of getting evidence which will be recognized in courts of law, and other similar subjects will be studied at each of the three sessions of the school.

CREATES HOTEL WHERE TIPPING IS PROHIBITED

New York Tribune Has Story About Frank Seaman's Yama Farms Inn

The latest thing in hotels in any city and where bathroom and champagne are on exactly the same level when it comes to prices. This unique place promises to become famous.

Already it has taken New York's fancy, even though it is located out of Georgia and the New York Tribune last Sunday published a long story about Frank Seaman, who has started a new fashion in hotels, and about Yama Farms Inn, his "amusement hotel."

The Tribune's story even admits that Mr. Seaman has created a third class of hotels, so that now there are, according to the New Yorker, the hotels in New York City, those outside New York, and the one in Ulster county, N. Y., first, the Yama Farms Inn.

Mr. Seaman's idea, says the Tribune, was to run a hotel that would possess not a single unpleasant feature such as may be usually found in the most generously furnished hotels, and he is succeeding.

"To begin with," continues the story, "it is not in the rat-infested, vandolite-theatre or roof garden attachments that the peculiar appeal for 'no-tipping' hotels lies. Its special attraction will rest in that a flat charge of $5.00 or $15 a day will include everything."

"What do you mean, everything?" "Everything," "Bottle-neck and chateau vinegars will cost you the same. Tipping for any service whatsoever is prohibited. Massages, manicures, hairdressing, hairdressers, manicurists, bootblack, tailor, seamstress, trained nurse, kindergarten, newspapers, postage stamps, laundry—all are included."

"For the flat price Yama Farms Inn will be as though you owned it. Your individual preference in things to eat and drink will be conducted by M. Perraudin, who is the proprietor."

Saddle horses, automobiles, long and short ride ranges, tennis courts, swimming and Chief Peter, head of the Mic Mac tribe of Indians in the North Country, are among the other attractions of the place that you may avail yourself of but that will cost you nothing in the way of extra. There are no extras. You do not hear the word 'price.' NO CHECKS ALLOWED TO THE INN. Suppose you feel lonesome. You wish to be alone and you would enjoy something beautiful in the way of foot-tel telephone from your room to M. Perraudin. He sympathizes. He understands. He acts. Perhaps you remember a day you once encountered in Japan, or the Alps, or Hokoken, M. Perraudin knows it by heart. He prepares it. There is no charge.

Or if you want to take your meal in the forest, it is all the same. There is no price. No footing. No waiting for a table, no tipping the Gansymed that serves the wine, no tipping the minion that carries the ice water.

Simplicity is the keynote at Yama Farms Inn. Nothing that might be a chambermaid's idea of heaven will be found in the decorations of the lobby. There is no lobby.

You are reminded of a manor house. The rooms are not numbered. You may be assigned to the Dressing Room or the Paul Revere room or the Governor Olyn-Bull room.

There is no house detective on the watch every minute of the day. Your laundress, ready to pinch the elbow of the maid wearing a fur coat and silk hat, the spouse of the elbow of the woman in every European crook.

You are among the best known in the world. You run the place. You never have the least desire to leave Yama Farms Inn.

BRIDGES AT ANNUAL LYCEUM CONVENTION

President of Alkahest Lyceum System Goes to Chicago for Annual Meeting

S. Russell Bridges, president of the Alkahest Lyceum system, accompanied by Mrs. Bridges and a number of prominent southern Lyceum people, left Atlanta Saturday afternoon for Chicago to participate in the annual convention of the International Lyceum Association. This association, which is composed of a thousand or more of the best known Lyceum and chautauque societies and managers, will hold its meetings at the Auditorium hotel, September 15 to 18, inclusive.

In the early spring Mr. Bridges succeeded in getting this organization to agree provisionally to hold its convention in Atlanta, but it gradually developed that a great many of the artists would not be able to find the time and expense required to make the journey this far south, and it became necessary to change the place of the convention to a northern and central point. The International Lyceum organ has the following to say of Mr. Bridges in connection with this change:

"In this connection it is only fair to say that Mr. Russell Bridges fulfilled every promise made to the L. A. A. and did more than he promised to do. He secured a very acceptable railroad rate, the best rate that has been made to Atlanta within recent years. He secured the Atlanta Auditorium for our use and the cooperation of the newspapers of the city in advance publicity and made elaborate preparations for the convention. Our change of plan is a great disappointment not only to him, but to our entire loyal southern membership."

Instead of having the International Lyceum convention here, Mr. Bridges has made arrangements for a regular series of Alkahest Lyceum entertainments, for which tickets will go on sale September 29. The list of ten attractions will include LaFollette, William J. Burns, Helen Keller, Benjamin Chapin and some of the best musical organizations in the country.

ATLANTA IS ONE OF THE FEW CITIES in which a telephone can be maintained in your home for 8 1/2 cents a day.

Independent competition is the reason.

For this same reason Atlantians enjoy many other telephone advantages which have suffered serious decline in cities where a healthy competition has been eliminated.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

With the swimming days almost over the Capital City Country Club will still continue to be one of the most delightful meetings places for members and friends who love life to the open.

With a membership of over eight hundred the club has become one of the most popular of the south and the golf enthusiasts are looking forward to the completion of an extra hole which will make the course an eighteen-hole one with the kind of hazards which make the course links the most interesting in the world.

The new holes will be through some very pretty woodland towards Peachtree road and the side of Buckhree road and best of all, the start and finish will be at the club house.

Another feature of the club will be a drag hunt twice a week through the winter, commencing about the end of September.

The drags will be laid as usual and the farmers' hounds in the surrounding country will be lured to ride the hunts and permission will be asked of landowners to ride across their property.

The location of the Country Club is ideal for hunting, as the country is quite open with plenty of places to jump going towards Roswell and Norcross, and a different run can be had every week.

The drags will be laid so that young boys and girls can ride without jumping fences and with safety to themselves, and all will be welcome.

The drags will be laid as usual and the farmers' hounds in the surrounding country will be lured to ride the hunts and permission will be asked of landowners to ride across their property.

Horses for the hunts and riding lessons can be hired from the club stable, and riding lessons can be had around the club property any morning.

Another attraction that may be added to the club is a polo field and an outdoor show ring, that can be used for horse shows and a summer golf show. While Atlanta cannot boast of a polo team at present a belief has been made, and with a field and club house it is more than probable that within a year Atlanta would have a good team, as there are a number of men who are capable of making good players.

Among them are Mr. William McBurney, Mr. Lamar Hill, Mr. Marion Smith, Mr. Ray Dorsey, Mr. West Terhune, Mr. F. M. McConnel, Mr. J. J. Ragan, Mr. Winship Nunnally, Mr. Jackson Dick, Mr. Ralph Ragan, Mr. Earnest W. Draper, Mr. Clarence Knowles and Mr. R. S. Nash, to say nothing of the club's future in general, and being within half a mile of the main line of the Southern railway it is possible that in a short time a station will be built for members and property owners in the vicinity.

—Exquisite materials have been made by master artists into Hats which when correctly posed on the head will bring the exclamation: "Ah, that is Paris!"
—Among the Paris Hats we note original Models from Georgeite, Maison Lewis, Louise and Varon. Kurzman of New York is represented by half a dozen or more hats, as, too, is Joseph.
—We shall not attempt description. Who can really describe a beautiful Hat?
—Harmony, however, is the keynote. Harmony in line, color and trimmings. The hats are soft and light in weight. Simplicity rules. Velvets and plushes are the favored materials. Coars and Paradise feathers; Skunk and the new Fitch fur; and, metal French flowers lead in trimmings. Black and quiet rich colors have the call.
—The exhibit is the most important that has yet been made. The hats have been placed in a proper setting of "Palms and Beauties." We shall be very glad to have you see them.

Showing the Glorious New Silks

A Most Wonderful Exhibition of the World's Most Fashionable Fabric in Bewildering Variety

These silks are being used by the greatest Paris dressmakers, and they are so steeped with Eastern luxury, so colorful, that it thrills the heart to see them.
Paris is employing them for coats to wear with plain silk or lingerie gowns, for draped wraps, for linings, for artistic robes and negligees for trimmings, for blouses.
Many of them have been imported expressly for Rich's and can be seen only here in Atlanta. A brief review of the stock shows:
Printed Crepe de Chine—Cubist and Chinese art manifested in delicate colored flowers on a base of Russian green, blue, olive, rose and taupe 44-inch. $6.50 to $10.
Brocaded Crepe Matelasse—A heavy rich crepe deeply brocaded. Paris approval. In about every conceivable color, black and white. 43 inches. $6.50 to $10.
Plain Crepe de Chine—Upwards of one hundred pieces in colors, black and white. $1.50 and $1.75.
Faille Crepe—A heavy crepe weave with Faille front. Drapes delightfully, firm and serviceable. Colors, black and white. 43 inches. $2.50.
Other Crepe Weaves—Include Crepe Meteor, Canton Crepe, the new crinkled Plisse Crepe, etc. $2 to $5.
Brocaded satins—A rich satin handsomely brocaded. Navy, Copenhagen, pink, Kelly green, light blue and black. 26 inches. $1.75.
Charmeuse—An immense stock of this favored silk in black, white and all colors. 40 to 44 inches. $1.50 to $5.
Faille—This all silk faille will be in great demand for one-piece dresses and suits. Black and color. 36-inch $1.59.

Rich's Suit Store Is a Little Paris

Accurately Reflecting the Capital of Fashion, With Scores of Reproduced French Models

The art of costuming a woman rightly may be classed as one of the fine arts, and most skilled artists of today are the French people, who live among their museums, their galleries, and their traditions of beauty, with constant promptings to create new loveliness out of the old.
Our exclusive New York suppliers, such a star in the tailoring world, import Paris models, with full right to copy—and hundreds of the wonderful fashions are here for you to see and admire. These Paris-copied suits are priced from $29.75 to $90.
We also show, of course, extensive lines of suits—strictly of American origination—at $15, $19.75, $25 to $50.

New $1.50 to $2.50 Umbrellas at $1.15

The store that sells the most umbrellas in Atlanta is naturally favored when manufacturers have "plums" to distribute. Therefore, three hundred and ninety-seven (397) umbrellas are here to sell for $1.15 instead of their regular prices of $1.50, $2 and $2.50.
The covers are of union taffeta—a mixture of silk and linen or silk and cotton. Fast color black, will shed water like a duck's back. Handles are of natural wood, plain and carved; silver and gold-trimmed handles; some pearl inlaid, and some with silver or gold tops. 26-inch size. Shown and on sale tomorrow for the first time. $1.15.

THEATRE

Owen Davis' production, "A Man's Game," at the Lyric, with Etha Williams and Edwin Water-Usual Kinemacolor Moving Pictures at Grand-Jewell. Kelley and Company at Bijou in "Man of Mystery."

There are notable features on the bill of each vaudeville that will come to the Forsyth for the week starting with the matinee on Monday. There are several that have attracted real interest and attention in the principal cities and there are other acts that are going to be especially interesting and clever.

One of the headliners for the week will be the Brooks duo, the singing pair, who was identified so prominently with the original "Choctaw" roller production in New York. Miss Hunt was the bright star of the first company and her Broadway success was a genuine triumph. She was induced to reappear in vaudeville and is bringing a company of three other singers who have scored a tremendous success in "The Singing Coaches." The operetta has stood the test in New York and is one of the big hits in Miss Hunt's score "My Hero," which she helped so notably to make famous.

Another of the headliners will be the handsome and his company of four entertainers in a delightful comedy, "The German Soldier." There is not a better German comedian in the theatrical profession than Kelland. He made "The German" famous in the states, and his appearance in the vaudeville was a success in New York for a crowded house. He has had a success in vaudeville for two seasons presenting "Dinkelpops" Christmas and is now appearing in the Grand. The new playlet is declared will be a surprise from start to finish.

Another feature will be the homecoming of the most popular quartette that has ever been in New York. They are the Big City Four. These young men made their first appearance five years ago and scored a hit that has never been equaled. They are regular visitors for some time there but were missed when they went abroad. Now that they are home, they will appear at the Forsyth and their show, songs and quartette numbers will surely serve to make the show a great entertainment.

Still another feature will be Miss Beeson and her company in the intensely interesting dramatic sketch "The Man Who Wasn't There." Miss Beeson is one of the most distinguished actresses of the American stage. She is excellently supported in her act by two other very able vaudevillians. A novelty will be the appearance of Frank Ward and Lester Lewis and the Metropolitan dancers direct from the Metropolitan opera house in New York. There are two premier dancers and a solo act of pretty girls. The act is rated as a really excellent one.

It is also announced that the Lyric will have a new bill for the week, starting Monday, September 22. Miss Hunt has always been popular in Atlanta and will find a real success.

A sensation is promised by Edwin Williams, supported by Lydia Beeson and a company of four well known players as W. A. Whiting, Frank Jerome, Harry L. Dunnington, B. Wilson, William B. Harlan, O. M. Davis and others. "Owen Davis' remarkable new play, "A Man's Game," is the same excellent company that was instant approval last season when they received such high commendations from both press and theatergoers.

The New York Times-Democrat says: "A Man's Game," presented last night at the Lyric, was a production that pleased a large audience. The drama with situations so tense that a whiper would sound startlingly from the audience. The story, which is about a man and child so that they might roam the world and see the world. The scenes of the play are laid in the western town. According to the story, the boy left New York after his father had deserted him and their little life, and by paying strict attention to gambling and saloon business, he presently became a millionaire. "A Man's Game" is the story of a man who has a wife and child and is in a desperate condition at that time. His wife is in a political and an intoxicated condition at that time. The story is a political and an intoxicated condition at that time. The story is a political and an intoxicated condition at that time.

MME. BESSON IN "THE WOMAN WHO KNEW" AT THE FORSYTH

ANNA HELD COMING TO THE ATLANTA

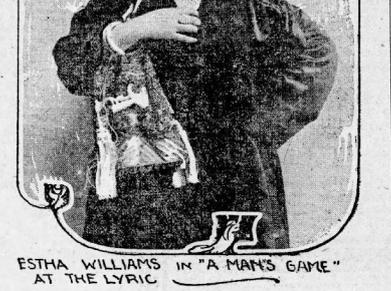

defective in New York, will be the offering of the Jewell Kelley company the coming week at the Bijou. This play is from the pen of Miss Stan, and it is said that in "The Man of Mystery" she has furnished more thrilling, more intense dramatic scenes and better comedy situations than in any of his other plays.

It is a story of crime, love, hate and revenge. In which the various scenes are worked out in a most realistic manner, and the finer life of Richard Glenwood, who is known amongst his folks as "the shadow," is told in a most interesting manner. Richard Glenwood is a hypnotist, who does not rob in the dark, but he puts his victim under a hypnotic state and afterwards robs him. The splendid work of Ned Keene, the detective, who is constantly on the trail of Richard Glenwood, adds an element of mystery and furnished an interesting detail of the story.

Act three takes place in the "Dewitt's Kitchen." It is a dark and stormy night. The gang arrives with Floe, in a hypnotic state; the shadow, Richard Glenwood, decides she shall be "the shadow," goes for Detective Keene. It is here that the work of one of the great city's band of criminals is shown. "The shadow" commands his henchmen to kill his sister, and in his own language, "I don't care whose sister she is, she has got to die." He woked intention in fact and he leaves the gang with instructions that he expects to find the girl dead when he returns. Detective Keene arrives disguised as an Italian. Floe is about to be thrown into the river which flows beneath the "Dewitt's Kitchen." Some throws off his disguise and tries to save Floe. The shadow appears and Keene is slugged and thrown into the river. Floe escapes to another part of the house with the gang in hot pursuit. At this moment Kate Burke appears. She throws a rope to Keene, who pulls himself out of the river just as the gang returns with Floe. There is a sensational fight. Keene overcomes his adversaries and holds them at bay with his pistols until the police enter.

Many Flowers Are Poisonous

(Family Doctor.)
Flowers of the season, white hydrangea and snowdrops, all possess a poisonous nature, so much indeed that to chew a small spray of one of the bulbs may result fatally, write the berries of the yew have killed many persons, and it is known commonly that it is not safe to eat many fresh pipes or cherry canes at once. The hollies are all dangerous. Lark's shoe pines in the same manner as does poplar. The bulbs some in red poppies do not matter, and the autumn crocus, if the blossoms are eaten, causes vomiting and purging. The leaves and flowers of the oleander are deadly, and the bark of the catalpa tree a very poisonous. The water hyacinth, when not in flower, resembles celery and is violent.

ETHA WILLIAMS IN "A MAN'S GAME" AT THE LYRIC

PROBLEM OF ETHICS IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK.—A peculiar problem in ethics was presented in West Thirty-ninth street a few mornings ago.

It was 3:20, by Daniel Monahan's watch, when he passed the door of No. 204. Mr. Monahan was on his way home. Where he had been is Mr. Monahan's own business and is not germane to this narrative.

A fresh breeze was blowing up from the North river and it whisked Mr. Monahan's hat off his head and carried it into an open window on the ground floor of No. 204, which is a theatrical boarding house.

Mr. Monahan pondered. He disliked extremely to abandon his perfectly good hat. A policeman stood at the corner. Mr. Monahan went to him and stated his case. The policeman suggested that he wait till morning and then call upon the inhabitants of the house and ask for his hat.

There's how much good a cop is in a real emergency. Just as useful to Mr. Monahan as a water plug.

Mr. Monahan went back to the house. As he stood gazing at the open window into which his chaparral had vanished, Thomas Democratic, aged fifteen, happened along. "Thomas was not going any place in particular," it appeared, and when Mr. Monahan offered him a dime to climb into that window and retrieve his summer kelly he joyously accepted the commission.

Two minutes later the cop heard a commotion which brought him to the run. Mr. Monahan was pounding on the front door with the lid of an ash can. Howls from within indicated that Thomas Democratic was being murdered.

The door was opened, revealing a great number of excited persons in incomplete attire. Among them, Terence Jolly, who had been sleeping in the parlor into which the blow and who had asked and assaulted Thomas Democratic under the impression that he was a burglar.

So everybody went to court. Mr. Monahan said he thought surely the room must be empty. Therefore it was all right to send Thomas Democratic into the window. Mr. Kelly said he was a sound sleeper and had not heard Mr. Monahan's knocking on the door. He did, however, feel Thomas Democratic paving his legs in a search for the straw hat and felt justified in grabbing Thomas quite roughly. Thomas said never again, for a dime.

The judge, after inspecting Mr. Monahan's initials in the hat and hearing of his having invoked the aid of the law in vain before resorting to Thomas, rendered a verdict of justifiable burglary on Mr. Monahan's part, and pardonable assault on Mr. Kelly's.

Mr. Kelly gave Thomas Democratic a quarrel and Mr. Monahan gave him ten cents, and Thomas will probably spend the next ten years of his life parading West Thirty-ninth street in the gray days, hoping for another job as straw hat retriever.

True Heroism

They had a bad fire in Chicago the other day.

It wasn't really a fire, but just a smudge. Smoldering flames under four buildings in a downtown block merely poured out smoke for more than twelve hours.

A fire chief leading his men into a basement was knocked unconscious by a falling door. A surgeon sewed up his head and he returned to the battle. Two hours later he fell to the pavement, asphyxiated, breaking open the wound. Then he was sent home against his protest.

"Turn on the lake!" was the order, and 1,000,000 gallons of water flooded the basements, while up through it bubbled the smoke and deadly fumes of the fire below.

On an average, a fireman was overcome every five minutes for more than twelve hours. There were 112 men at work. More than 150 times a fallen fireman was hauled from alley or basement or tunnel and revived by lung motor or oxygen tank.

When the fire was conquered there were forty-seven of them in the hospital and nearly all the rest had been taken home, half dead. Did anyone ever hear of such a percentage of casualties in battle?

They did all this just as their regular day's work.

And the fire fighters of Atlanta would have done the same thing and said just as little about it.

In fact, the Atlanta firemen have done such heroic and unselfish work time after time, going calmly into the smoking inferno of a factory, barn, apartment house or warehouse, falling at the front, and returning to the fight as soon as they could stand erect.

The spirit of all firemen seems the same. There are no "quitters" and it is not at all strange that a city's best heroes here is a fireman.

The Atlanta theaters will be dark this week, but beginning next week the season will be in full blast and some of the most notable productions of the past few years will be offered in quick succession. The big show will be "The Great Escape" and from this time to the end of the season there will come thick and heavy.

Next week will be given over to minstrelsy. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday Al G. Field will bring his band of minstrel kings to the Atlanta and that means four packed houses, as Field always sells out at each performance. This season his show is better than ever, having a number of new and strong features in addition to the favorites like Bert Swor and others who have scored so heavily in the past. His engagement dates are September 25, 26 and 27.

On Monday, September 22, Anna Held and the biggest organization now on the road will be seen in Atlanta and will perform. Miss Held has just returned from a tour of the history of her career. She has appeared only one month in Paris and one month in London. She will be surrounded by a great aggregation of players and her present tour will doubtless attract more attention than at any time in the history of her career.

Following the engagement of Miss Held the week will be given over to operetta, comedies by two of the most interesting and important companies on tour this season. First, Henry W. Savage will perform, "Little Boy Blue," on October 1, and second, a company of seventy people. A special orchestra of sixty-seven will play the music for the engagement.

On October 3 and 4, one of the most notable companies in the south this year will present Robin Hood, probably the best and most musical comic opera ever composed. The company which will be seen here for the first time has been playing in New York the past two weeks. Every member in New York was seen here during these two performances. The company carries twelve musicians and those with the Atlanta theater orchestra will make twenty musicians in the pit during the engagement.

Electric Chickens

LONDON.—A long succession of ingenious experiments have been recently made in the effect of electricity upon growth of plants and animals. It is now possible to say with some approach to confidence that startling results have been reached in one direction.

Beyond all question young poultry respond to electric stimulus, applied in a particular way, with astounding rapidity. They surpass the best on record in speed of growth at the time of year, they keep their health in crowded conditions and become almost independent of the season.

In the south of England, on the biggest poultry farm in the world, an excellent experiment has just been completed. Eight hundred chickens, in two equal groups of 400, were reared on the intensive system, that is in flats. Almost twice one above the other. One group of 400 were treated by the electric treatment, and as charged with the chickens with electricity that the chicks could be distinctly felt if the finger was put to the back of a chicken. The chickens in this 400 grew to a marketable size—that is, six "settled" positions—in five weeks, and of the 400 only 4, and these were weaklings in the beginning, died. Of the other 400 nearly half died, it being late in the year for healthy growth—and the survivors took three months to reach the marketable size.

The experiment followed other experiments in which similar though not so striking results were obtained. Trials on a yet larger scale are being prepared, and there is at any rate a reasonable hope that an instrument of real value in the intensive production of food has been found.

Funny Bunny and Laughing Lillian, Two Jolliest Movie Actors, Are King and Queen of Great Eastern Mardi Gras

Upon a great throne just completed in the center of Luna park at Coney Island, happy King John and beautiful Queen Lillian will be crowned Monday night at the Mardi Gras, the great island carnival!

King John's last name is Bunny. Queen Lillian's other name is Walker.

If you know, it is the fat and famous moving picture comedian whose smiling face is known to all picture-fans throughout the world.

She is the lovely leading woman whose dimples and golden hair are so often the subject of the "Vivian Gray" who could be more fit to rule a carnival of joy than fat and funny Bunny.

King John was raised in his new position of power and might by the business men of Coney Island. He innugrately chose Miss Walker as his consort for the week of festivity and fun.

Warmth of the Lily

PARIS.—Grassy meadows and green woods, says a well known French scientist, M. Dupont, "do not, contrary to the popular impression, impart a refreshing coolness to the general atmosphere." The vegetable kingdom, he declares, just like the animal kingdom, not only consumes but also emits heat.

From experiments made by M. Dupont and his colleagues, Longueville, a Russian scientist, it appears that as a general rule the sap of plants is about 1.5 degrees Fahrenheit higher in temperature than the surrounding air.

This is so in the case of the lily, whose temperature was secured by the electrical device placed in the stem near the base of the plant. It was near the flowers the difference was more marked, occasionally reaching as much as 4 degrees.

A Wise Way to Review a Real Difficulty

By Bishop W. A. Candler

President Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, has made a vigorous deliverance recently in favor of shortening the college courses.

In all this contention President Judson is right in the main. Many instances have contributed to bring to pass in this matter a bad state of things.

It does not seem altogether wise for the colleges to pursue the same process of funneling their students with all the facilities of new colleges have all fallen under this spell and all have elected a majority of their students who are not fit to attend college.

DANGER IN SCHOOL CUPS

SAYS GA. HEALTH BOARD

Field agents of the state board of health have reported to the board that there are a great many schools in which the children are allowed to drink out of a common dipper from an ordinary bucket.

This dangerous practice should be changed at once, according to a bulletin by the board. It is not only unsanitary to think about such child coming along and taking the saliva in his mouth that has been left on the dipper by the children who have drunk from it previously, but it can be seen readily how disease can be transmitted in this way.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

DRUMMERS HAPPIEST PEOPLE ON EARTH

Drummers Tells of the Joy and Sunshine Spread by Knights of Grip

White in Augusta was my pleasure to run in a bunch of traveling men who had come to the Atlanta Journal Firing Line.

There was Frank Teague, with the Morgan Hamilton company, of Nashville, Tenn. Everybody knows Frank Teague, especially the mill-hunting contractors, and they load him down with the largest orders.

Then there was Walter Vance, of Marietta, Ga. a man known all over Georgia, Florida and Alabama for his fine levitic traits of character, as neat and upright as they make 'em.

Mr. Vance, with the S. S. White Dental company, of Atlanta, a gentleman of pleasant address and speech refinement, sales business and goes it wherever he goes.

Last but not least, L. L. White, with the White Sewing Machine company, for me with the Standard, who sells more machines, perhaps, than any other one in the South. He knows how to get the orders, has a good word and is friendly with all whom he meets. Mr. White is some ventriloquist. Sitting together at a restaurant he gave up an imitation of the Scotch bag-pipe, much to the amusement of all the guests. Lovers were seen peeping between porters from adjoining rooms, the pretty girl cashier was smiling, and there was a happy mood. We passed out I thought drummers were the happiest people on earth, the friend and aid best.

A man's enemies are in his own heart. There are his limitations, his impotence, his hot haste, his desire to get out, his fear of being injured or deceived.

There is something heroic about the traveling man; he looks upon adversity as his friend, a quality with power that makes him proud, which gives dignity and strength, that men without this quality remember behind, rather than in the face of indifference. He believes in the brotherhood of man, that he can not injure another without injuring himself. He believes in smiling, and gestures to all, not in certain but in all, not to set up and to let, but there is plenty of kindness in his heart for all human beings.

It is possible, and I believe that he who reads a service to mankind will receive a service in return. Hate every word and revenge in his hearts of some prey prevent it for awhile, but every thing will be brought home to his door, for surely in this world there are enough good things to go around.

It is a man's work that counts, his leadership that we know and understand. We should never be ahead of ourselves, in front of dishonor and timely greetings that are worth all the money in the world.

Why should those with money become the gods of religion, the god of politics, the god of business, the god of war and the god of peace? Let us have a larger glimpse of a larger vision of life on this earth, and get close to the hearts of those we must live with and look more to the present than to the future for immediate business.

How can the world be Christianized without the brotherhood of man? The exchange of that fellow-feeling that enters the heart and makes us willing to know, understand and appreciate the people around us.

The T. C. Miller, stands for all this, which is justice, plain, simple justice. Filled with genuine love for right, and right I have found the traveling men more than 90 per cent of the time.

Robinson Salesman Convinces Him of Atlanta's Superiority—Becomes Patron

His store is at Rome, Ga., and the credit for bringing him up with the wholesale market of the City of Georgia goes to Chris Irby, of the A. M. Robinson company, who accomplished this result through his convincing talk of the merits of the Atlanta made Aragon brand goods.

To be accurate, Chris Irby's sales talk started him on the path of Atlanta buying and the quality of the Atlanta goods have held him, according to Mr. Miller himself.

Mr. Miller established his tailoring and furnishing goods business at Rome about three years ago, and in regard now as one of the most active and enterprising young merchants of the town.

TRAVELER TELLS OF ACCOMMODATING HOTEL

Cites Instance of Proprietor Who Went Out of Way to Be Helpful

Editor Firing Line:

We can't help but notice and appreciate a good, clean, accommodating hotel, for instance, the Putnam hotel at Easton, F. W. Dozier, proprietor.

A friend of mine, Outlaw by name, traveling out of Macon, had his express check sent to Easton, care Putnam hotel. He had to leave before it arrived, and instructed Mr. Dozier to forward his mail to Atlanta, when the mail arrived and Mr. Dozier was opening his mail to Atlanta, through mistake, and in doing so he cut Outlaw's check to zero. He immediately went to the bank and bought New York exchange for the amount and mailed it to Outlaw under a special delivery stamp.

"That was clever, wasn't it? Yes, accommodating! I've known Mr. Dozier to take chances in lending the traveling men money, accommodating in this way also.

Besides this favor of this kind, he's always looking after their comfort when in Easton. Then with all of this he runs a "damned" hotel—the only one there, too; something that most proprietors don't do, especially if they have a monopoly.

Glad to say the Nalm's hotel at Griffin, C. H. Waddell, proprietor, has their old value of $2 on. Everybody knows the reputation of the popular place.

This $2 rate became effective Monday, August 11, and you won't find a cleaner place in that part of the state.

Yours very truly,
"ST. CHARLES,"
Macon, Ga., Sept. 4.

TRAMPS CAN SMELL A BAKERY FOR HALF MILE

Manager Tells of Visits of Weary Willies Drawn by Savory Odors

There are evidently few tramps honoring Atlanta with a stopover just now, according to Morris Shrochl, manager of the Atlanta Baking company, who says one has not appeared at their door for over a week, something quite unusual.

Mr. Shrochl believes that the average tramp can smell a bakery a half mile in support of this he advances the information that since his company has moved to their present Mangum street address, a quarter to half mile from that stretch of the railroad yards which is the hoboes' terminal station, there has been an average of two to three calls a day of the kind of the open road type.

There have been no mysterious symbols chalked up on the doorway as there should be according to all stories of the customs of the weary willies, but if any of them did mark the place it would be to invite and not to warn for Mr. Shrochl does not turn them down, though he is not operating a "bread line."

P'POOL RETURNS FROM EXTENSIVE TRIP EAST

Omer P'Pool, manager of the collection department of Thomas and Westbrook, attorneys of Atlanta, has returned to Atlanta after five weeks' trip in the interest of his firm to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. While he was away he attended the meeting of the Commercial Law League at Cape May, N. J. "I found that collections were a bit slow in the east," said Mr. P'Pool, "due to the fact that the business there was waiting somewhat on the settlement of the tariff. Now that this is over the effect is already being felt. The moving cotton is bringing in collections already in the south and a fall of property seems to be in hand."

WHEN this "half-way" month of September, which is neither summer nor fall, has come way to October, and the leaves have begun to turn and the air has grown fine and bracing, can there be any greater pleasure than motor-cycling over smooth roads into the suburbs and the country? ...

larger in Atlanta than in any other southern city. Because of its nearness to various resorts and because of its excellent roadways, Savannah has taken a greater interest in motorcycles than any other city of its size in the United States. But the interest felt here is almost as keen and during this fall when fall has begun and the days and winter will increase. Among the smoothest of all roadways stretch through Fulton county, and among the most pleasant of all States.

Find an Abandoned Mine and Work It.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

Copyright 1913: By Herbert Kaufman.

An American engineer has just discovered a Mexican City the streets of which are actually paved with gold.

Time was when the neighboring hills were assiduously mined. Aztec and Spaniard in turn dug into the rich rock and tore fortunes from the glittering quartz.

As tunnel after tunnel ran its tortuous course through the mountains and ton by ton the treasure was reft from its concealment, the diggings were gradually abandoned, and at last men declared that the mines had "petered out."

Meanwhile the towns-folk had strewn their streets with the tailings of the primitive smelters and built their dobe houses from the refuse-laden clay.

Where once fortune strode and strewed glittering benisons poverty stalked with her cronies, gloom and melancholy.

Want succeeded plenty; the prosperous few deserted the village and only the peon and the faithful padres were left behind.

Here where insolent caballeros and proud hidalgos formerly galloped on blooded barbs the half-breed was left to ride by upon his miserable burro and the wheedling lamentations of tattered mendicants advertised the utter destitution of the community.

Then came science of the searching eye, "and over night a miracle was wrought."

Fabulous wealth was suddenly disclosed in the crumbling bricks of wretched hovels. The moldering walls of abandoned gardens—even the weed-grown slag heaps produced as much as five hundred dollars of gold to the ton, when modern chemistry subjected them to advanced methods of reduction and refinement.

Thus does opportunity reveal herself. Never are her resources exhausted. There is no bound to her bounties. But they are not for the hopeless, the unseeing or the quitter.

They who do not search seldom find.

The incurious mind can never recognize fortune. Every road to everywhere is "paved with gold."

But men who cling to obsolete tools and rules and who estimate the possibilities of tomorrow with the education and view points of yesterday, are doomed to penury and failure.

Knowledge rules the twentieth century.

The lords of the earth are no longer the happy-go-lucky adventurers nor the strong-armed dolts.

The thinker is universally in command. But unapplied knowledge is as useless as any other unharnessed force.

Even Niagara advertised its potentialities for uncalculated ages.

Since the first human looked upon the spuming force that today lights a billion lamps and turns a million wheels, there has lurked in the waterfall as much potency as in 1913.

Myriads of men heard the crash of the torrent and watched the titanic rush of her waters, before there came one with sufficient imagination to visualize the stream of gold always pouring over her brink, and with sufficient doggedness to transmute his dream into a reality.

There's always a chance to make good. There's always a "mine" which incompetence has abandoned, because the "ore" has "petered out."

And always there will follow in the footsteps of the inefficient, and careless, and ignorant, and dull-brained a keener-witted and hope-guided newcomer who will extract prosperity from "abandoned opportunities."

Every business, every profession is susceptible to betterment. The best information of the past is crude and inexact, when measured by the standards of the present.

If you possess real ability you don't have to stir a mile from home to prove it.

Gripping Story Told In Two Words

INDIANAPOLIS.—The happy ending of a fiction-like story of separated parents and lost children, of a husband's curious revenge and a woman's long mental torture and grief, came when a telegram was sent Monday to Mrs. William Nelson at Viola, Mich. Besides the signature of her second husband, William Nelson, it contained only two words—Viola, Ind. But these two words, ordinarily to be construed to mean a mere expression of laughter or derision, had big news for her. They told her that a nine years search for her two sons, taken from her when they were kids, and now robust youths of seventeen and nineteen, on whom her eyes have not rested in all that time, and of whose whereabouts she has not known in that period, had been found. It was the code by which Nelson was to give his wife, by wire, the information that the boys had been found, if such good fortune should attend this last of many hunts for the lads. Again and again Nelson in the last eight years since his marriage left the home of himself and wife in Viola to go to distant towns to run the mines that kept his wife to helplessness.

But his unsuccessful returns always plunged the woman into such grief that, on this last occasion, he had kept the purpose of his leaving home secret, so that the message of two brief syllables intensified the husband's joy by counting as a complete surprise. Mrs. Nelson's first husband was Frank Bebe, of Kansas City, Kan. They were divorced in 1904. Bebe took their three boys and was apparently determined, in his anger, that he would separate them from their mother forever. There were three boys, but the eldest son was found a year ago in a Kansas town, where he, having come to manhood, was doing well as the proprietor of a grocery store. There was an affectionate reunion between himself and his mother, and he has since corresponded with her regarding the probable whereabouts of his two brothers. Bebe, having left the eldest boy with a family in Kansas, took the younger lads, Ralph and Ben, to Indianapolis. It took only a few days ago for a clue to this movement of the father to come to Nelson, the source of which he withheld.

HOW HE FOUND THE BOYS. "My wife," he said last night, "became more and more discontent, as time passed when she could not find increased her. The passing of years only deepened her. Her disapproval and disapproval were so pitiable when I would go off to follow a clue and return to report failure that this time I invented a story of a business trip to Illinois. "I had the assistance of Serg. Hagerman of the police force here, and other sources of information had been exhausted, was urged, as a last resort, to the Indianapolis office. He had found that the boys had been taken there. Their father had told the authorities of the home that their mother was dead.

"A YOUNG GIRL MAY BE A PRIMA DONNA IF-- SHE GIVES UP SOCIETY, FRIENDS, ALL--AND WORKS EARLY AND LATE"

SAYS

Rose Ewell

TO BE a grand opera prima donna is perhaps the highest artistic goal to which a girl can aspire. But the road to it is strewn with more disappointments, tragedies, broken hearts and wasted lives than the way to feminine fame and fortune by any other route. I am going to try and tell these girls who are wondering how they will begin on this rock road just what they will have to do to succeed as I have done.

First they will have to give up everything—society, friends, sweethearts—perhaps even family for the attainment of the coveted end. They will have to wait success as a singer so much that everything else is secondary to this want. They will have to meet endless work with pleasure and disappointment with a smile. But I believe that given a basis of a voice and a determination to succeed a girl can reach the place of prima donna of a first class grand opera company in ten years as I did if she will work for it.

to learn how to sing—most of the places abroad where they claim to fit you for the grand opera stage are ruled by "grat," and they will take your money and return you nothing but disappointed hopes. A girl of eighteen, and this is the time when the future prima donna should begin to cultivate her voice, should be careful in her selection of a teacher, but, having selected him, she should stick to his methods. You will only ruin your voice by running around to different teachers, even if they are all good ones. Some of our greatest teachers have family methods,—and, while their pupils have been successful in spite of it, it is better to start right. If your teacher has the right method, the first thing he will teach you is to allow your lower jaw to relax. Whether you are singing a simple lyric or passionate aria—you must always let your lower jaw sag as though it had no interest in the operation. Next he will say to you, "You can not sing with a humpy tongue." Then you will probably be told to "open your mouth and let the sound out." I heard a girl singing, however, in Paris who had been paid twenty dollars a lesson who sang through her teeth. I think she had paid her money for nothing. You must sing from the diaphragm, "feel" your notes beating against the walls and when you wish to sing a high tone think of it resting on the top of your chest. (You can get it off quite easily.) The ability to sing is like the feeling which makes you know the value of every word that issues from your mouth. Last of all, be natural. Don't try to put on airs when singing, for here is where simplicity counts for more than anything else. But, above all, work at your voice. Even today when I have reached the coveted place of prima donna I work from five to seven hours a day, which any one can do, you must think. If you wish to make your voice carry, even when singing, a soft, low tone, you must think you are singing through a funnel, a small megaphone, you must think a smile into your music. Emmy Destinn would be more wonderful than she if she would only smile once in a while. You must think of the meaning of your songs. Good singing means more than good tone. It means a power of imagination and the feeling which makes you know the value of every word that issues from your mouth. Last of all, be natural. Don't try to put on airs when singing, for here

Do We Need Virtue Prizes Like Rosieres Which Paris Yearly Gives?

PARIS—Are we to have girlish virtue prizes? Let us say $700 just for being good? Last Sunday, in France, two automobile parades, conducted by two American millionaires, saw a girl crowned with white roses and handed a bag of $500 in gold pieces, in Roure-la-Reine.

And the two American millionaires were so impressed by what they saw that they said: "We must introduce this in America."

Should we have Rosieres? If the plan which I hear discussed in Paris become realized a great city of Colorado and a small town of Ohio ought to be among the first to run excursion trains to see a white-rose crowning.

Crowning for what? Just for goodness, patience, courage, labor, modest piety and gentleness to little ones? Is it worth $500? The French think so. And the two American millionaires—whose names must not be mentioned until they are ready to make their announcement—think so also.

It was a poor landlady girl, Mile. Eugene Picq, a blanchisseuse de lin, like Trilby, one of those who do up fine lace, batiste, linen, flimsy embroideries, the lingerie of buds and brides and big department stores, and rich men's linen saphy shirts. All day she labors with the wash tub, starching pot and hot iron. She is twenty-four years old. When she was eighteen she was engaged to a husky chauffeur, owing his port; and she had a marriage portion of $100 from a deceased aunt. Three weeks before her wedding the sheriff threatened to levy on her father for debts incurred in running a strawberry plantation that failed. And Eugene handed over her $400 to the sheriff. That is all. Her marriage was put off. The public spirit, Philanthropic heart, of Eugene Picq, said: "We'll just wait a bit, Genie." They had waited six years and were to be married surely, when his automobile went into collision, unsmiled, and smashed the left forearm, leg and arm and collar bone. Eugene had $700 savings—not enough to see a husky chauffeur, owing his port; and she had a marriage portion of $100 from a deceased aunt. OPEN SEASON FOR OYSTERS

Joseph A. Jones, who has devoted his life to opening oysters.

The delectable season of "R" has begun, and during the months which follow from now until May, Bluepoint, Rockaways, Shrewsbury and all that other delightful coast will add to life's pleasures.

At the Hotel Ansley in Joseph A. Jones, who has devoted his life to opening oysters.

When a few days ago the first round barrel of mollusks arrived, he broke into tears.

"Life," he said, "now has the sweetness of the rose, and the flavor of fresh lobster polette."

So it was that each of the oysters exclaimed, except that each expressed his emotion individually. Magnolians used spaghetti in their smiles, Germans mentioned the blues and the one Bulgarian spoke of sour milk.

But everyone mentioned the blues and the one Bulgarian spoke of sour milk.

up well without boiling, strain it over the poached oysters; add some sliced mushrooms. Serve in a chafin dish."

A COMPANION DELIGHT.
"Oysters Waldorf—Prepare the same as in 'Oysters Poquette'; except add some oyster crabs fried in butter and some cooked celery cut into small julienne, well seasoned and fried in butter. Mix all well together; season to taste and serve in a chafin dish."

Baked Oysters, modern style.— Fry four finely chopped shakers in butter to a nice color; moisten with a little sherry wine; put in one dozen oysters (Cottuis); season with salt and cayenne pepper, and poach. When done, sprinkle with chopped parsley; add two tablespoonfuls of cream sauce and one dozen finely chopped mushrooms; pour the oysters on a buttered gratin dish; be-sprinkle with bread crumbs and melted butter, and bake in a hot oven to a fine color."

Fried Oysters, American style.— Drain a dozen medium sized oysters (Cottuis); season with salt and pepper; roll them in cracker meal; dip them in a batter made of two eggs mixed with a teaspoonful of Ene-bell's sauce and two tablespoonfuls of oyster liquor; after-

FRIED OYSTERS.
"Fried Oysters, Boston style.— Drain one dozen large oysters; season with salt and pepper; roll them in fine bread crumbs and fry in a dry pan with clarified butter. When done, serve them on a platter covered with a reduced tomato sauce."

Oysters Stuffed, Princess style.— Blanch one dozen large oysters; split them through the center; stuff the inside with a preparation of finely chopped lobster, mushrooms and truffles, mix with a little Bechamel sauce and chopped parsley reduced until thick; season to taste. Lay the two half oysters together; lay each oyster on the deep oyster shell; have each buttered lightly; cover each oyster with a well seasoned sauce and bake to a nice color."

Oyster Fritters, Bonne Femme.— Chop up one dozen large oysters; put them into a bowl; season with salt and pepper; add one tablespoonful of flour and one tablespoonful of fresh bread crumbs, the yolk of one raw egg, a little chopped chives, two slices of chopped bacon fried in butter, a coffee-spoonful of baking powder; mix all well together, then take the preparation with a tablespoonful of oil or clarified butter. Fry to a nice color. When done dress the

PREFERRABLE OYSTERS.
Bluepoint, Rockaway, Cottuis, Shrewsbury, Lynnhaven, Cape Cod, York Rivers, Virginia Primes are the sorts to which Atlanta tastes most kindly.

But in reality, says one of the oystermen, not Joseph A. Jones, but almost equally well known, in reality, Sherry's and the Waldorf take all but a very small part of the Bluepoint. And yet, there is no place where Bluepoint can be bought in unlimited number. They are like the Yucata-Azajo tobacco in Cuba. Hardly more than enough of this rarity is grown to supply the European crowned heads and the American prima donnas. Nevertheless, like Bluepoint, it is to be bought everywhere.

But, be that as it may, the best products of the oyster beds will be served here during this winter, and undoubtedly the most delectable recipe will be used for their garnishing.

And, as you well know, the preparation of the oyster is the art of the service as the savor of the meat.

TWENTY-TWO MILE SWIM IS MADE BY COMMODORE BROWN

BY ROYAL DANIEL, JR.
The swim from New York City, twenty-two miles, to Sandy Hook, which has baffled hundreds of famous swimmers, who declared it a human impossibility, has at last been accomplished.

By winning the hard fight against wind, tide and wave, after remaining in the water for thirteen hours and thirty-eight minutes, Alfred E. Brown, a commodore of the American Life Saving society, now holds the championship for long distance swimming in the country. The victory, he recently won has for years been the ambition of not only American swimmers, but experts from all parts of the world.

It is interesting to note that Captain Dan Webb, who in 1875 crossed the English channel, and who later made his life in an attempt to swim the Niagara rapids, failed six miles from the finish in the Hook swim.

It is not the distance, twenty-two miles from Battery Park, the extreme southern end of Manhattan Island, to Sandy Hook, that frustrates swimmers, but the fight against adverse tides and choppy water.

Captain Brown has made no less than three attempts, all of which ended in failure, before he succeeded on the fourth. His victory was the old saying, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!" It was his never-give-up spirit, backed by physical power and speed, that won the swim said to be impossible.

His performances show that speed is essential as endurance to make the trip.

Henry "Buster" Ellensky, a young giant of New London, Conn., came there this before Captain Brown's successful attempt.

Ellensky was considered the most promising of all the "high hopes" he possessed. His supernatural power in his 250 pounds of muscles, but lacked the necessary speed. He deserved the title of "Young Giant" in every respect.

It is predicted that had Ellensky encountered a calm sea he would have won his recent attempt. As it was, a choppy sea in the teeth of a high east wind, came within 300 yards of his goal. So rough was the sea that those who were following the swimmer in a rowboat were made so seasick they were forced to abandon their craft and seek only nourishment being a slice of stale bread.

One consolation for the plucky, now that Captain Brown has virtually blindfolded him, is that Ellensky remained in the water for fifteen hours and thirty-eight minutes, his only nourishment being a slice of stale bread.

Unlike other swimmers, Ellensky planned to make the trip in two tides. Diving from the Battery sea wall he made Swinburne island out the first tide. Then in the shelter of the island, paddled for six hours until a shift of wind put the current in his favor again.

For the last three miles of the swim Ellensky was virtually blind, his head under water, depending on his followers' shouts for guidance. Aside from his eyes, he was hit affected by his remarkable exertions. His most notable feat, however, is swimming with both hands set channel, William Thomas Burgess, an Englishman, is the only person to accomplish that feat since Captain Webb's successful trip thirty-eight years ago. The swim from Battery Park to Sandy Hook made by Captain Brown puts the American life-saver in a class with Captain Webb.

Of all attempts, Captain Brown's exhibition is the most remarkable, had he not been victorious. An incident that shows how courageous a spirit the life-saver possesses was shown just at the start.

Marie Dressler's Epigrams On Exclusive Newport

BY MARY ISABEL BRUSH.
WHY does the undercurrent pull so hard in Bailey's Beach at Newport?" asked Marie Dressler.

"Because the ocean is eager to get back into the water; it doesn't like the town," it replied.

"Neither do I!" exclaimed Miss Dressler. "I got just that way when I came to this, the world's most fashionable summer resort," she continued.

"I wanted to pull out again and let my little $2,000 contract go."

"Fashionableness is delinquent. Newport is the home of fashion. You can fish out the conclusion for yourself."

"It is one other thing besides fashionable—expensive. I paid $14 a day for room and board and had to sign extra for the ice tea on account of the lemon!"

"At that rate what would a taxi come to by the hour?"

"At that rate what would a taxi come to by the hour? Because they have none of the minor luxuries at Newport."

"If you want to drive from your boarding house down the back way to your stage entrance, you get a sixty-double-barreled touring car with a driver and a footman in his livery."

"I couldn't afford to take a maid to Newport, but I engaged one by post, a native, and I asked her to few desultory questions regarding her character and standing.

"My husband," she said, "is the first citizen of Newport. He chimes the bells at Trinity, and they say he is the best whitewasher on the island."

"When I went to Mr. Plisk's said to her: 'See here, your supremacy is gone.' Then I told her the story. It was just before her Mother Goose costume ball, which was the most fashionable event of the Newport season, and she, who is one of the new Newport women with a sense of humor, said: 'I'll hand over my scepter immediately!'"

"I know Mrs. Herriman Oelrichs and that she is a fine woman. She is attractive and so is her home. She is also interesting. But as for most of the people there are as tiresome as the Ocean Drive, which I couldn't wait to see. My husband and I grabbed a machine when we had been there an hour and started out for the drive I had heard so much about. Well, if you want to have my ideas about it, I wouldn't live on it if you'd give me the drive."

"My only notion of a pretty place is where there is scenery. On the famous Ocean Drive you go for a mile and you come to a tree. Then you see another mile and come to a clump of hedge or any overgrown weed. In between these is just one continuous, monotonous roll of ocean."

"I don't know anything about variety, but you want to keep away from Newport, fashion and not enough nature; too much cult, and not enough naturalness; too much society and not enough neighborhood."

"If you want to know who sat next to you at dinner on the evening previous and who is entertaining at luncheon on the day following, why, there is the place for you."

"These wives of America's multi-millionaires spend all their time talking shop. Their business is entertaining and when they get up a function they talk about all the other functions while it is going on, and later it makes accumulation of one additional subject for the next function which will be as much like it as a carbon copy."

"They never get excited over anything."

"The proper stain is to keep unexcited and to pretend that you are all tussled up."

"We were out whizzing along in the machine one afternoon and we heard loud shouting."

"Here! I'm the stuff that has stirred them up," said I. "They're giving me an ovation." We slowed down. I thought I would express my appreciation, but when we turned to look around we found that they were kindly informing me that a wheel was coming off of our machine. I appreciated the courtesy from those excited spectators, but they never concern themselves with the misfortune of any one outside their set. It was a great condescension."

the launch which was to follow Captain Brown in some way did not appear at the appointed time. If he waited the tides might turn. Without a word the plucky swimmer leaped off the sea wall and with a powerful overhead stroke started the grind alone! He had gone eight miles when sighted by the launch.

Captain Brown needed little encouragement. From time to time his companion would jump from the boat and swim with him, but he showed such determination that his coaches left him very much alone.

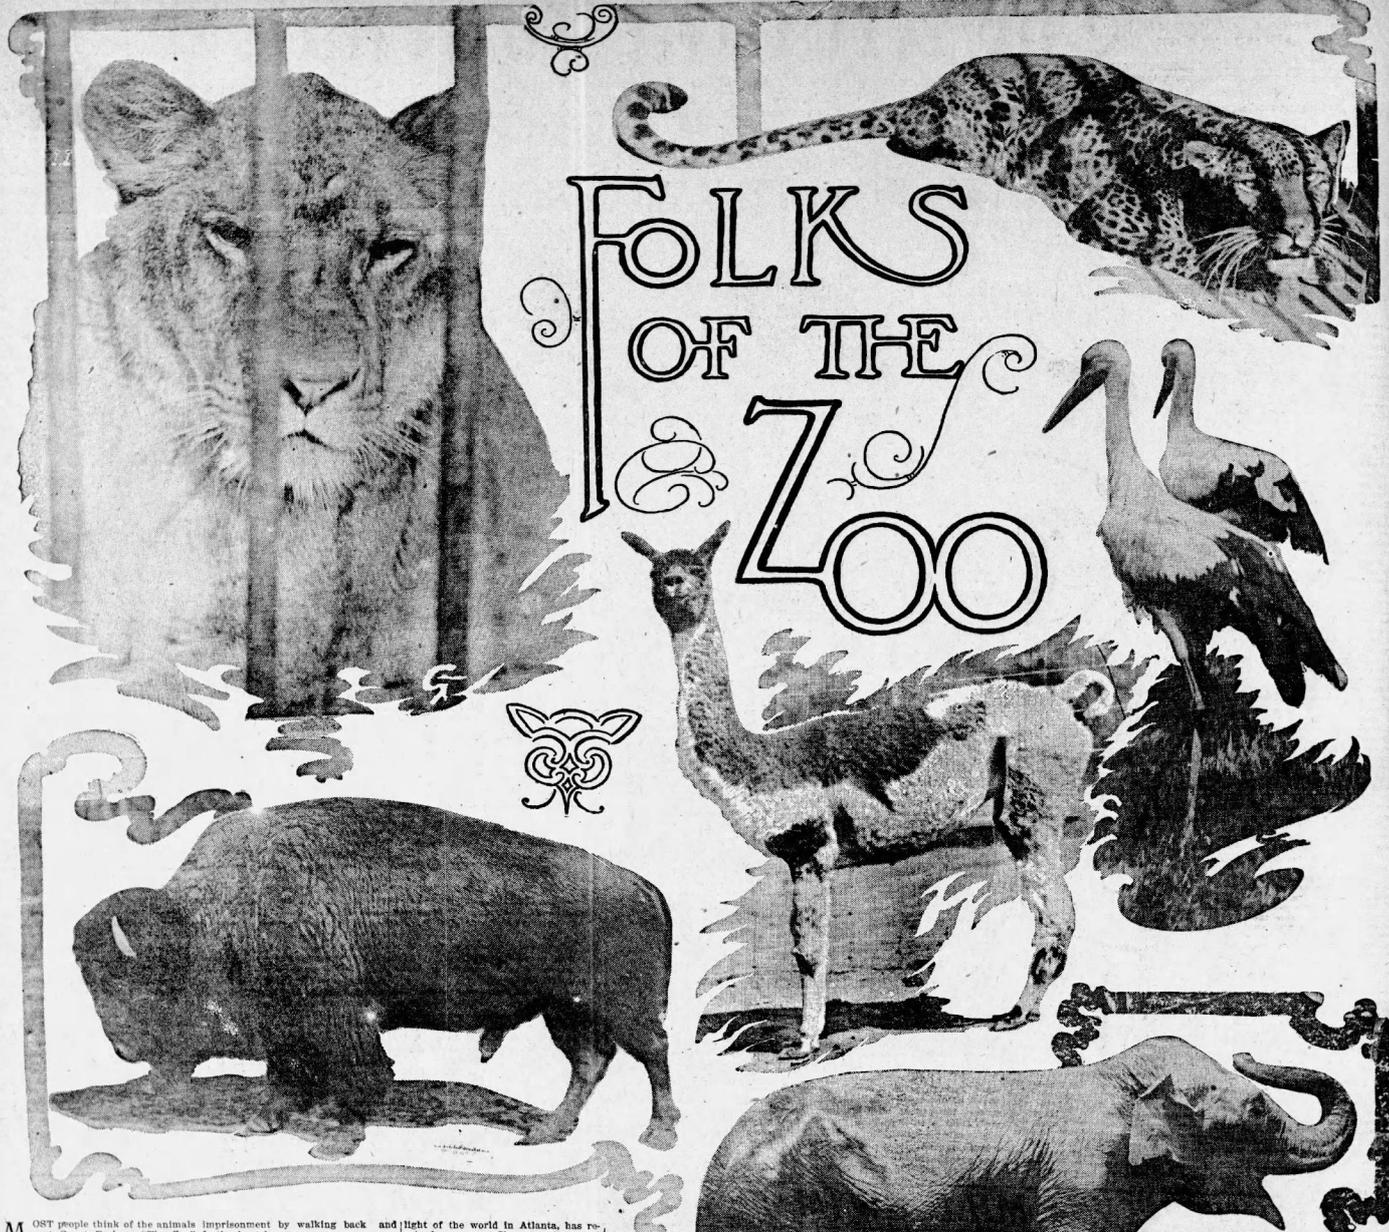

During the long grind, Captain Brown ate three sandwiches and drank a bottle of tea. This is the only nourishment he had while in the water.

Toward the end of his journey the overhead stroke became slower and slower. The expression on the face of the swimmer showed the strain, but he was making every effort and throwing every ounce of strength into his arms.

"Well done," soon gave him new life. United States marines from the fort on Sandy Hook told Captain Brown how close he had been to a school of man-eating sharks near the end of his journey. Their tale only brought a "I'm not afraid of 'em."

"I thought I would never get here. It was the worst tide yet, but I finished strong. Sleep! I haven't been to bed yet. The people down here have treated me great and I'm going to stay here all night."

"Asked if he intended to repeat his trip, Captain Brown said: "I certainly never expect to try the trip again. I have made it once, so there wouldn't be any use."

FOLKS OF THE ZOO

MOST people think of the animals at Grant Park as "The Zoo" and many can't tell one leopard from another, and wouldn't know a lion cub from a dog. They miss lots of fun by not becoming acquainted with the personalities of the beasts.

One or two mornings spent in the sunshine outside the cages will reward the spectator with many queer little happenings if he is a close observer, and if the keeper happens to know him, he may even secure the privilege of playing with a young lion.

It is well in the latter case to make sure first that Prince has taken a fancy to you. Otherwise he may try his teeth on you. But all things considered, Prince is a friendly little tiger, and, aside from wanting to sharpen his teeth on your ankle bone, he will do no harm.

He really does not seem to be unpleasant either in this amiable matter. He is merely following custom, for Keeper Boyd let Prince use his shoes as a baby ring on which to rest his teeth, and Prince thinks that all ankles were meant for the same purpose.

Prince is a waddlesome piece of vegetation. When he is in the cage he thinks that he wants to be out in the grass; and when he is in the grass he finds so many things to frighten him, he hops to be put back in the cage.

The other morning, the sacred cow of India became unduly curious about Prince, when the cub was playing on the grass with a visitor. Mrs. Cow stuck her nose through the fence, sniffed the cub and blew her breath disdainfully and derisively through her nostrils. It scared Prince so that he jumped and rolled down the embankment, and his fat, rotund stomach was "strangled" for some time.

Prince has a sister, Queen, and both were mothered by Sultana, the royal-looking lioness who protests against imprisonment by walking back and forth about her cage.

Sultana, lean and powerful, has a pair of wonderful eyes, amber colored, translucent and of great depth. She uses them well, and knows how to pretend friendliness.

"And there is always some fool person who has an unshakable conviction that he has the gift to go up to wild animals and scratch them on the nose," said one of the keepers.

And Sultana "just lays" for that kind. By a deceptive mildness and a good natured smile, she lures them to put forth a tempting hand close to the bars; and then, quick as lightning, she makes a grab for the arm. She almost tore one man's hand off a few days ago.

When her baby, Prince, is paraded before the cage, she becomes quite restless, pacing to and fro with eyes fixed on the fat little cub in the arm of strappers. She looks wicked and anxious, but the keeper insists that it is not maternal love that prompts the display. She would kill him, if I gave Prince to her," said the keeper.

"Babe" is another one of the Zoo family who always evokes the greatest admiration, but seven years of Oba and Abs have not reconciled the big striped monarch to his captivity.

Babe is a Malay tiger, one of the hardest to handle in captivity; and he has a continual grinch. Nothing even breaks through his pessimism, and, as the picture shows, he wears always a disgruntled, injured expression on his face. Babe's grinch extends to everybody, and everybody who goes near him, save to attend to his wants has to be careful. Most of the time, Babe lies sprawled out in the sand, never deigning to glance toward the crowds that stand outside his cage and look him over from ear to tip of tail "just as though I were a common pig," the big tiger's attitude seems to say.

The baby llama who first saw the light of the world in Atlanta, has received a name. She was christened Thursday, and the important names of Sarah was awarded to her. Sarah means "rebellious princess," and while the llama is not exactly rebellious, she is certainly haughty in her ways.

Maudie, the elephant, is getting discouraged, poor thing. Looking forward to about sixty more years of captivity, the big old elephant has started to pondering on the question which has so often confronted those in hard luck, "cut bone," to what end? Maudie is especially morose when all her pleadings for peanuts are denied. Her trunk has become the embodiment of perpetual motion and her appetite argues an infinite capacity for food.

The storks, being professional birds, and not caring for advertisement, declined to be interviewed. They maintained a dignified reserve; and when pressed too hard to answer questions, moved off in a stately and slow stride.

Dewey, the friendly looking leopard, sprang out in the upper right hand corner, is the adventurous spirit of the Zoo. He once escaped from his cage, and only in the deep silence will he relate his adventures. Of course, he says, he never would have returned to captivity if it had not been for the fact that he could not bear to hurt Keeper Boyd, who has looked after him so well.

Dewey got out of his cage about Christmas time, but was captured near the lake after a quick chase on the keeper's part.

He is inclined to be friendly at times, but he gets disgruntled now and then.

None of the other leopards is quite friendly, and will allow herself to be stroked by some of the keepers.

"But for goodness' sake make it clear that Nell objects to indiscriminate petting," urged the keeper, "because if you do not, everybody that goes along will be trying to stick their hands in the cage."

Such machines are usually capable of a speed of from two to forty-five miles an hour, and can carry a weight of 1,000 pounds. A Premier's Third Duel VIENNA.—The Hungarian Premier, Count Tisza, fought a third duel recently with the Marquis George Pallavicini. The duel arose out of a speech by the marquis, who threw suspicion on the premier of having influenced a witness in the recent Lukacs libel suit.

The duel was with swords. Both the premier and the marquis are renowned skirmishers. After the ninth assault both received slight injuries, and the fight was stopped. The adversaries were reconciled. This was the third duel that the Hungarian premier has fought this year.

They have received a number of inquiries this year from women as to the safety of the little cars you are not bouncied in the air, and after an hour's riding you feel like a new person. In other cities in other sections, women have taken to motorcycle riding with the same enthusiasm as men. They have found that such a ride is a healthful and pleasant means of economizing in time. I expect that from 25 to 30 Atlanta women will be riding motorcycles alone, just as they once did believe that before the end of the year. BELTED SUITS FOR THE YOUNGER GIRL

French Fashion Notes

How difficult it sometimes is to find for the girl from 16 to 18 a style that is neither too grown-up nor too obviously childish is attested by the young lady's resentment. The French miss, however, seems to have solved the problem by wearing suits closely resembling her mother's in cut, but modified by a little belt, and a belted coat rarely fails to present a pleasingly youthful line.

Most of the misses' suits have the blouse shoulder line with the inset sleeves. Coats for both girls and their mothers are decidedly longer and are almost invariably cutaway. With the belted suits comes a very young girl's vest, and even of the chic little vest effects, but without the belt to break the line of the waist the vest would be too grown-up.

The Model frill is still holding its own and will be seen standing bravely, and crisply above coat collars for fall and winter. With the low-cut vests and chemises will be worn. Odd buttons will line the coats, some very costly and elaborate. Especially attractive are the skirts for tall women and girls. The skirt line is broken in various ways by bands of embroidery, lace, beaded trimmings and overcast effects, sometimes in two and oftentimes in three places. The petite figures must, of course, be content with skirts of more simple lines.

Any of these four belted suit styles can be made by the home dressmaker. They are sufficiently simple in line to be executed by the home artist, and we have that little air of chic so dear to the French heart. The model with the modified Russian blouse, with the large patch pockets, is of almost-imitation materials, and the stitching is used as a trimming along the edge of the collar, down the front and about the bottom of the coat. There is a row of stitching on the pocket, one row above each cut and a line of the same down the right side front of the straight skirt. It will be noticed that all the waist lines of the belted suits here shown are high, another feature always suggestive and youthful. The buttons on the almost-closed serge are, of course, in the same shade of the serge. The Model frill of lace is, of course, detachable. The hat on this model is of white satin, with a seal-brown velvet crown.

The velvet suit is also of serge, but in the case of dark navy blue. The kimono shoulder line is again used, but in the same shade of the serge. The hat is an inset sleeve. The cuts are deep and turned back. The points of the revers come slightly below the shoulder and extend to the high waist line above the crush belt of blue velvet. The skirt is perfectly plain, quite narrow, but with a slight flare at the back from a row of tucks at the waist line. The rather long and pointed vent is of white broadcloth silk. The same model could be most effectively copied in tobacco-brown serge with a vest of gold-colored satin. The hat of dark oxblood-blue velvet is trimmed with a wide row in dull silver. Needless to say, the combination is exquisite. For the same model in tobacco brown and gold the hat could be made of tobacco-brown velvet ornamented with a large row of dull gold.

The cutaway blouse with collar and cuffs of velvet and the two-layered skirt is very easily copied and is well suited to the tall girl, particularly if she wears a skirt that will detract from her height. The model is made of pruned-colored cloth and is effectively combined with a vest in oxblood blue on the collar and cuffs. The velvet on the collar and cuffs having a two-inch outer edge of the pruned-colored cloth. The sash belt is also of velvet in oxblood blue. The skirt is draped slightly from the waist line. The lower part of the skirt is draped slightly. The simple two-layered skirt has an overcast effect, the lower tier being caught up slightly in the back under the second tier to give the draped line.

The petty-colored beaver hat worn with the pruned-colored skirt is ornamental with a large bow of white moire silk. It has the popular turned-up rim.

The model with the double-breasted jacket of diagonal cut is a serviceable suit for the college girl. The material is dark brown chevron, a fabric that is strongly durable and practical. The collar, with its pointed revers, and the deep cuffs are made in one of the new weaves of velvet, ribbed in rust and blue and brown stripes. The first color is the color of the collar and cuffs. A string of amber beads supports the pale gold and heightens the effect. Turquoise-shell buttons carry out the color scheme still further. They follow the diagonal opening of the jacket, the waist line and three below. A row of white stitching ornaments the belted side of the coat. The two-layered skirt has a row of stitching about the upper tier, and is slightly draped on the left side. The skirt is also of tall style. The skirted velvet hat has a wide oxblood-brown crown, with two wings of oxblood blue at the back.

It will be noticed that while the lines of the suits for girls are similar to the models for older women, they are modified in an appropriate simplicity. There is no dragging. The models for the younger girl have quite a feature in tail making, and it will therefore not be surprising to secure hats that will harmonize with suit and shoes. The oxblood-brown crown is expected to find favor with the younger girls.

Along Simple and Effective Lines

A NOTED designer has launched recently a silk frock well worth a description. The dark blue robe of the soft dull silk was relieved by a duster in blue, green and rose clusters of roses that would fit into the circle of a toupée, each cluster being about eight inches from the skirt. These printed fabrics are going to play a decided part in the season's fashions.

The skirt was draped artistically but very simply, the broken lines being only at the back, where there was a pocket-like drop of the material. The front lines were straight, and at the right side front hung a sash reaching quite below the knees of dark blue satin. The tassel in blue, rose and green silk made the sash reach almost to the hem.

COLLARETTES FOR COOL DAYS

THE smartness of a collarette on a cool autumn day is one of the ideas that deserves adoption, and so many attractive styles in ruffs and scarves are now here that the throat can be protected successfully and easily. For the summer the collar ruff was a feature of neckwear which received consideration. Now the collarette, made of the finest fabrics, and having a wide feature of neckwear which received consideration. Now the collarette, made of the finest fabrics, and having a wide feature of neckwear which received consideration.

The double ruff of ostrich feathers is particularly becoming to a woman who has a long neck. A folded band of satin forms the central stock, to which is attached the fronds at the upper and the lower edge. At one side is a bow of ribbon, the longer loops at the bottom. This ruff is procurable in white, black and colors, and it is worn throughout the season.

For a quick adjustment that has all the charm of an intricate ornamentation, the ruff should be given the prize. It is to be a notable style feature for fall attractive fashion.

In making any of these ruffs, cut a straight stock foundation of heavy muslin. Place the folded satin, mulline or trimmed ribbon over it, and line the stock with soft satin or china silk after the plan of the feathered or plaited ruff. The ruff is made of two strips of ribbon, sewn in a satin seam. The black-and-white ruff is made of two strips of ribbon, sewn in a satin seam. CONCERNING HEALTH AND BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

Exercises in a Little Time

USE THIS thing nearest you as a rule that applies to the woman who is earnest in her desire to exercise her body without the apparatus and stings of a gymnasium. There is not a moment when you are not exercising your muscles, but few of us know how to make the most of our little time. The person who is hard pressed for time should learn to make an intelligent exercise of the different actions necessary when dressing, walking, carrying, talking, etc. There is a right and a wrong way to do every one of these things, and it is important that you learn the right way. Several general facts to be remembered are that the head should be held erect, the chest up, and that one performs whatever task is set before one with a vim that will lift one up because you have to, but because you want to. If you have the latter spirit in you, your duties will become a pleasure instead of a bore.

By exercising all parts of the body the blood is made to circulate faster because of the quick action of the muscles which are about to be described, all that clothing should be removed, and the room should be well ventilated and much thought should be given to the motions and the intelligence of these.

Unless a special effort is made we never stretch the muscles of our arms to their fullest extent. This is a great mistake, for when one strives to realize that one-quarter of the blood of the body is in the muscles one is impressed with the importance of keeping the blood in good circulation. Now without sufficient exercise the blood cannot be in a healthy state, and consequently the muscles are weak and shaky. For this reason I urge you to practice this exercise:

Sit erect on a chair and spread the feet far apart. Bend the arms, lock the fingers and then, keeping the body to the right and left. This exercise practised several times every day will give suppleness to the muscles of the body and will invigorate body control.

Another exercise which will stretch the muscles of the entire body is to stand with the heels together and bend at the waist line, and not at the knees. To pick up a pen, place twelve inches in front of the feet. Do not bend the fingers to pick up the pen, but keep the hands well stretched during the feet, and catch the pen between the ends of the fingers. Repeat five times. This movement will decrease the aches and develop the muscles of the leg.

For some reason exercises are better performed when working with a second person. When this person is not present, sit on the floor you can have her in the mirror if you will but stand before the mirror.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

must carefully explain to friends to help to her they should follow and not break the rules of the game.

The bride attendants should represent the dearest friends and relatives of the bride-elect. If the groom has a sister she is included in the number. The maid of honor is the bride's sister, the most intimate friend, or the groom's sister if she is well known to the bride.

When the number and names of the bride's attendants are decided, a list should be paid on each one and the honor verbally given. If any are in other towns, letters should be written stating clearly the date, the kind of wedding and any other arrangements that would naturally be expected.

A Splendid Balancing Post

For your bureau or chest when going through the various motions. Try this one, especially good for this purpose. Place an apple on the floor and stand before it and grasp the handle behind the back. Then bend forward, imbed the teeth in the apple or take a slice from it. Repeat several times. This is a good exercise for the neck and spine, and it will do this in the morning, because of the balancing of the body, but by

However, a solution as much boracic acid as can be applied on a flat-boat piece in a cup of warm water will, doubtless, relieve you, and, if necessary, repeat the application to the eye. If you have a henna stain on the eye, you can use a solution of boracic acid on the eye, and it will do this in the morning, because of the balancing of the body, but by normal and the superfluous flesh leaves them. I have in mind two young fellows, one very beautiful, the other plain, and both at 19 years of age. The main reason why the body is constantly throwing off perspiration is to eliminate waste. Perspiration regulates the temperature of the body and serves to cool and keep the body in a healthy condition. It is the result of various things, such as heat, muscular exertion, shocks and mental strains will cause one to perspire profusely. Following is the recipe you desire:

Gateway Of The City

The Gateway of the City is the Pulse of Its Being, the Strand Where All Men Pause Together Before They Plunge Into the Sea Ahead Whose Currents May Sweep Them So Far Apart - That is Why the Terminal Station is the Most Interesting Spot in the City of Atlanta.

The gray-haired lady shows in this group of pictures is Mrs. J. W. Payne, of the Travelers' Aid Association, a friend to all in need. Other figures are travelers going or coming, the train-caller, and that happiest of all beings, a negro porter.

BY WAHID S. GREENE.

THERE is a gateway to every city, a portal where the hot sun and jetam of its population nestle together as nowhere else within its borders.

On the west coast of the United States the rocky promontories of the Golden Gate jut a welcome above the clear blue of the Pacific. In the narrow strait between them meets that varied stream of life that traces sun-faded paths the picture city of the union.

On the east coast of the United States the Goddess of Liberty is the first sign to greet him who comes sailing across the Atlantic into the haven of New York harbor. And in its shadow the Four Hundred and the Four Million are as one.

The gateway of the city is the place of its being, the strand where all men pause together before they plunge into the seas ahead, whose currents may sweep them so far apart.

That is why the Terminal Station in the city of Atlanta. If you would see Atlanta's sundry folk, go to her shops and winter places where they segregate; if you would glimpse Atlanta's underworld, spend a busy Saturday night at the Decatur street police station. But if you would see them both, and with them every other class or clique which the city has, watch them all go by at the Terminal station.

WHERE THEY NEVER SLEEP.

For twenty-four hours, day and night, the Terminal station is never deserted. Of this one place can it be truly said, "We never sleep." Trains in the early morning, trains in the heat of noon, trains in the cool of the evening, trains in the bloom of midnight, unload their files of passengers and in turn are headed up with more. Rich and poor, young and old, travelers coming and going, sit together at the city's gateway.

Human nature in all its phases rests by a moving picture show free for him who stops and looks. There is the comedy, the tragedy, the farce.

For the humorous, pause a moment or two over there by the big window of information, a wide steel-trimmed window behind which two clerks stand, ready to answer questions on any topic under the sun. That is all they are paid to do, but they are worth their salt. It takes a job and an Edison photograph combined to hold down the job.

Rube Goldberg could get some news on "Polish Questions" within the minutes of service behind that window.

Mr. R. Beall, one of these men, answers questions from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to midnight. A sterner, the other, answers 'em from 11 in the morning until 1.

Besides being a walking encyclopedia for the thousands of people passing through the station, they have two telephones going constantly for a thousand more.

Of course, the usual run of queries is the same, time of arrival and departure of trains, requests for hotel and points of interest about the city. But there are others.

One day last week came a fellow who wanted to know who was the elected president of Mexico. The clerk was perplexed. But the man pointed to the sign: "Bureau of Information." He demanded what he was there for if not to answer such queries as these. The clerk's answer was brief but hardly printable.

POLISH QUESTIONS.

The man who was interested in the fortunes of the Mexican dynasty was followed by a long string of others.

"Can you tell me where I can get pacifier for my baby?"

"Would you mind wrapping up this cheese, please?"

"Where do I catch the train for Augusta?"

"Is it true that the police won't allow me to kiss my husband goodbye?"

"Say, did old Bill Wimple get beat on yesterday morning's commotion? What? Don't know him? Why, I'm a-salkin' 'bout old man Wimple, not young Bill. Sho' now, you knows old man Wimple, don't ye?"

"He Five Points a good host!"

"What d'ye mean, You don't sell soap?"

"Is that monument in front Jack Smith?"

"What time does the four-thirty for Aniston leave?"

"I want a marriage license, please. Just one."

"Would you mind telephoning this number and ask Mary if she gave the washerwoman those clothes in the back hall?"

"What time is it?"

"Polish as some of these questions may sound, they are not one whit exaggerated. Indeed, it would take the pen of half a dozen Goldbergs to do justice to the amazing ignorance displayed by some of the questioners."

This is comedy on one side of the building. On the other ottomids is tragedy. At this little desk sits readiness and compassion. Mrs. Payne has no distinct phase of sorrow or suffering to deal with. Her function is to help the helpless, regardless if they are helpless in much or little. And she does it.

There was a little girl last spring that came weeping. But before she left with Mrs. Payne's kisses still warm on her forehead, she was all smiles.

ONE LITTLE CHILD.

But one and all meet with quick mates whom she loved and who in turn loved her.

As the train pushed through the night and the fear of the city's fast approaching mystery began to grow on her, the blue eyes filled with tears and the red mouth began to droop. They found her huddled up in the big plush seat, a pitiful little figure, as the train pulled into Atlanta. Between sobs she told her story. Here indeed, was one of the helpless. But she found the helper, Mrs. Payne. It was Mrs. Payne who washed clear the tear-steeped eyes and brushed the grime and cinders from the little blue dress. It was Mrs. Payne who brought the sunshine through the clouds, made the wee girl comfortable through the night, and brought her safe home on a blithe Sabbath morning.

The friend of God's little children, Mrs. Payne, is the friend of many of His big ones as well. Many a girl, strange to the city, in despair at its cruelty, fascinated by its glitter, has paused with timid feet on the brink of the precipices of peril, and banded for the plunge. Perhaps it was Mrs. Payne's golden smile that stopped her, again it led before them. With the arena might be more material aid ministered by this woman of many resources, perhaps the touch of a hand and the sound of her gentle voice.

GIRL THAT DIDN'T GO BACK.

Such a one stood the other night, irresolute. Across the broad plaza in front of the station she looked out toward the city of shattered dreams. Behind her, back of the calls of the trainmen, the clang of bells, the shriek of whistles, and the roar and hiss of arriving and departing trains, back far back, of all this were the green fields and the blue sky of the country God remembered, once so despaired, now so wistfully yearned for.

Ahead the stretch of asphalt pavement gleamed blue in the sheen of the arc-light, the white Way blazed his stern invitation, the black sky was lurid with the shimmer of the stars, penniless, the black sky mouthed its muffled roar into the night.

What can a girl do, too proud to go back, sick with fear of the leering thing ahead she driven to its arms, penniless, desperate?

She did not see two coming to guard her, the man slouching along on the one side, calculating his chances of arrival at the psychological moment; the white-haired woman hesitating to offer succor where succor is not sought.

And the man and the reckless one arrived at the same time. The two of them and a third, the girl, vanished into the city's glare, where moths flutter into the flame and drop with seared wings.

And the white-haired woman watched her vanish with wistful face, one of the helpless that the Mother of the Station did not save.

"HELP-WANTED."

You wouldn't think to find an employment agency in a waiting room at a depot, would you? Yet the desk presided over by Mrs. Payne is one which often sends to work more applicants than any other in the city.

Not that Mrs. Payne makes a practice of giving everybody a job that asks for it, for she doesn't. Sometimes she sends one who seeks work to the Associated Charities, sometimes to the Y. W. C. A., or to any other medium through which work may be obtained.

Yet not infrequently does she also her applicant up and send him or her, as the case might be, direct to the place where work is to be had, at least, she made a ten-strike. Her protégé found not only work but a husband as well.

The woman stepped off the train at the Terminal with a child in her arms, without knowledge of anything except that she wanted work and must have it. She drifted through the crowds and finally came to shore, bewildered, at Mrs. Payne's desk.

And there she told her pitiful story. Deserted a year ago by her husband, the woman had struggled for existence in the squalid Carrolltown until the light had grown so fierce that she had to find sustenance for herself and child, or embrace death or something worse. She boarded the train for Atlanta, determined to get a job.

"GUARD OF THE GATEWAY."

Mrs. Payne told her, "They need hands." As the woman bent above the register of applicants to sign her name that afternoon, she happened to glance at the one three lines above. It was that of her husband. Nor is the story spoiled by the fact that she had him arrested when he reported for work two hours later.

WOMAN, GIRL, AND CHILD.

Woman, girl, and child, mothers and fathers, sons and daughters, all find life and death at the gateway of the city. Here they enter, hope burning high for the dreams that may reach fulfillment in the battle-sweat of the struggle. Here they stand before them. With the arena ahead where they may fight the good fight or fall at the crisis, they pause for an instant to draw a deep breath before setting foot on the course.

Here, too, they bid farewell. Sometimes they go with faces set forward to higher things, sometimes they go battered and defeated, sometimes they flee in stumbling haste, but one and all stop to look back before the gateway of the city fades behind them. Whether that look is tinged with triumph or regret, is for each of them to say. None can pause for long. The gateway of the city is guarded by a presence that whispers ever, "move on, move on."

He who comes leaps with eagerness into the course and he who goes spurs with swift feet the threshold.

The benches at midnight in the waiting room are dotted with those that bear them hence. The crowds are always hurrying, ever changing, waiting for a chance to pass.

A hurried through the waiting room, laugh and joke, tears and smiles mingled with the kiss of greeting and the kiss of farewell. They are sufficient unto themselves, each wrapped up in his own little world, each crowd is happy, happier than the white-haired man who was interested in the fortunes of the Mexican dynasty

EX CURIA

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

They decided to run through the documents in the case once more, reviewing everything from the beginning. So young Courtland, the attorney, unwrapped the pink tape from the bundle of papers.

He folded the letter, glancing across at Edgerton. "That was written two years ago today, you remember?—this foreclosure of his mortgage upon your gratitude, do you not?"

Edgerton glanced up. "If you're ready," he said. "I'm ready. First I want to ask you a question. Is there any woman who you have met, or whom you might fall in love with if you were free to do so?"

It would appear that, during the panic of 1854, my client came to your father's assistance at a time when your father's financial ruin was apparently only a question of hours.

"What the merry deuce did you say that cable for?" muttered Courtland under his breath. "I don't know—a debt of gratitude—he did not want it paid."

"I fancy so. I should like to have a chance to marry—for love." "But you never met the right one?" "I never met the right one."

Now, sir, if your assurance meant more than mere civility, you have an opportunity to erase the deep obligations that your father assumed.

In the grief and distress which overtook me when I was so suddenly summoned from the convent to bid my father good-bye, I did not, could not, realize the step I was asked to take.

"Well," said Courtland, "you told me that if you only knew how to do it you would give her the liberty God meant her to enjoy—liberty to love whom she loved."

"She looked into his face and held her hand lightly in his."

Within a month all is changed. Sir, it is and to me a relief to be lying here, watching his daughter.

Edgerton stared into the glowing coals. "I was to Paris." "Driving in the park." "Who is she?" "You can answer that question."

"I expect you to come to some such conclusion. Two years ago, without consulting your legal adviser you perpetrated a crime—for it is criminal to parody the highest sacrament to civilizing—marriage."

"You mean to stay, don't you?" he asked almost brusquely. "She turned a trifle, unprepared for such a question. But she answered Mr. Edgerton. 'You left me guarded by the honor of your own name. I have never wanted for anything. I have had the quiet and seclusion I desired. What more is there, Mr. Edgerton?'"

"I never have occupied the room on the second floor," he protested. "This house has been vacant since I took them for whom they intended?"

"She reddened. 'I bought the house after our wedding,' he hesitated, then, afterwards, from your letters, I fancied that you might prefer to remain abroad. So I thought nothing."

"I wonder if you are as embarrassed as I am?" she said, laughing. "I saw you, too," he replied quickly. "You rode a bay. I never imagined—"

"The silver shrine of a clock sound of his hands as he spoke of it. 'Impossible!' exclaimed Edgerton. Then with a laugh almost boyish he said: 'We're supposed to die at eight.'"

"I recognized you at once," he said. "The instant I entered this room. It was that which startled me—made me appear stupid."

"Yes, to be sure, to dispose of his command, always, as long as his life is to serve you."

"I'm sorry I can't remain and dine with you and Mr. Edgerton on this night before Christmas," added Courtland blandly, making for the door.

"You are so generous—so kindly," she said. "How can you endure to have a perfectly silly girl march in to your house?"

up his hands in amazement. Then he commented at length on the nerve of certain parties in getting his boss to pay out GOOD money for such a hare-brained venture!

On arriving O. D. Nash, a fellow prospector, who falls from California, introduced me to J. E. Barrett, the pioneer homesteader of Mr. Carthy. Nash and Barrett have been together at Dawson. We were experienced hunters and muck after a long journey!

Reports from these men and returned prospectors from the gold fields were more encouraging than those at Cordova, and there was a corresponding rise in spirits among my new arrivals.

Both babies taking the big prize this year are children of physicians. Marjorie Page, of Sheldon, Iowa, scoring 93.8. The highest mark yet reached by any Iowa baby and which breaks the record.

Friend Barrett's homestead is a mighty good place for a newcomer and especially for a prospector. He is as experienced a hunter and if there is anything wanted that he can't supply, it is still to be re-quired. This letter was written, and thanks to a twist drill he supplied it was able to get the patent screwed into Grub Stake's shoes after two hours' work.

of commerce and otherwise during that year, and at the same time gave the city "a blackeye," as it were.

"Realizing the great damage as the result of the presence of this mosquito, as well as others, the board of health adopted measures the following spring looking toward the eradication of all mosquitoes. Since that time under the immediate direction of the health officer, Dr.

"At a cost to the city of less than three thousand dollars annually the citizens are protected from the annoyances of mosquitoes and at the same time they are saved an expenditure of one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars annually for mosquito netting.

"There are only a few varieties of mosquitoes found in and about Atlanta. The most numerous of these is known as the common mosquito or Culex, and in addition to it there is occasionally found the yellow fever mosquito (or Stegomyia).

DR. CLAUDE SMITH IN HIS LABORATORY

POURING OIL INTO SEWER.

The health department of Atlanta has proved that mosquitoes are an unnecessary evil, if every individual will lend his aid the department, mosquitoes can be done away with completely.

Since 1906, the department has reduced the number of mosquitoes at least 90 per cent, and has added safety to the city's health and comfort. But the 10 per cent which remain are a menace to health.

yellow fever mosquito existed in Atlanta in small numbers.

This one variety of mosquito cost the city thousands and probably hundreds of thousands of dollars in loss

Kennedy, these measures have been carried out as far as possible within the city limits with the result that ninety per cent of the mosquitoes have been done away with.

and the malarial (or Anopheles) mosquito.

It is now generally well known that malaria or yellow fever cannot be contracted except through the bite of a mosquito which has previously bitten one suffering with fever. It does not require a number of mosquitoes, one mosquito can transmit the disease.

"There are still some people who believe that mosquitoes breed in damp weeds and vines. This erroneous idea gave considerable trouble to the health department in the beginning of the work of eradicating the mosquito. If there is no stagnant water about the neighborhood mosquitoes will not, as a rule, be found in that locality. One tin can in which rainwater has collected can raise enough mosquitoes to supply a whole neighborhood.

"As a rule mosquitoes do not travel very far, and wherever they appear about a house careful search should be made. One old tin pa-living buried in an obscure part of the back yard may be the cause of your hard feeling against your neighbor.

MOSQUITO CAN BE ERADICATED.

"In years gone by it was generally considered an impossibility to completely rid a community of mosquitoes and other disease carrying insects. Careful investigation has shown this view to be erroneous.

"Successful results, however, are dependent upon the thorough cooperation of all the people.

"If everyone in the city will make a careful inspection of his premises every two weeks and see that there is no stagnant water whatever, this will, in conjunction with the work done by the health department, insure the eradication of all breeding places within the city limits. Even without this thorough co-operation the number of mosquitoes in the city has been reduced fully ninety per cent already by the work of the health department.

"In addition to this co-operation by the citizens within the city limits, it is also necessary that the assistance of the people outside of the city together with the co-operation of the county officials be secured in order that we may have a complete eradication.

"A large part of the remaining ten per cent of our former mosquito pest is due to stagnant pools and eddies formed along the sides of streams flowing out of the city into the surrounding country. A small amount of work on the part of the county would go a long way toward completely ridding the city and its surroundings of all of our varieties of mosquitoes.

"The county officials have always shown a decided willingness to do everything possible toward improving health conditions both inside and outside of the city, and it is to be hoped that this small amount of work in the suburbs can be arranged.

"While the majority of our citizens are at present enjoying the pleasures of our delightful summer nights free from the annoying and pestering bite of the mosquito, yet thousands of our delightful summer nights denied these blessings. In addition to the rural and country, which will afford these remaining communities, it would also be of great commercial value to Atlanta to be able to publish to the world that the city is free from all mosquitoes, every kind; that malaria and other diseases resulting from mosquito bites can not be contracted in Atlanta.

"The commercial eyes of the country are turning to the south, and the greater advertisement of a southern city is the health of its people."

Malara is impossible, except through the bite of mosquitoes; yellow fever can be contracted in no other way.

No danger whatever from yellow fever exists here, but malaria is a frequent illness, and it is caused entirely by mosquitoes—a pest and a nuisance which can be eradicated by simple measures.

Stagnant water is practically the only breeding place for mosquitoes. Once, it was thought that swamp weeds and vines give rise to them. But this was a mistaken belief.

If a neighborhood is free from all stagnant water, it will be free from mosquitoes. If there are no stopped-up drain pipes, no cans in the back-yard to catch rainwater, mosquitoes will be an unknown evil.

DEPARTMENT'S ASSURANCE.

The city health department gives the assurance that if you and your neighbors will but prevent stagnant water from accumulating, your neighborhood will be free from mosquitoes.

Whom do these pests travel from one locality to another. For the most part they remain where they breed, but a backward breeze may carry them with mosquitoes contains the stagnant water which caused them.

"If you are bothered with mosquitoes," says Dr. Claude Smith, in your neighborhood and probably you will find cause of all the trouble—a tin can or a bucket filled with stagnant water, or maybe it is a drain pipe that has been stopped up."

In regard to the menace of the mosquito, he has written the following article for The Journal:

HEALTH CAMPAIGN.

Many people in Atlanta have forgotten that previous to 1906 the city was filled with swarms of mosquitoes throughout the summer months.

During the summer of 1905 cases of yellow fever appeared in New Orleans and Pensacola, and the public health department at Washington learned that Atlanta in the yellow fever because it was known that the

"No, I ain't never had no learning," says Lil, the imbecile mother of ten children. "I can count if you give me time. But I ain't never had nobody to keep fur me, an' I had to keer fur myself as best I could."

"I ain't so stupid as you'd think," pleads Bertha, a normal looking woman who cannot draw the outline of a square from a copy on the table.

"No, I never went to no school," says Ford, who at thirty has the mind of a child of nine and knows neither the date, the season nor the names of the months.

May, his childish "wife," tosses her head, "Dear me, that's nothing; half the world can't read and write."

Ford, vigorous and boyish looking, "married" May "by the squire," having scoured from that worthy for twenty-five cents a writin' of separation from two previous wives. Such writin's are considered handy to show in case of trouble. The magistrate knew, some better, that getting a divorce proves a perplexing formality when both parties to the contract have other husbands and wives. For instance: Ford's brother, Jim, a graduate of three state prisons, deserted his idiot wife to "marry" the imbecile Clarissa, who had three husbands. Later Jim traded Clarissa to Lem Oldman for $1.50 and quart of crude rum. Later still Jim secured another "wife," Louisa, by a similar trade with her "husband."

"I tell you I wasn't mad, I wasn't," says poor, simple Louisa, whose mind is but eight years old, although she has four living husbands. "You see, Pete worked right agin me, an' his folks done dirt on me carting every news, so I hain't got no more patience. Then, too, Jim is marm's sister's son."

Their children, strong in body but feeble in mind, survive by chance, not care. "No, my kids ain't baptized," confesses Stumpy Sal, the well-meaning, mentally eight-year-old mother of six, "but I had them insured. You can't never tell what'll come on children. I lost two in eight months. They cost me a harry of a lot of money. Gola's some, wasn't it? Lucky I know how yo' cure 'em of croup and asthma. How do I do it? I ain't telling you nothin'. First you stand the child up by a door and measure of the top of its head. Then dig a hole in the jam, put in some hair from the grower's crown, an' plug up the hole with bread dough. When the child grows taller than the pole it won't have no more asthma."

"Aunt Liv" was a little girl of twelve when her first baby was born. So was Imbecile Louisa. So, think of the awful city of it, were a score of women in the sand holes. Consider the intermarried Dixon-Osborn clan, 199 individuals, of whom thirteen are normal, 124 degenerate, twenty illegitimate and twenty-two criminal, living on the outskirts of a town of 100,000.

Imbecile Betie married defective Zacher and became the mother of nine feeble-minded children, twelve feeble-minded grandchildren, twenty-three feeble-minded great-grandchildren. Of these, one died in infancy, eight lived in public institutions, and one knows how many went to jail. One granddaughter, Margaret, bore eight illegitimate children.

The magistrate knew, some better, that getting a divorce proves a perplexing formality when both parties to the contract have other husbands and wives. For instance: Ford's brother, Jim, a graduate of three state prisons, deserted his idiot wife to "marry" the imbecile Clarissa, who had three husbands. Later Jim traded Clarissa to Lem Oldman for $1.50 and quart of crude rum. Later still Jim secured another "wife," Louisa, by a similar trade with her "husband."

"I tell you I wasn't mad, I wasn't," says poor, simple Louisa, whose mind is but eight years old, although she has four living husbands. "You see, Pete worked right agin me, an' his folks done dirt on me carting every news, so I hain't got no more patience. Then, too, Jim is marm's sister's son."

Their children, strong in body but feeble in mind, survive by chance, not care. "No, my kids ain't baptized," confesses Stumpy Sal, the well-meaning, mentally eight-year-old mother of six, "but I had them insured. You can't never tell what'll come on children. I lost two in eight months. They cost me a harry of a lot of money. Gola's some, wasn't it? Lucky I know how yo' cure 'em of croup and asthma. How do I do it? I ain't telling you nothin'. First you stand the child up by a door and measure of the top of its head. Then dig a hole in the jam, put in some hair from the grower's crown, an' plug up the hole with bread dough. When the child grows taller than the pole it won't have no more asthma."

"Aunt Liv" was a little girl of twelve when her first baby was born. So was Imbecile Louisa. So, think of the awful city of it, were a score of women in the sand holes. Consider the intermarried Dixon-Osborn clan, 199 individuals, of whom thirteen are normal, 124 degenerate, twenty illegitimate and twenty-two criminal, living on the outskirts of a town of 100,000.

Imbecile Betie married defective Zacher and became the mother of nine feeble-minded children, twelve feeble-minded grandchildren, twenty-three feeble-minded great-grandchildren. Of these, one died in infancy, eight lived in public institutions, and one knows how many went to jail. One granddaughter, Margaret, bore eight illegitimate children.

A typical Finney family. The father cannot read or write. The children are all feeble-minded. The mother had gone to town to beg when the photograph was made.

Age of Pictures

THESE are the last bathers of the season. September will soon have seen its best days, the weather will have taken on a mild tinge of winter, and swimming will have become a pleasure no longer to be enjoyed until the year has swung round again to summer. During the last few months, swimming has been a pastime in which the whole city has joined. Never before has Atlanta taken so heartily to any one sport. Piedmont, East Lake, Brookhaven and several private pools have been the means of pleasant outdoor recreation.

THE real musical gift is that which finds expression in the sweetest raptures and the oldest classic. And it is with equal skill that Miss Iva Paris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Paris, plays both. Her violin-mandolin, which was designed by her and was made at her order, is a "new" instrument which lends itself both to the new and the old music. It has a range of expression and a degree of sweetness that surprise and delight one. The neighborhood has come to look upon the violin-mandolin as partly its own.

The group of four at the bottom of the page are Chief John Jentzen and three of his guests at a barbecue recently given by him. Reading from left to right, the four are: Ex-Alderman W. A. Hancock, Mayor Woodward, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, and Chief Jentzen. Our officials have never attended a more enjoyable one. The meats were done to a turn, the stew was seasoned perfectly—not a grain too much or too little of pepper—but the finest sauce of all was Chief Jentzen's hospitality.

This summer has been one of many barbecues, and all will be remembered as a part of the city's most pleasing entertainments. Each has been a typical Georgia barbecue, and what can be better!

THE public schools of Atlanta opened on Monday, September 8, with an attendance of about 25,000 pupils. It is estimated that at least 1,500 more children are in attendance at the schools this year than were enrolled last year. Another estimate is that about $100,000 has been spent upon school books for these 25,000 pupils. The first few days of school were given over to organization; but now each student is hard at work, and has forgotten almost that such a thing as vacation ever existed.
